DESERET EVENING NEWS.

TUESDAY, - - OCTOBER 31, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

The market bill in Judge Zane's court is drawing a big crowd.

In Judge Zane's department today matters have been of slow growth.

ATTORNEY D. D. DUFFY, of Provo, is a visitor to Salt Lake today. He is here on legal and other business.

COUNTY SECRETARY CHRIS. Cannon has informed from Chicago, and he intends to be there or in transit next July. The county seat will therefore not meet Monday, after several weeks' recess.

THE City Council will meet this evening. It is expected that something will at last be done to relieve the people of the surplus sewer water lately collected and withheld for so long.

A DELIVERY wagon collided with a buggy near the Children's Hospital on First South street this afternoon. As a result several spokes were broken and one of the wheels of the buggy.

THIS has been one of the broken days of the season in the county commissioners' office, and nobody knows better than Chairman Leonard and his fellow-sufferer. It is the last day for the payment of taxes.

THE county clerk has issued marriage licenses to D. T. Powell and Nellie Davis of Lake Point, and David J. Hutchinson and Jennie Hunter of Salt Lake; Jesse M. Wilcox and Matilda Anderson, both of Kamas, Summit county.

Court Jottings.

Judge Zane late yesterday afternoon took up the case of John C. Busby et al. vs. Clifford J. Lewis et al. The plaintiffs demanded judgment against defendants for $5000 on a bond executed by the defendants for the leasing of certain sheep from the plaintiffs, it being alleged that they wrongly failed to perform their portion of the contract. The defendants deny the allegations of the complaint, and set up a release of the bond. The case was proceeded with until the hour of adjournment, and was up again this morning.

The First National bank of Park City has commenced suit in the Third district court against Samuel H. Greenback to collect $1000 on a promissory note, secured by 250 shares in the Greenback Co., also against Helen M. Morgan and John Morgan to recover $2000 on a promissory note secured by 250 shares of the Greenback Co., and against Nicholas H. Greenback and William Greenback to recover $2000 on a promissory note secured by 250 shares of the Greenback Co.

The charge of perjury against Frank Grete has been dismissed on motion of the prosecution. A damage suit by Mr. Grete is now spoken about.

A Suicide.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 30.—The hotel St. George was the scene of a tragic and sensational suicide tonight when Samuel C. Cook, forty years old, a wealthy mine owner placed a pistol over his right ear and blew out his brains. For over a year past he has had a law suit dragging in court and yesterday the case was decided against him.

WORKING MEN MEET.

They Hold a Rousing Rally in the Theater Last Night.

SPEECHES, MUSIC AND MOTIONS.

Mayor Rankin Does Most Noble in Fine Language to Our Honest City.—Other Speakers.

That the workingmen of the city are thoroughly awaken as to the political situation and that they mentally express the Chicago idea, is evidenced by the big meeting they held in the Theater last night. Motions were hung along the stage and galleries as follows:

"The workingmen will pay no more tenements to work the Mogul mine."

"Has the liberal party ever keep their promises?"

"After Nov. 7 the workingmen will Rankin the matter of prosperity."

"Salt Lake work for Salt Lake workmen."

John G. Smith was elected as permanent chairman. Mr. Smith said that the workingmen were the hope, minds and cause of all parties. They were there for the purpose of showing to which side they were. It made no difference to him if a man's hands were gritty with dirt and grease as long as his heart was white. He had been told that some workingmen had no brains and that he was one of them. He was glad that he was not the same people who had no more gray matter in their brains. (Laughter.) He called upon them to meet the emergency on the Rankinesque "Salt Lake Work for Salt Lake Workmen." The party in power had successfully violated that pledge. He was president of the Workmen's Union and he knew that the City Council had proved to be tools made hydraulic, and were imposing an income production. The time was time to regard to everything the city has to buy.

MAYOR RANKIN.

Mayor Rankin said he was greatly pleased at the greeting given him. While he had not been a laboring man for many years he was in sympathy with them. There was a time, however, when he had felt the grip and the reaper of hard a day. The scantiest men of all nations are those who come from the peasantry. The greatest intrusions of all ages have sprung from the laboring classes. The most brilliant and able statesmen have come from them. Our greatest special institutions offered the same opportunities to the poor boy as to the one who was born in a mansion. As an exemplification of that fact it was only necessary to refer to Abraham Lincoln (applause) who had risen from a rail splitter to the chief executive of the nation. The place where workingmen could most effectually remedy evils and correct wrongs was at the ballot box.

The speaker then referred to the advice that he had given the Council in his first annual message but which had been ignored. Unless some kind of relief was afforded the next administration could not possibly meet its regular pay rolls. The people department must be kept up. To discontinue it would be to turn the city over to thugs and thieves and allow them to run riot. The fire department must be kept up at all hazards.

"Are you, fellow men," asked the speaker, "are you content with the administration now in power that went into office with $2,000,000 at their disposal and which has plunged the city into irretrievable ruin?" "No, no," cried the audience. Then came a solitary "yes," which was drowned by a terrible storm of "noes." After the noise had died away the Mayor said: "If the gentleman speaks for himself sentiment when he answers 'yes,' it does very little credit to his head." (Laughter and applause.) A city had been raised against the Citizens' movement to the effect that all improvements would be stopped if their ticket should be elected. Unfortunately the municipal treasury was absolutely without available funds, and cash could not be gotten without selling some of the city's realty and that was impossible. For instance the vacant lot near the City Hall which was really worth no less than $125,000 could not be disposed of now for $50,000. The city could not afford to make such sacrifices. The taxes might be increased to give work and carry out contemplated improvements. But that proposition was also bad. There was, however, another resource and one that would probably have to be resorted to providing an administration should get in power in which the taxpayers had no confidence in, and that would be to apply to Congress for power to sell bonds beyond the four per cent limit.

