Goddard, members of the Choral now in New York, instructing them to select a suitable floral offering and send it with the regrets of the society. The society also voted to unite with the Tabernacle choir and the Utah county choir to render the same book of music here in a grand concert at the Tabernacle on the night of Oct. 21, that will be given at the dedication of the World's Fair at Chicago on that day. The combined chorus will number 1,000. Each chorus will sing one complete number, and the three combined will sing three numbers. In addition to this chorus of 1,000, there will be a children's chorus of 700, making a total of 1,700 voices.

The Choral society will continue its regular Monday night rehearsals on the "Night of Asia," but beginning on Tuesday, Oct. 4, the Utah county society and Tabernacle choir will hold joint rehearsals each Tuesday night on the World's Fair music.

IT WILL AFFECT GALLEAZZI.

The Intermountain Kennel Club Will Ask for a Reduction of the Dog Tax.

There was a meeting of the Intermountain Kennel Club last evening at the Delmonico on Second South street. J. D. Rigney occupied the chair, D. T. Nickson was elected vice-president and H. J. Grimes secretary.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, We believe that the present city ordinance regulating the license of dogs and the collecting thereof is unjust and burdensome to the people of this city, therefore be it

Resolved, By the Intermountain Kennel Club of Utah, First—That the license tax on each dog should be reduced to $2 provided the same shall be substantially paid at the office of the recorder within thirty days after commencing delinquent.

Second—That all licenses or taxes on dogs shall become due on the first day of January of each year, and unless the same are substantially paid at the office of the city recorder or collector prior to February first of each year a penalty of $1 shall attach and all dogs unlicensed or on which the tax has not been paid after February 1st may be impounded and held by the city marshal or his assistants, killing and keeping the same, notwithstanding, and that all dogs shall be held subject to redemption by the owner for at least three days or seventy-two hours, after which they may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of by the city.

Third—That any capital holder of dogs may between the first day of January or February of each year, upon application to the recorder or collector and upon the payment of $5, procure a license or tax receipt allowing all the dogs owned and kept by such person or kennel, for breeding purposes, provided that no such license can be taken out or issued after the said 1st day of February in any year, but that if so at a date each individual dog shall be subject to the license or tax and penalty as herein before provided.

Fourth—That no puppy under six months of age shall be subject to license or tax, and no amount paid shall be the unexpired time of any existing license may be applied in payment of any license or tax taken out or paid.

Parowan Stake Conference.

The quarterly conference of this Stake was held in the Cedar City tabernacle September 10th and 11th, 1892. Present on the stand were Apostles F. Lyman and Anthon H. Lund; Patriarch James Dalley, Presidents Udall T. Jones, Morgan Richards, Jr., and Francis Webster, members of the High Council and Bishops from every ward in the Stake, also Elder Greenwood, of Millard Stake.

Conference opened at 10 a. m. on the 10th, President Udall T. Jones presiding. After the customary opening exercises President Jones made some remarks and reported briefly the condition of the Stake.

Among those who addressed the conference, besides our visiting brethren and Stake Presidency, were Thomas J. Jones, Charles H. Lyman, John Mableton, John R. Wilkins, James Shipley, Jr., and John J. G. Webster, the four last named having just returned from missions to Great Britain. Many subjects were treated upon by the speakers, and much valuable instruction of a spiritual and temporal character was imparted.

The teachings and testimonies of Apostles Lyman and Lund were an interesting feature of our conference, and was greatly enjoyed by those in attendance.

The usual Priesthood meeting was held and business of the Stake transacted.

The general and local authorities were presented and unanimously sustained, as also the list of some missionaries. The meetings were well attended, and a good spirit prevailed.

Conference adjourned for three months to meet in Parowan.

Novel Telephone Receiver.

The public has very little idea of the amount of "leakage" that goes on in the transmission of telegraph messages. An operator may be merrily lounging in the vicinity of a way station or railway office with his hands in his coat pockets, one hand being busy in taking down with a short pencil on a pad information of the utmost importance which the busy sounder is taking off, and which may be read to the serious detriment of the interests of the sender.

With a view to gauge the extent to which such eavesdropping could be carried an expert operator was employed a short time ago to call at some of the Wall street brokers' offices, as well as some of the city hotels of New York. Of some dozen offices he visited he was able in this way to obtain information more or less important from every one, and in the hotels it was found perfectly easy to take any and every message.

By way of remedying this very serious drawback in certain classes of telegraphic work a "secret" telegraph receiver has been devised. This instrument is fitted with a special resonator of aluminum of extreme sensitiveness. Although the instrument as generally constructed may be kept so adjusted that no movement of the armatures can be detected with the naked eye, and that no sounds can be heard without holding the ear close to the instrument, this resonator even under such conditions transmits the message to a receiving tube from which the signals can be easily read.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Big Trees of Puget Sound.

The last of the great forests of the United States are those of the Pacific coast, and the largest of the trees of them is what is known as the Puget sound forest, extending from the British Columbia line on the north to the Columbia river on the south, and from the Cascade mountains on the east to the Pacific ocean. Where the forests are at all dense the average amount per square mile is greater than in any other forest in the world. This is largely due to the extreme humidity of the atmosphere and the character of the soil, which is one of the richest anywhere found.

