THE OTHER SIDE STATED.

"Bonnud" Gives His Views on the High School Question.

Nov. 11, 1897.

To the Editor:

I read in your issue of Tuesday evening a communication in regard to the high school and its continuance, the general tenor of which I, for one, fail to endorse. As a rule, so far, in referring to the high school, the public press has shown but one side of the question and has touched upon the other but very lightly. That there are two sides to it the taxpaying part of the community are fully aware, at least they know of another side besides the one shown by your correspondent.

We are now assessed 12½ mills in this city for school purposes only, on an excessively overvaluation on property, in most cases much above its cash value. This in addition to county and state general taxation comes a burden which very many of those having it to meet find oppressive in the extreme, the effect being in hundreds of instances of cases that property will be sold for the taxes this season, much of which will never be redeemed by those losing it, as they cannot raise the money to do so. In other cases persons with limited incomes on the east bench, by great economy are able to meet them though being compelled to pay excessive taxation on their property, or else in part with their prospects of recovery. Others in their efforts to save their property are forced to place heavy incumbrances upon it in order to raise the money for taxes. All the week complaints in the extreme to those so situated, and there are hundreds in this city in this condition, in fact the ones who do not feel it, and are exceptions of rarity, are the rare exception among those noting taxes.

High schools maintained at the public expense should be supported without causing such oppressive conditions as exist here now, or not at all, for it is simply forcing matters beyond the financial capacity of the taxpayer to endeavor to keep their homes together. It continued in their present form, these burdens will result in nothing short of the confiscation of the property of hundreds of taxpayers in this city.

Until the burdens now placed on the taxpaying element be made easier, I consider the district school system that is, that one has consistently expected as free education, and the State Constitution never designed nor contemplated placing more upon the taxpayers than could reasonably be carried. Pupils can go direct from the district school course to the preparatory department of the University, which includes, or can be really made to, all work done by the high school, and having the University right here, it should answer all such purposes.

We are told of the benefits that come to the poor from the high school. The number of laborers who attend the high school does not seem to contradict much of this. The facts are that as a rule, very many of the children of poor men have to engage in labor when, through with the district school course, and comparatively few can afford the high school course, rarely not to the extent that many claim for it in that respect. The greatest difficulty is that there is a heavy taxpaying population here which clamors for free higher education, and other things, at public expense, but which pays no taxes to any material extent, and in hundreds of instances none at all. And this is not confined to people in moderate circumstances, but to many who are practically well-to-do, but whose means is in such shape as to enable them to successfully evade taxation, and they lose very little or no part of the free school burden. These holding realty are the ones who have to meet the greater portion of these things and they are shown but very slight consideration by the others.

We are told that people will flock to the city to avail themselves of the fine school privileges here. What part of the expense will such people bear? Just as little as they can possibly, and in most cases none whatever, as many arrange to come from outside, places so as to be included in the school census and gain all advantages of the system while not being a part of its expense. This also creates an increase in school population necessitating more buildings while the already oppressed taxpayer must bear.

Teachers are imported who cheat as little as possible here and carry all they can save out of the country, the money thus spent out of circulation here. This in effect is mercilessness.

No matter what authority may be used to the contrary, the fact is, it now confronts the taxpayers of this city, to that the maintenance of the high school, at present works an oppression. The entire public school system is overdone in its methods, more than the people's finances will justify, and requires retrenchment.

NEW CANAL PROJECT.

The West Side of Cache Valley to be Supplied With Water.

Oneida, Idaho, Republican: President George C. Parkinson left Preston last Monday for the three counties for the purpose of looking into the advisability of organizing a company to land an irrigation canal to furnish water for the western portion of Cache valley. For some time past the small settlements along the valley have been talking of taking out water to supply their various communities, but as yet no decisive step has been taken.

President Parkinson has conceived a plan, which is more than likely to be carried out, to make all these communities in the aggregate, of one broad stock which should furnish the water for all. With this idea in view, the president has called upon all the communities interested to appoint a committee of five to accompany him on Oct. 6th, to look over the ground and with him as to the practicability of the scheme. This committee, with him today on Utah Lake, is trying now a proper location for a main canal, to waste water for the thousand irrigating purposes could be had. At the meeting of the committee, it was thought that probably a company will be organized, and early next spring surveyors will be sent out to lay out the line, so that by next fall work on the project will be started at once.

The scheme also is a grand one and would furnish a sufficient water supply for irrigating purposes of as fine land as there is in the northwestern country.

Proceedings to be Printed.

The printing of the proceedings and debates of the Constitutional Convention will soon begin. Bids for the work have been received and opened by Secretary of State Hammond. It is expected that it will make a volume of nearly 1,000 pages. The bids are as follows:
