DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, - - February 20, 1894.

FRAGMENTS.

MAYOR BASKIN is expected to arrive home on Friday or Saturday next.

THE juvenile choir and all the contesting choirs meet at the Tabernacle tomorrow at half-past 2 to make final preparations for the singing contest to take place Thursday night.

PROFESSOR WILLARD DONE will deliver a lecture in the Seventeenth ward meeting house this evening, beginning at 7:30. It will be under the auspices of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement association, and the subject treated will be "Self and Mutual Improvement."

A ball and concert will be given in the Seventh ward assembly hall this evening, commencing at 8 o'clock. The proceeds will be used for buying coal for the poor of the ward. The prices of admission are: Children 10 cents, and adults 25 cents, and as much more as those attending care to pay.

Now that the bill allowing Salt Lake City to increase its bonded indebtedness from four to six per cent on the assessed valuation of property has passed, it is expected that within the next few weeks there will be a number of eastern bond buyers in the field. The Hamilton Fonbale, said one of that gentleman's friends this morning, will make it interesting for them when they come.

At the meeting of anti-Devine men held in the City Council chamber last night, the following committee was appointed to be present at the session of the municipal solons tonight and protest against the removal of Devine and the confirmation of Devine: Julius Thompson, chairman; Wendell Benson, M. H. Walker, H. Alt, Jacob Moritz, Henry Dinwoodey, James Glendinning, L. T. Terry, L. S. Ricketts and E. A. Coburn.

JOHN C. WILKINSON, the well known mining man, was the victim of a painful accident last night, caused by a fall on a slippery sidewalk in front of the Wasatch building at the corner of East Temple and Second South streets. In falling he reached out his hand and caught at an iron railing, on the top of which were pointed pieces of metal calculated to make it uncomfortable for street loungers. Unfortunately Mr. Wilkinson's hand came down on one of these and was severely lacerated and bruised. Several stitches were put into the wound by a surgeon.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

An Aged Lady Falls Down Stairs Badly Cutting Her Head.

About half-past nine last evening Mrs. Martinson, a lady about 78 years of age, met with a very severe accident by falling down a flight of stairs, at her residence, at the rear of No. 642 east First South street. She was carrying a pitcher of steam to her room, when by some means she slipped and fell to the bottom of the stairs, inflicting a scalp wound extending from just above the right ear round the back of the head to near the left ear, laying bare quite a piece of the skull. She apparently struck her head on the edge of a bucket on the landing, and was otherwise severely bruised about the body, but no bones were broken. Dr. James W. Taylor was at once called in and sewed up the gaping wound, putting in over twenty stitches, and otherwise making her as comfortable as possible. The patient was resting easily this morning.

[illegible] tradition in the truth would all be recorded accurately. His was the most remarkable memory that I ever knew [illegible]."

CITY ORDINANCE.

An Ordinance, fixing the Salaries and Compensation of certain Officers and Employes of Salt Lake City.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained by the City Council of Salt Lake City, Territory of Utah, that the salaries and compensation of the following named officers and employes of said city be and the same are hereby fixed as follows, for the term of office to which each of them may have been [illegible]

[illegible] the first two passed on their way across the island northward, going to their fields of labor; Elders Hilton and Seare bound for their field of labor at the western extremity of Upolu, while I had in view a two or three weeks' tour of the same.

On arriving at the municipality of Apia we parted for our respective destinations. Elder Hilton's horse now became our pack animal, and the way we looked as we went marching along reminded one of a party of prospectors—minus picks and shovels. As we passed along the one street of Apia, there being no other way of getting through the town, the eyes of the people were turned upon us and for a few moments we were the observed of all observers, from, however, we were beyond their gaze and enjoyed the pleasure of traveling as we pleased, which was not very fast, for when old Sol sends forth his heated rays one is reminded that slow traveling is preferable, especially here in Samoa.

A walk of about thirty miles, the most of which was through rain and mud, brought us to Lalovi. Along the way the people, contrary to the usual custom, failed to show any "alofa" for us by calling us to their houses to "malaga," we being asked to do so but once. The Saints at L. received us very kindly, and the manner in which they entertained us for the next few days was deserving of much praise. It fills one's heart with joy and gratitude to the great Giver of all good, when he feels that his efforts, though feeble they may be, are appreciated by those who have taken upon themselves the name of the Lord.

On Sunday, the 7th, three well attended meetings were held, [illegible] meeting was specially enjoyed. A good spirit prevailed and a number of Saints spoke very touchingly about the necessity of partaking of the Lord's supper with clean hands and pure hearts. Arrangements were completed for holding our next conference at this place. The branch of the Church located at this end of the island is presided over by Elder Thos. H. Hilton.

