CAN UTAH'S WOMEN VOTE?

The Question Argued Before Judge Smith Today.

Mr. C. S. Varian Opens the Legal Battle in the Negative—Judge Sutherland Replies.

Special Telegram to the News.

OGDEN, Utah, Aug. 9.—The test case to decide the right of women to vote came on this afternoon before Judge Smith in the Fourth district court on application for a writ of mandamus by Mrs. Anderson, asking that D. Jay Rogers, Registrar C. D. Tyree be commanded to register her as a voter. The case came to argument upon the agreed state of facts as presented to the officials by the writ, the case being opened by Mr. Varian for the defendant in the alternative order to show cause why the defendant should not register the plaintiff as a voter. The attorneys for the plaintiff were Mr. H. P. Henderson, R. H. Smith and H. P. Henderson, Jr., Wright & J. L. Bagley, J. S. Rouston, Judge Judd, F. S. Richards, Judge Zabriskie and Judge Hiles. While the defendant was represented by Mr. Varian, Jesse M. Zane, Arthur J. S. Williams, Jesse M. Zane, Arthur J. S. Williams and C. S. Varian. Mr. Varian argued against the right of women to vote on the Constitution and for the officials on the ground that such power could only emanate from the proposed Constitution or from the enabling act, and that neither gave the right. To say that the Constitution could give the right would be a subversion of the principle of representation for the voters of the Territory delegated to the Constitutional Convention only the right to frame a Constitution to be submitted to them for approval or rejection and not to be submitted to any other people than the people themselves, the people who authorized the drafting of the new Territorial government and not to any other people, women, aliens or the people of any other state or territory. The enabling act did not give the right to women to vote, but only to the voters of the Territory and to superseded them, yet all male citizens of the age of twenty-one years who had been residents of Utah for one year.

Judge Sutherland followed for the defendant, claiming that as the Constitution was to be the law governing the new officers, they being elected under it and serving under it, the new Constitution must be followed as regards the election of the new officers if for no other purpose. He contended that women had the right to vote both from the Constitution and the enabling act and in support of his position compared sections of the two documents showing that if they were consistent, there could be no other meaning. Before the conclusion of Judge Sutherland's argument court took a recess for dinner until 7 o'clock.

IT ANNOYED HIM.

He Came From the West and Was Pained That New Yorkers Knew It.

His coat was a trifle too long and his trousers so tight as to widen at the knee to strictly and exactly fashionable; but, aside from these nice discriminations, he was dressed according to the dictates of the fashion autocrats.

We took the "L" together at Park place, and I noticed a puzzled expression, half amusement, half annoyance, on his face. At Thirty-third street he surrendered his seat to an elderly woman and stood in the aisle in front of where I sat. It was evident that he was anxious to tell some one of the subjects on his mind, so I was not surprised when he caught my eye and opened the conversation.

"Just now," he said, "as I was hurrying to the station, a man caught hold of my arm and stopped me. He was a respectable looking fellow, well clothed, and wore a grayish beard parted in the middle.

"'I've been on a drunk,' the man said to me, 'and I am entirely up. I live in Hoboken, and I want to get home. I haven't a cent and want a quarter.'

"I looked him over carefully," continued my chance acquaintance, "concluded he was telling the truth and gave him the money. As I hurried on, he shouted after me:

"'I know you were from the west, and I know you would give me the money. They are white on that.'

"Now, what I want to know," said my acquaintance, "is how did he know I was from the west? It's true, but how did he know it? Would you know it? Am I marked? Have I anything on me to tell others that I am a westerner?"

"Now that I know of," I assured him, "unless it be such little things as going your seat on to ladies. That generally indicates that a man is not a native New Yorker."

I got out at Fifteenth street and left him with the same puzzled expression as if the question had been only half answered.—New York Journal.

A few days ago a party of young men left San Bernardino, Cal., for the mountains for the purpose of recreation. Among them was Will H. Clarke, son of statesman Horace Clarke. The party was camped a few miles from Bear creek. Saturday afternoon Clarke, in company with a cousin by the name of Oakley, started for Bear lake. Oakley went by wagon, while Clarke said he would take a short cut over the stream where Bear lake empties into Santa Ana river. Oakley having reached the camp of Bear creek, waited a while, but Clarke did not appear. Uneasy for his friends, who immediately set out in search of him. Arriving at the place where Clarke was to have crossed it was found that he had been on the log, and it had turned with his weight, the running could be found of the body. Not finding the body it was thought that Clarke had crossed the stream and had made for some other camp, but investigation showed to the contrary. All day Sunday was spent in search. Monday it was suggested that a dam be built and Santa Ana river diverted from its channel. This was done, and at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the body of Clarke was found down the stream about forty feet from the log over which he had attempted to walk.

Robert P. Jones, an employe in the San Francisco slate quarry, was drowned in the American river at Chili Bar Tuesday. The men at the quarry, after completing the day's work, went into the river to bathe, and Jones, who could not swim, accidentally got beyond his depth, and was swept into the rapids.