At the foot of Mount Tacoma there are trees that by actual measurement by one of the best surveyors on the coast, Professor Fred G. Plummer, have been found to be 290 feet high. Professor Charles F. Sargent, who prepared many of the articles on the forest trees of America for the census of 1880, stated that the Douglas fir had a trunk from 8.93 to 9.60 feet in diameter and 200 feet to 12 feet in diameter.

The red cedar is of still larger growth and is often found to exceed 20 feet in diameter, and on Gray's harbor, is a red cedar apparently sound all through that measures 36 feet in diameter at the butt, two feet from the ground, and 32 feet in diameter at six feet from the ground. This is of course exceptional, but cedars 20 feet in diameter or 63 feet in circumference are very frequently met with in the state.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The City of Babylon.

According to Herodotus, the ancient city of Babylon stood on a broad level plain and was an exact square of fourteen miles each way, making the entire circuit of the city six miles. It was protected both by a wall and a moat, the latter being broad and deep and kept constantly filled with water. But the wall was the wonder of wonders, being 350 feet in width and an even 350 feet in height. This massive barrier was provided with 100 gates, all of solid brass, the lintels and side pieces being in brass. Cross walls ran along the banks of the Euphrates, each provided with twenty brass gates, which corresponded to the number of streets running in each direction from the river.

The most remarkable edifice inside the wall was the Temple of Bel, a pyramid of eight square stadia. On the summit of this pyramid stood a pure gold image of Bel forty feet high, two other smaller figures of the same precious metal and a golden table 40 feet long and 12 feet wide. This wonderful city first came upon

...ously into the history of the world in the year 747 B. C., but since the time of Alexander the Great it has been a ruin, the site having at one time been entirely lost.—St. Louis Republic.

Hole in His Father's House.

A young lad was acting as a turf boy in his father's garage when a sudden an explosion occurred and something struck him in the eye, causing a wound which necessitated the removal of the eye. The only explanation seems to be that a cartridge had been dropped on the turf by some sportsman, but from troubles as yet out of sight and hearing exploded when the dried turf was laid on the fire.—London Tit Bits.

Historical Paintings.

The famous Tintoretto is a painting of the Israelites gathering manna, shower down upon with gone, and a better day Neapolitan artist has depicted the holy family fleeing into Egypt, in their flight into Egypt, in a magnificently ornamented barge.—Detroit Free Press.

LARGELY ARTIFICIAL.

The Original Parties of Blue, However, Proprietor Is Cheerfulness.

The clerks of the hotel say that the most cheerful man that ever could there was M. Dowling of Minneapolis, and he had $60 worth of wooden legs and wooden arms. He wore them all himself. Without them he would not, he all spread-eagles, have made much of a showing.

He spoke his high cork legs, low cover, and with his robe spread on with the same material, he would leave into the hotel like a ray of light on a dark, cloudy day. He was the victim of one of the electric blizzards of Minnesota. When he was once and he was gathered up from the snow it was difficult to tell what pieces would withstand the attrocious of the gravedigger.

Some of him survived, however, and then he set about to see what he could do. Both legs were off close to the body. His left forearm was gone, and all he had remaining was the smallest stump of the thumb on the right hand. He practiced for awhile walking with the heavy leathern boots which everybody has seen in Jeff's rack wear. Finally he raised enough money to buy cork extremities.

Mr. Downing like a joke, and when stopped on the street here and importuned for alms by men with one leg or arm, or both legs or arms, would immediately take these to restaurants and load them up with a big dinner, all the time listening to their tale of misfortune with the greatest interest.

When it was all over his face wound upon him, and much to their astonishment he would begin shouting his legs and arms, exposing the hypocritical material of which they were made. At the same time he would tell how glad he would be to if he had anyone well equipped with legs and arms as they were. He would just fall them to leave up, take heart and begin to learn something useful to support themselves.

Mr. Dowling cannot use a cane because he cannot hold one. Therefore without aid he is forced to walk in his way. He has learned to do it so well that he can mount any sidehilled mule, however willful he may be, who will hop while he rides. He has learned to grasp a pen or pencil with the small stump of a thumb, and he writes a beautiful hand very rapidly.—San Francisco Examiner.

The Minnesota's Health.

When the polers were built the other season or two the ice of the Mississippi river were not closed. On the contrary, they are all there, just as many of them as there have ever been in the historic period. The polers were placed in the South pass when it was only eight feet deep. Now it seems than thirty feet deep, giving free passage to the largest class of ships. Southwest pass which was formerly the chief channel of navigation and had to be dredged daily to secure an extreme depth of eighteen or nineteen feet, is now entirely neglected as a route for commerce, for as an outlet for the river water it is doing its duty, as are all the other passes.—New Orleans Picayune.

How Wonders Originated.

Winkle's grandmamma had tried to explain to her about the letters that were vowels, and had told her that each word must have one or more of them in it. Later, the young lady wished to inform her papa upon the important subject. "Papa," she said, "do reason their are called vowels is because there has to be one in every word—and they were they will get there."—New York Tribune.

A Hasty Feeling.

Every one thinks he must have looked frightfully green when he was young and flatters himself that he looks very wise now.—Atchison Globe.
