"INTERNATIONAL VAUDEVILLES."

Death of a Prominent Mining Man.—An Amusing Incident.—Other Items.

Los Angeles Humane Society officers are summoned the other day to kill a horse which had broken its leg. The only weapon handy was a boy's "special rifle" which was borrowed and four bullets were fired into the beast's skull, but the horse still lived. As we saw the officers shot and the animal was put out of its misery.

The death is announced at London, England, of Edward N. Robinson, a prominent mining man of the Pacific Coast. He was carried off suddenly by an attack of pneumonia, following a severe cold contracted on his last voyage across the Atlantic. He was a brother of the late Lester L. Robinson, the millionaire moneyed, with whom he was associated in many enterprises of magnitude in different portions of the state. He was 52 years of age.

Imperial Curtis, says the Stockton (Calif.) Journal, has quarantined a band of 1,000 sheep that passed the river from Contra Costa county last week which are diseased. It seems that the owners have paid no attention to the requirements of the law in bringing diseased sheep into the county and for the protection of Lodgo county stockowners, they should be made to understand that violation of the law will not be permitted in this county.

The issue of $71,000,000 city bonds has not yet been sold, says the Boise (Idaho) Statesman. Several bids have been received, but they were unsatisfactory. A Los Angeles and a New York firm bid a little above par, but they asked extensive commissions. A Philadelphia broker bid 101 cents, but the law prohibits the selling of bonds below par. The city is now negotiating with a New York broker represented by W. F. Remsen, of this city, who offers par and the only ordinary expenses for handling them. The bonds are deposited in the back vaults, and will be sent to the New York broker as soon as he deposits $71,000 payable to this city.

An amusing incident is recorded from Sauvie's Island, Or., where a herd of cows were recently delivered. In the herd was a cow which had no horns. She always had to take a back seat, and if she ever came within reach of a pair of horns was sure to feel them, and was often "horned." One day all the rest of the herd were driven into a corral, and the poor "hornless" was left out. What was her surprise and joy a little later to see the others coming out of the corral with closely beaks and no horns. She took one good look at the first victim and then sailed in fairly winged the earth with her, till she bellowed for mercy. Then another came out and was put through a similar course, and so on with the whole lot, and from that day to this she is the boss of the herd, and leads in the choice spots and leads a gay life.

When the International Vaudevilles opened at the Metropolitan theater at Sacramento, Cal., on Saturday, the company was thrown into confusion by the service of an attachment for $500 against the owners of the company. The complaint was sworn to by Delmore Wilkins, a young clerk in a leading San Francisco dry goods store. Amberg & Matema, the owners of the Vaudeville company, together with J. H. Todd, lessee of the Metropolitan, successfully muzzled the service of the attachment. The Vaudeville people claim that every cent of salary due the troupe has been paid, and that return trip tickets to New York were bought in the east for every member of the troupe. They insist that the reason of the attachment is that Wilkins formed a strong attachment for two of the members of the troupe, and that the sole and only reason for the service of the papers is that he wants the girls to return to San Francisco with him, which they appear willing to do. The row isn't over yet.

H. H. McDonald Jr. is in a cell in the county jail at San Francisco, says the Chronicle. The man who wrecked the Pacific bank and robbed the People's home; he who fed laughed at the misery of those he had wronged, who has denied without the movement of a muscle to the pleas of distressed men and women, and who heard with a shrug of the shoulders of one man driven to death by despair, cowered when the officer placed his hands on him and arrested him on charging him for the crime of entombment. His arrest came about too late. He was preparing to flee from the state and enjoy his Dagonian gains. After stealing numbers of thousands of dollars from one bank and ten of thousands from another, he was about to place himself beyond the reach of justice. In his hour of retribution his friends and parasites have deserted him. His arrest is said to be but the beginning of the end to one of the greatest scandals the city of San Francisco has ever known. He is accused of being entertained in having allowed his brother, Frank V. McDonald, to take $14,000 from the vaults of the Pacific bank and for having stolen $5,000 himself. An indictment has also been found against him for the grand larceny of the Swedborg securities from the vaults of the People's Home Savings bank. The wrecker is not the only one who will have to answer in a court of justice for his acts. The grand jury has begun its work in earnest. It is going into a terrible scandal to the utmost, and it is determined before its labors conclusive man who had anything to do with the destruction of the two banks will be brought to justice.
