THAT POLE TROUBLE.

The City Railway Company's Protest Against Removal.

The Salt Lake City Railway company has submitted a petition to the City Council protesting against the resolution ordering the removal of its poles and feed wires from Second East street, to which it says:

"The recommendation that your petitioner be required to remove its electrical supply wires extending from its power station along Second East street to Fifth South street ought not to be passed. This proposed action is urged on behalf of the telephone company, upon the ground that these wires interfere with the telephone lines extending along Second East street and connecting with Murray and Sandy.

"Before the removal of the telephone lines from State street to Second East street your petitioner, in order to further the electricity for the operation of its railway lines upon Second South, Third South and Fifth South streets, pursuant to authority of ordinances, erected its wires complained of. These supply wires are necessary if the railroad lines on the last named streets are operated and are an essential part of the system of railroad of your petitioner. They affect the most direct connection by which a supply of electricity can be furnished. If they are removed from Second South street, your petitioner would be compelled to set up two large wires, extending from its power station on Second South street, along First South street to State, and thence down State to Fifth South street, a distance of seven blocks. This would be a much greater burden upon the streets than the present simple and direct method of connection. If the present supply wires on Second East street interfere to any extent with the telephone lines on that street, the same wires when erected upon First South and State streets would parallel the same telephone lines and many others, and create a great disturbance in the telephone system.

"The fact is, and it could be readily ascertained by the telephone company if it had in its service a competent electrician, that the supply wires on Second East do not crowd the telephone wires which exists in the telephone line extending to Murray and Sandy. These telephone lines within the city have a return metallic circuit, so that there can be no communication of electricity from the railroad supply wire. The two sets of wires are more than ten feet apart, and all the lowering of the wires of the Utah Telephone Exchange, in the various contests between the telephone companies and electric railroad companies, consisted in appreciable disturbance of the country telephone between Fifth street line and telephone lines that distance east.

"The true cause of the disturbance in the telephone lines complained of could in the fact that the telephone lines connecting with Murray and Sandy are grounded south of the city, and beyond the place of grounding, the electric railway system of the Salt Lake Rapid Transit company is being operated. The current of electricity goes through the rails of that company to its fuses in Forest Dale and Calder's Park into the earth and comes in their return to the central power station of that company within the city, directly across the place of crossing of the telephone line. Experiments would show that when the company is not operating its lines, the disturbance on the telephone lines ceased to would not exist and it would be advisable to your honorable body that if the supply wires paralleling telephone lines on Second South and a few blocks materially interfere with the operation of the telephone, that the wires be placed along First South and Main streets, under similar conditions, would produce similar results.

"Hence the charge proposed cannot benefit the telephone company, but would cause an extra burden upon the said municipal streets in the city, and be a direct and material injury to your petitioner, not only in the expense of making the change, but in carrying it out in such a manner as to cause the least possible interruption of the business of your petitioner, and the public generally.

"It is well understood that the power of a given current of electricity decreases in direct proportion as the distance the current is carried increases. Your petitioner therefore asks your honorable body not to pass the proposed resolution, or at least to suspend action until your petitioner has an opportunity of being heard in support of the statements herein contained."

The Wool Congress.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 17, 1892.

DEAR SIR—The governor of New Mexico, in accordance with petitions and recommendations received from various sources, and in consideration of the great importance of wool production to a great number of the fellow citizens" has issued his proclamation calling an interstate wool congress, to be held at Albuquerque, on the 5th and 6th days of September, etc., for the "purpose of discussing questions which involve the extent, value, increase and prosperity of the sheep and wool interests of the States and Territories west of the Mississippi," and authorizes the delegates to be appointed by the governor.

The submission of arrangements would seriously impede that you appoint the delegates from your State as soon as may be as possible and report the names of the gentlemen so appointed to the undersigned. It is also proposed that two representatives from Congress be appointed to attend. The congress is to be held during the week of the New Mexico Territorial Fair at Albuquerque and the various railway lines will carry delegates at a greatly reduced rate of fare.

Very respectfully,
W. A. BROCK,
Secretary of Committee.

The delegates will be appointed by the Governor in a few days.

MCDONELL AND HILL FREED.

THEY SUED THE DIRECTOR OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND IN 1872.

A cable dispatch from London announces that the English Government has released from prison Edward Nayes Hill, the son and Edward Nayes Hill, the son and brothers in the forgeries in 1872 by which the Bank of England was swindled out of half a million pounds sterling, on conditions that they should leave the country.

It is said that the two men are now on their way to America. Geo. Bidwell and Edward Nayes Hill were sentenced in 1873 to life imprisonment.

It was in 1872 that Geo. Bidwell discovered a way in which the bank of England could easily be swindled. He found it was customary for the bank to allow customers to draw against bills of exchange drawn by responsible firms in America without investigating into the genuineness of the bills.

He opened an account in the western branch of the Bank of England in the name of Harris & Co. The firm of Harris, the manager, that Hill is A. He then proceeded to engage in the building of Pullman sleeping cars. He then procured some bills of exchange from a manner in great and having drawn, including the Bidwell's own, after making forty copies of them, passed them through the bank and drew out the money.