I had made up my mind to stop at every house where people asked me to come in; so after parting with the Elders and Saints at L., I traveled along very slowly, stopping to talk whenever opportunity afforded. Thus the week passed till Friday, when Simoa was reached. Here Elder J. Beck has charge. For the present, he is alone, there being insufficient Elders to supply the demands. In this field of labor, the writer spent about seven-

[illegible] months, having crossed the island, which at this point is about twenty miles wide, over thirty times. The Saints here were not failing well in the work of the Lord as was shown by their attendance at the two meetings which were held on the following Sunday. Monday morning the journey toward the island was continued and Singapa was reached on the 13th. Elders Wm. Low and T. S. Court are stationed here, the former presiding.

He had just returned from a visit to the east end of the island, for which part he and the writer left about noon of the 17th, arriving at a good old brother's home shortly before night. Many of the Elders who have been on Samoa will remember Hipo, for he has been like a real brother to them. He is the same old Hipo, and as faithful as ever. We held a meeting in his house on the evening of our arrival.

In this district some historic places were visited, among which were the [illegible] house of Malietoa, the rebel king, and of his ancestors.

The tide being well in, we borrowed a boat of some natives and visited a small island about half a mile out. The island is called Nanoa, and about three miles in circumference. It is owned by Peter Larsen, a Swede, who has lived here for over twenty-five years. He is a hermit of the first order, preferring to live in solitude rather than keep company with even his own family. His plantation, consisting of about fifty acres, has been cleared and planted by himself, in doing which he has performed much hard labor. While showing the writer around the place the old man became very enthusiastic and said, holding out his bare arms, "These hands have done all this."

Returning, we made for Singapa. As we were passing through one of the villages we observed that meeting was being held by some of the followers of Latter, we decided to attend. The preacher gave the privilege for any one to speak. One having spoken, the writer arose to say a few words. Another person arose at the same time, and as he refused to speak, saw that I had come near the pulpit too. The teacher, for such their ministers are named, told him to proceed, and I sat down again. After he was through the teacher arose, and after passing a few insinuating remarks about us, closed the meeting.

We then asked for the privilege of holding services in the church, but were refused. In the meantime, some of those who had a desire to hear us speak had arranged for meeting to be held in a native house near by. In a very short time more than fifty had come together and the writer spoke to them on the restoration of the Gospel, warning them to repent of their sins that they may escape the impending calamities which are about to come upon those who obey not the Gospel. Meeting over, we went to see Mr. Fisher, a half-caste, who assisted Elder Dean in getting out his Samoan hymn. The next day we returned to Singapa, where two meetings were held. Monday evening, the 22nd, found me at Fagalii again, feeling quite tired and foot-sore, having walked about forty-five miles and that, too, over very rough roads.

While going around the island, the young people would often run towards or from the path, crying at the passersby "Oui Mamona, se Mamona," as is their peculiar way of mocking, sing out at the top of their voices "Mamona, Mamona," that being they get some fun for a Mormon. While the unthinking youth delights in flinging such expressions of hatred at us, the older people are more considerate, but even they, in many instances, show a very disrespectful spirit towards the humble servants of the Lord. Surely the words of the Master, "And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake," have had a literal fulfillment in this our day. The minds of the people are filled with all manner of false notions regarding us and our labors here. Many of the white missionaries of other denominations have been so kind as to inform the natives that we have been expelled from our own country for crime committed there, and have come to these far-off isles for the purpose of making a living by depending upon the hospitality of the people, pretending to be ministers of the Gospel in order that we might the more easily obtain their sympathy and receive the necessary food and shelter. Such foolish ideas are, however, gradually giving way to the better judgment of the majority of the people, and they are beginning to discover that we are indeed what we profess to be—the humble followers of the meek and lowly Nazarene, and that the Gospel which we preach is the power of God unto salvation to every one that will believe and obey the same.

The work of the Lord is going steadily forward in this part of His vineyard, and the seeds of righteousness which are being patiently sown will ere long spring forth and yield an abundant harvest. All is well with us here, and we feel to rejoice in the good work in which we are engaged, believing that we are laying up in store a good foundation against the time to come, that we, with all the faithful in Zion, may lay hold on eternal life.

Respectfully,

MOTUKASO.

University Chemistry Class.

Last evening at the regular weekly session of the experimental class in chemistry Dr. Talmage reviewed the subject of the atmosphere, comparing its ingredients and experimentally demonstrating the diffusion of gases by which the proportions are maintained over the surface of the earth as well as high as mountains have ascended in balloons. The air is contaminated by human and animal breath, but the plants live on these contaminations, purifying the air for animals to again breathe.

The next group of elements was the chlorine group, consisting of chlorine, bromine, iodine and fluorine. Chlorine has been studied in the day class and so was temporarily omitted from treatment in evening session.

Bromine formed in some sea water in the form of bromide. This element is a heavy red liquid and has the power of bleaching fabrics, etc. It is a very active element, combining readily with many others.

