STARTING A NEW PAPER.

Salt Lake is Promised Another Evening Publication.

Who Are Said to Be Behind the Enterprise—Other Newspaper Notes.

March 16.

It is given out that Monday next will behold the issue of a new evening paper in Salt Lake City. The title of the book selected for public patronage is the Sun Star. The owners of the premises of the proposed new publication are not prepared for publication, but they are understood to be gentlemen who are using a wedding gift in lieu of a wedding suit in their enterprise. W. A. McKenzie is named in connection with the venture, and he is credited with the editorial staff includes A. A. Keyes.

The policy of the paper politically is said to be without any purpose of espousal of any of the political subjects of the day. The paper will be operated independently of the general press. The motto of the Sun Star is to be "Free News and Local Review." The first is an allusion to the passage of news as a matter of fact, the sixth indicates the determination of its proprietors to fill a journalistic position by which they will be powered. Both mottoes will be printed. Both mottoes are sufficient.

The Sun Star will not pretend to the extensive telegraph service now given up by the large dailies, but will contract itself with a brief resume of general events, and will pay special attention to local topics. In view of existing conditions, it will be a wise policy, and has the regular papers which cover a broader field of news. The issue of the paper will be single to the time the Sun Star is adjudged into the Elysian of the new family, a new one will be given on the editorial list, and in the first issue of the paper will be in the case the Gentlemen is considering the Constitution of the State. The Board is expected to completely adjudicate. How long The Sun Star (the paper) will continue to exist on this is a matter for the future to decide. It is does effective work it will be certainly and the greatest good to the greatest number.

Author Corrected.

Editor Deseret News:

It always hurts for persons who criticise others, and to make quotations, to be fair and honest, this is offensive to the adversary and to unprejudiced witnesses from the writer. Was this sentiment expressed in my mind, I desire to say that it is a subject of regret that your late correspondent, J. D. Nutting, did not see proper, when criticising me, to quote the entire sentence objected to, but instead gave merely a portion of it, leaving a false impression on the minds of the readers.

I do not propose now to say much on the question of polygamy, having said in my letter to Gov. Caldwell in the News so that I have to say, and I have said little against I would not have touching the topic.

Mr. Nutting says "Utah (myself) neither says, in substance, the Congress are under no obligation to regard the present or future wishes of their constituents."

The following is what I did say, and let the reader judge the difference effected by, he would have quoted it, in order that the reader could judge as to what my sentiments are on the question at issue:

> As your correspondent truthfully says there has been but little agitation of the question by people in this region, and when there does it is the exception of the Gentiles, or of those who are under the influence of the Gentiles, or of those who are not under any obligations to be influenced by what we have been said or written about the country.
>
> In the absence of the expression of public sentiment on public questions prior to the election of delegates to conventions, the delegates are unfettered and are the proper persons to frame their duties to their constituents regarding such questions.
>
> They are to be as stated, I think, that is the duty of members of conventions and of legislatures to properly represent their constituents, and to carry out their instructions whenever that is legally and constitutionally can; but there must be a wide margin of discretion left to the members of the people who are the representatives of this country.
>
> We have but a few days in this town, who are amply provided for. We have a wise and active Relief society presided over by Sister Emily Thompson which cares for the poor in the ward. We have also a Y. L. M. I. association, which is presided over by Sister Emily L. Thompson.
>
> It is not a little which shows we small pots the Bingham weigh bills and the merry laughter of the young single people upon our streets, but we have not disappeared now. The warm spring sun is visiting the green swards, the birds are singing among the willows and the happy honest boys' songs will be in unison with the lark's winged songsters in the field ere glade.
>
> To all appearances we will have plenty of water for irrigation this summer, as there now has fallen during the last month 10 inches of water.
>
> The mining claims are valued here, and the hope of the people is that they will have success in bringing the railroad through the town, which has been agitated during the last two or three years.
>
> A blue book has been opened here recently to which enrolling citizen members. The instalments for one year, and were forwarded by the Bros. of Charles A. Sharpe, in your city, to the Co. building in honor of the H. H. Jones house. The boys were each call for their instalments, while the town furnishes the money. The horses are doing well considering the short time they have possessed, and show some life in the spring. A good deal of interest exists. We will hear from us on the next Fourth of July.

The imprisonment part of the sentence was suspended during good behavior, and the judge expressed the opinion that if she can satisfy some property to a fund that the district attorney would come into court and move that judgment so far as the imprisonment was concerned, should be set aside.