If the city had $300,000 in cash the work now in hand could be carried on to completion. He had nothing to say against Mr. Cushing, he appeared to be as he knew he was a capable, upright business man, but he represented a party that had wrecked the city, and that party should be rebuked at the polls on election day. (Tumultuous applause.) He never knew of a city that had been so thoroughly looted and wrecked as this one had been. In all the history of this country he had never heard of a town so much flagrant mismanagement. It was without a parallel. This community was as intelligent as any in this broad land, and he felt assured that it would not stubbly deal on election day.

PHILIP CORCORAN.

Mr. Corcoran said he had been absent from the Territory for the past four months. The city of Denver, he found, had just had an experience with municipal vampires, a very smooth one was over 1893.

J. E. TIMMONY.

Colonel Montgomery, whose name was on the program, was called for. He, however, was not present, and J. E. Timmony was called for. That gentleman stepped to the front and told the big audience before him and the meeting in the room holding the above night reminded him of a story of a countryman of his who voted an Anglian country. The friend saw a monumental tombstone on which was the following almost indispensable description: "I still live." The given field visited based those duty of the otherwise and free universality and "Brethren I was so cool in that before I would speak." The Gospel was the theme of the meeting—dead—what were contrary attempts they to make it appear that they still live.

FRANK STRINGER.

Mr. Frank Stringer and Cars were sons. He addressed the remarks to "Fellow workingmen and sons and sweethearts." His speech was a clear cut composite and thoroughly enjoyable and in which Judge Powers and his party were hoped about like a cyclone.

JAMES LOVIER.

was the next speaker. This gentleman mentioned himself with taking as appropriate story, contributed to suit the occasion. He was followed by George Hoyt and W. H. Hywater. The latter made one of the good humorous and rousing speeches of the evening.

The musical quartette sang a number of songs in good style while Hoyt had his fellow contract music.

The Gospel in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, SACRAMENTO, CAL., Oct. 29th, 1893.—Since our last communication there is quite an improvement in the work that is being done in this section of California. It seems as if Satan is becoming angry at the thought of Latter-day Saints coming into one of his strongholds and teaching the pure laws of heaven, and is beginning to pay some attention to its poor creatures by getting the preachers in the comfortable churches to go on a hot character. But that is just what we expect them to do, it seems people in our meetings to look at us with pensive, wonder and know we are here if our enemies look right quiet. There is a saying that "opposition is the life of truth," and we think that a certain amount of it stimulates the spirit of investigation into truth.

How natural it is for poor weak mortals to try to palm an inferior article without it to the public in the general. It is just as true as it is for Christians to transport or travelers. We had a fine example of it from a few days ago, when a minister of the so-called "Disorganized" church took the trouble to visit some people who had attended our meetings, and told them that there was very little difference between their church and ours, except in relation to polygamy. But when we investigate their structure what a different picture is presented to our view! They accept about the same position in relation to the true Church of Christ that a light bulb does to the genuine, and as a religious body we think they come properly under the head of "a strong delusion" that is to appear in the last days, "even shall deceive many."

Reasoned by some that we were not going to be able to attract any attention. But there seems to be a more encouraging prospect before us. We may not be able to baptize any, but we can teach them the law and leave our testimony with them as a witness against them.

We sometimes meet with persons who plead ignorance of having heard of our people, and then they will tell us that some of their relatives were most members of our Church. Our policy and our mother was born in the Church and our father was born a preacher to it, but they have given it up long ago. It seems that there are a great many apostates all over California, and they have used their influence against the Church quite extensively. But we can afford to meet that if they will only listen to our side of the story.

This seems to be an age of investigation. There is a Chinese religious class recently who discovered the game of people absenting themselves from church. He said it is because the ministers are in sympathy with the Chinese. The fact of the matter seems to be that they have gone to church and come away empty so many times that they won't try it any more. They have found that there is little to be gained from such a source. But we are very particular to know that we are not going to be able to cover their sins in our tenets for the purpose of making a display. We want to teach them the way to obtain forgiveness of sins and place them in possession of the treasure that carries their faithfulness, will exalt them in the Kingdom of Heaven. We explain the law as and come up the narrow and the Apostles, and prove conclusively that there is no other way to be an exaltation.

Our missionary school is studying the Book of Mormon closely, and the sisters are learning very rapidly. We hope to be able, by the help of the Lord, to lay a foundation for future missionary work in this country. Calls outside to attend the morning prayer by the two of the sisters, and we have hopes of our lives being made by raising over the old dump; so we will make the venture with the hope of finding a business. Your brother in the Gospel,

J. D. CUMMINGS.

In a fight a few days ago at Jackson, A. T., between two Mexicans, the victim fell on the head with a rock, causing a serious fracture of the skull, through which portions of the brain ooze. In dressing the wound the physicians were compelled to remove a large portion of the brain, and it was reported the case would die. After remaining unconscious three days he regained consciousness and is now able to walk around, but has lost the power of speech entirely, though he understands all that is said to him. The case puzzles the doctors.
