QUESTION OF NERVE.

That Is All Workingmen Need To Elect Bryan.

NO SAYS SENATOR F. J. CANNON.

Great Interest In the Return of Fred Dubois to the Senate—Way He Should Resigned.

"William J. Bryan is already positively assured of 180 electoral votes; 224 are necessary to a choice and he has an excellent chance for getting more than the requisite number."

So said Senator Frank J. Cannon to a News man today. In view of the fact that the Senator has just returned from the political midnight of the East, his statement will have an inspiring effect upon the silver force of the West. Continuing he said: "All that is required to make victory certain is for the workingmen to stand together. With Bryan they are contending against the greatest aggregation of influences that ever met a Presidential candidate. They are compelled to contend against with unique money, perfect organization and questionable methods. Every move known to the science of political warfare is being arrayed against the workingmen in their endeavor to beat down their strength. The people are being worked upon in every conceivable manner. The premises of men are not only being secured by the usual political arguments, but they are being stirred by religious and personal prejudices, by threats of low wages, lockouts and loss of employment.

"But," added the Senator, "they can win notwithstanding these odds if they will keep up their nerve. That is all they require. If they submit to the terrible pressure under which they are laboring and against which they have so successfully held out so far then we will suffer defeat. The verdict rests with the common people this year. It may be that enough of them can be cajoled and frightened into voting for and electing McKinley, but I don't think so."

AS TO FRED DUBOIS.

As to Senator Dubois, Senator Cannon in answer to questions said: "All through the East Democrats and Republicans favorable to silver unite in the sentiment and hope to see return to the United States Senate. They think it very essential to the great work of securing the rehabilitation of silver that he should succeed himself. Upon it will largely depend the fate and form of battle between the two money parties.

"It is generally regarded in the East that the great fight now on had its resurrection in the United States Senate when Dubois's unparalleled generalship together with the good work of his colleagues had sent the repeal of the Sherman purchasing clause far along. Had the soldiers been as true as the general the country would not have lost that act. People of the East cannot comprehend how any State or people when the economic cause for a home among them as to Lodge and Allen to or otherwise. All the McKinley talent, House energy and money that is being arrayed against him only serves to accentuate and develop this issue."

Senator Cannon will be a very busy man from now on until the campaign closes. He will make a number of speeches in Utah and after that will go to Wyoming and Idaho to perform yeoman's work in the campaign in those states. If Bryan electors are not chosen in both of those states it will not be his fault.
