Today's quotations, as disclosed in the appended table of figures, are evi-dence of undue and unwarranted "hammering" on the part of those whose financial interest is best served by a system of "knocking" that is shame-ful in its utter disregard of justice. When from one to five hundred per cent is cut out of a stock's worth there must enter into the mind of the holder a most healthy desire to "go wild" and run amuck, with stockbrokers as the principal objects of his "pious" atten-tions. But while this is a fact, there be no doubt but a great deal of good has been done in puncturing son of the inflations that decorated a few stocks before they came under the caller's gavel.

What of the paper representing some really good mines, though? Some hon-est properties, whose stocks were held at a valuation commensurate with their earning powers or future prospects, have been injured much in the slaugh-ter. As is usual in nearly all the affairs of men and nations, greed for wealth is at the bottom of it all, for no such action would be taken unless there was profit in it for someone, and the anxiety to possess the cash makes of some men mere clods of sentimentess injustice. Of course, this condition applies just as much against the man who inflates a stock as the one that robs it of its legitimate value, and are prompted by the same spirit. Just now, however, the eems to be in the ascendancy and unjoubtedly there is much cause for so of the complainings that are constant-ly heard in the exchange hall and on the streets.

"Isn't it a puzzle?" was the expresa visitor this morning as he kinked his neck to see the claw-marks of the bear. And that's about what it Is-a puzzle. No one seems to know "why, when nor how;" but everybody knows "it is." When the slump will cease is a question and a hope for the best is the only available salve for the sore one.