Iodine, the third member of this group, is made from potassium, iodide being extracted from seaweed by heat and purified by a second distillation. The main feature of iodine is its power of staining starch. By combining with the metals as iodides, it produces many beautiful pigments, as [illegible] before the class.

Fluorine derives its name from the Latin word fluo (to flow) and is so called from the compounds of fluorine being used in fluxing. As one illustration of its compounds, several specimens of fine massive crystals were A Utah Delegate Speaks.

The San Francisco Chronicle of Saturday last, in giving an account of the proceedings of the Trans-Mississippi congress in that city the day before shows that Hon. Moses Thatcher took a prominent part in the discussion as a delegate from this Territory. On the Nicaragua canal resolution he is reported as follows: "Delegate Thatcher of Utah briefly stated his opposition to corporate control or government partnership in corporate control. Utah's vote would be cast for the amendment.

"It was late when the Utah gentleman ceased speaking, but so great was the interest in the debate that the congress took a recess until 3 o'clock instead of until 2 o'clock."

He also took a bold stand against a silent opposition to the admission of Utah as a state and when resolutions commendatory of the action of President Cleveland on the Hawaiian question were introduced he was again heard from as the following extract: "These resolutions brought Thatcher of Utah to his feet in condemnation of them as partisan. He demanded the action of President Cleveland as did also Delegate Thatcher of Utah."

Notice to Seventies.

The First Council of Seventies are endeavoring to collect all the old Nauvoo, Kirtland and other records pertaining to Seventies, up to 1880 and 1882, and would be pleased to have all persons and quorums in possession of any such records forward the same to our general secretary, Elder John M. Whitaker, No. 231 Constitution building, Salt Lake City, Utah, for filing away for reference and historical purposes.

These records are of value most to the general office, and we hope we may be able to gather all such for filing away in the proper place.

SEYMOUR B. YOUNG,
In behalf of the First Council of Seventies.

THE CHILDREN'S BALL.

The Little Ones at the Theatre Will Be Sure to Have a Good Time.

Youth is the season of enjoyment and pleasure, and it is a pleasure to parents and guardians to see to it that the little ones get all the legitimate joy out of life that they are entitled to. On Washington's birthday there will be an entertainment at the Theater, which every child in the city will want to attend. In addition to a fine dance programme there will be lots of fun for the children in the shape of shadow pantomime and legerdemain. At two o'clock the dance begins and will continue uninterruptedly until seven o'clock that night with intermission only for the two performances mentioned. The story to be illustrated in shadow pantomime by the Clawson Brothers will make the welkin ring with the shouts of laughter from the youngsters. Then Hillman, the prestidigitateur, will give some clever exhibitions of mysterious [illegible]. As the price of admission is only fifty cents and twenty-five cents for children under twelve years of age, there will doubtless be a gathering that will fill the Theater in every nook and corner.

TO LEAD THE MARCH.

The Scene Will be Both a Brilliant and an Imposing One.

The finishing touches have been placed on the arrangements for the grand Legislative reception and ball to be given at the Salt Lake Theater tomorrow night. Nothing that the ingenuity of the committee on arrangements could suggest has been overlooked and the prospects for a decided success are flattering. In addition to the invitations extended to the members of the Legislature, there have been sent out to all the clerks and officers of the Legislature "invites" to be present with their ladies. Governor Caleb W. West and lady will lead the grand march, to be followed by the presiding officers of the Council and House and then the members of the Legislature. The effect of the scene will be materially enhanced by the use of calcium lights, and as the colored lights are thrown on the moving line, it will make a brilliant picture.

The theater management will have the floor in fine condition and the cloak room will be in the hands of employes both apt and polite. Professor Carlson, who has taken extraordinary pains to prepare a fine program of music, will give such music as to stimulate the most retired and bashful spectator to trip the light fantastic.

The sale of tickets up to date has been quite satisfactory; the book stores, drug stores and leading establishments in the city report quite a large demand. Tomorrow night the box office will be open at the theater and tickets can be procured there. It being impossible for the canvassing committee to make a personal solicitation of every box, those of the public who intend to go, will find tickets at the places above indicated.

All the letters received from outside towns promise a large attendance from that source. The press of the Territory generally have taken an interest in the matter and their notices of the ball have been extensive as well as encouraging to the management.

Mrs. McCornick and her aides have been doing yeoman's service in gathering viands for the supper. The tables will be costly decorated and the service complete in every particular. The general relief committee, to whom the proceeds of the supper will go, expect a very generous addition to their funds.

The balconies will be thrown open to spectators at fifty cents a ticket. The view from this elevated position will be superb, [illegible].

A Valuable Addition to the culinary list is Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream, an absolutely pure, unsweetened condensed milk so carefully prepared that it keeps indefinitely and is always available for every recipe calling for milk or cream.
