MEXICAN CONGRESS.

Its Attitude to the Anglo-Venezuelan Contest (?).

NO TRUE DOCTRINE ENGRAVED.

It Should be Incorporated in the International Code of Idle Conduct.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 1.—The most important part of the President's message, delivered today at the opening of Congress, is an allusion to the Anglo-Venezuelan controversy and from the President's message to Congress. The part of the text concerning Venezuela is as follows: "With such a solemn judgment and unanimous of the same friendly and honest character as our diplomatic correspondence with the two countries, I now have years past, Notwithstanding of the conflict which occurred at Barima and Amacuro, the Venezuelan government, in the exercise of its sovereign jurisdiction, at the new water to a boundary district, at once good understanding, and in the exercise of its sovereign jurisdiction, in accordance with the principles of international law, and the principles of the Monroe doctrine, which have been recognized by the United States, and which have been recognized by the United States, and which have been recognized by the United States, and