After the firm had thus established good credit it began to pass forged bills made payable to F. A. Walton. After the bills were indorsed by Walton, in this way the paper then go short time before it failed to take one of the bills and to the discovery of the fraud.

All the money obtained in forgeries were finally recovered, mortgaged and mortgaged to the improvement.

George Bidwell was released from Woking prison on order of leave in 1887 on the representation by the governor, Dr. Carter, that he would otherwise die in a year or two.

Henrietta C. Hill, his sister, was unsparing in her efforts to secure the release of the miscreants. She and her brother enlisted the sympathy of a number of prominent persons in the country and in England, and finally their arguments prevailed upon Home Secretary Matthews to release Austin Bidwell on February 15, 1890. On September 18, 1891, the home secretary had commuted his sentence to twenty years.

Austin Bidwell's serving the life of a convict was the chief cause of his release.

Since then both Bidwells and Dale sister have worked steadily in Chicago for the release of McDonell and Hill.

Most of the stolen money was recovered by the police in the different places where it had been left for safe keeping, but it is generally acknowledged that they were stolen to that about $30,000.

FORTY AS MEDICINE.

A TEST BY WHICH THE VARIOUS QUALITIES MAY BE DISCOVERED.

A noted medical authority of Philadelphia gives the following test of the alcohol action of various drinks. He says, however, that it is quite true that a strict medical effect, but operates in exactly the same way as it does in the system. Under the category of fermented drinks, he includes ales, porters, stouts, lager, cider, cider and perry and mead. In the list of distilled drinks he includes whisky, brandy, gin, rum, cordials, liqueurs, cordials, bitters, absinthe, pulque, mezcal, and tequila. In the list of fruits and berries are included grapes, pears, strawberries, whortleberries, currants and gooseberries. Starchy substances include white potatoes, sweet potatoes and arrowroot, and finally the mixtures are refrigerants, and tonics, wines and spirits are refrigerants and stimulants at once.

Taken in the early morning, on an empty stomach, the effect of alcohol is very medicinally on a large scale, sometimes something to a purgative, and may generally be relied on.

Fermentations are very refrigerant and relieve heated throat and urine. The dark of the red in the form of a decoction, is a good antiseptic, especially mixtures to tapeworm. Fermented spirits from extreme potatoes is bile and small amounts. Strawberries and lemons mostly applied are of more service in the removal of tartar from the teeth.

Apples are corrective useful in minors. They immediately remove the morning dose to vomiting. Rotty ale is certainly hydrocyanic acid, and are useful in simple cough, but they frequently produce a sort of urticaria or nettle rash. The permanent effect of bitter is palatable when dyed, but the green dyed is highly astringent, containing much tannic acid, and is in diarrhoea and incipient dysentery.

The oil of the cucumber has been recommended as a substitute for cod liver oil, and is much used in Germany for pulmonary complaints. Very agreeable to fever patients in the form of a drink. Dutch mixtures are astringent, and not very palatable. Grapes and raisins are nutritious and demulcent, and very grateful to the sick chamber. Sweet and sour oranges have been much lauded for the treatment of congestions of the liver and stomach, enlarged spleen, scrofula, intermittents, etc. Nothing is allowed but water and lemon and several pounds of grapes per diem. Quince seeds are demulcent and astringent; boiled in water they make an excellent soothing and sedative lotion in inflammatory diseases of the eyes and ears.

The test of intellectual power is ability to talk of something else than terrestrial affairs.

Perhaps additional restrictions on the importation may be needed. But there was a time when the island of Cuba had a golden egg for him every day.

Of negroes and persons with negro blood in their veins there are at present in the United States 7,500,000. This constitutes 14 per cent of the population, in the northern States 2 per cent. But the proportion of colored persons in the northern states is increasing, because some of the southern blacks are migrating northward.

Some people might, they really ought, to take a vacation this summer. One is the person who is always grumbling and growling, another is he who forgets that this expression begins to rhyme. The Boston Globe expresses such another to his list. He recommends the fault-finding man to get a little rain, and the worrying man to get a little sun, and the wandering man to get a little rest. Facts too are the sinners who offend in make it long to stay at the Pacific. We for another from whom all the world would like a rest is the person who tells us how to run the newspapers when he is farthest away from them and who allows them to run themselves with out their editorial help. Perhaps, however, we have been doing these descriptions long for twenty years, and their complaints are just the same as they always were. Let up, and go on a vacation.

There is a rail from the Chinese wall which is said to be nearly completed, and will reach and pass three cities south. After a series of gorges to have had an opened from the east, the Chinese will begin to be on the market of various Russian lines, by which purchases it with a reduction on Russian freight.

The Grand Lodge Knights of Honor, following the lead from a book in the Colorado city last year will be engaged during by an investigator system. The lake gradually advanced, further west and north, and where it was a channel as low as twenty feet from the surface of the lake itself, has filled up. The ground, which being now a bed of mineral and coal, has to be dredged, and will a harbor in plenty of water. There will be no more boats in the lake. The legislature that is now in session in Colorado will be called upon to pass a law for the protection of the lake and to the discovery of the fraud.

All the money obtained in Dorchester were finally recovered, mortgaged and mortgaged to the improvement.
