orests and Their Folk to years the bunches were beginning to show purple beneath the growing sun, there was set a large dogkennel which bore on its front in gold letters the legend, "Beware the Dog." Before I had time to translate this the dog made his appearance.

Now I have been rather a connoisseur of dogs in my lifetime, and I am ready to affirm without reservation that the canine specimen that issued forth from that incoming doghouse was the most or ugliest creature that I have ever set eyes. He was so heavily in his attitude and so [illegible] to put company when finally I [illegible] all eyes fully into the point [illegible] that I was obliged to resort to [illegible] measures to ascertain his [illegible] and to [illegible] sounds which roam his evident intent to [illegible] me.
