LOGAN.

LOGAN, UTAH, - - AUG. 10, 1896.

Accidents.

A twelve-year-old girl, daughter of David Hutchinson of Wellsville, was knocked down and badly trampled by an infuriated cow. One arm was broken and she was badly bruised.

Two other accidents have occurred within the past few days. On Thursday evening, as Ralph Mitchell and another young man were riding their bicycles at a rapid rate down Second street, Logan, they met two horsemen riding rapidly in the opposite direction. Mitchell collided with one of them and was thrown to the ground with great force. He remained in an unconscious condition for two hours, and it was feared would suffer from concussion of the brain. Fortunately this was not the case, and he has now nearly fully recovered.

Notes and Personals.

J. Harry Brown, a wheelman who left his home in Phoenix, Arizona, on April 25th to do the wheel-to-sea act, was in Logan last Wednesday. He had already been through California, and came here direct from Portland, Oregon, enroute to Chicago, from whence he will go southward to the Gulf, then home. He is advertising the bicycles of the Pope Mfg. Co., and corresponding for the Cycling West.

At the meeting of the city council last Wednesday evening, in response to a request of the fire and police board of Salt Lake, the council directed that C. E. Hutchins, chief of the Logan fire department, should represent Logan at the firemen's convention in Salt Lake today.

Among those sojourning in the canyons are Col. N. Warren and family, Prof. Maw and family, Mr. U. Boyd and family, Mr. J. D. Snowden and family, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Lewis, Prof. Sheppard, Dr. Zauner, the Misses Ellner, and a number of Salt Lake visitors.

Mr. Malcolm McAllister, an employe of the NEWS typographical department is visiting Logan. He has been here for a week and has been enjoying himself hunting and fishing.

Night Spring of Preston is suffering from a broken thigh as the result of a fall from a horse.

J. A. Rigby was fined $5 for fast driving on Friday.

Valued Religious Relics.

The collection of religious relics to be seen in the church of Santa Maria, village of Rieo is unquestionably unique. The sidechapels of the parish church place are exceedingly decorated and very simple, which probably accounts for the possession of such a remarkable collection. A writer in L'Ami publisher D'Agen gives the following list of the principal items:

The form used in Moses to call to prayer the children of Israel while in the desert; a tuft of that red hair which was the pride of Esau and the despair of Jacob; a piece of the nail of the little toe of the Lame Man—the nail used to very purpose—of Enoch, the patriarch; the bib worn by the infant Jesus; the cruet and cruiser of the one that took the hole family into Egypt, and several relics of various saints.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Children Have Conquered All of the Alps.

Of course the mystery is gone from the Alps—now the children know their way completely. Every mountain and point of view of even third rate importance has been revealed, and to many routes. Almost every gap between two peaks has been traversed on foot. The gentlemen of some young mountaineering societies have revealed their countless expeditions in scores of volumes of appalling length. Of late years vigorous attempts have been made to so collate the mass of material in the form of climbers' guides, dealing with particular districts, wherein every peak and pass is dealt with in strictly prescribed movement and every different route and all the variations of each route are set forth, with reference to the volumes in which they have been collected at length by their discoverers. Nearly half the Alps has been traced in this manner, but the work has taken ten years, and of course the whole requires periodical revision.—Sir W. M. Conway in Scribner's.

Why They Wear Hats.

History does not tell us far as we know, how it came about that members of the English parliament wore their hats. The custom has descended from an age when the percentage were not recorded, but we may suppose that thereby hangs a tale of sturdy and vehement revolt against privilege, such as broke out at Versailles, much to the tyrant's cost. Now and again we find simple citizens in the presence. When the commons voted that everyone should "uncover as often as water is laid" when the speaker expressed the thanks of the house for any service done by a member, Lord Falkland "stretched both his arms out and clasped his hands together on the crown of his hat and held it down close to his head, that all might see how civilly he was that Sunday was to him." —Pall Mall Gazette.

To the Mother Willie Sisters.

White is very much worn amid this month. In the park one can see some from white poplin. A lovely one was worn the other afternoon by a young mountaineer. The skirt was of the new shape and the bodice was of silk muslin in a deep shade of cream color, with a white chiffon vest. A white straw hat was worn with pink roses and bright pink bows, tempered by green. The country ladies with the white dust veils do right, although it does not seem so. The journey to Ben Lomond can be very easily done by means of a good second hand bicycle and would be more skillful. A perfect place with excellent accommodation.

The small boy has discovered a much new game, and one frequently plays it upon bicycles. One is spoken of as being in the same the other day at a small function and a card of invitation was given. Invitations of the small kind. The card was handed to a girl for and when found was in shapes of beasts her children and on each small card was a small card with the name of the beast. The game was found very amusing and was continued for some time.

OBITUARY.

ARTHUR WHITE JACKSON.

Died, at residence, 232 N. Second West street, Salt Lake City, at about half past six on Saturday morning, July 25, 1896, Arthur Amos Jackson, son of Amos Jackson and Mary Ann Abbott Jackson.

Deceased was born in the city of Salt Lake City, March 15, 1893. He was taken ill when about three years old. From early childhood he was subject to colds, and consequently developed quite a cough, especially the last year or two. Medical remedies seemed to be of little avail. Pneumonic symptoms was the disease and consequently he was confined to his surroundings, which, necessitated a partial retirement on the boys and women folk. He was miserable for about a fortnight before death. His end was peaceful and painless, so much so that it was difficult for a non-professional to tell exactly when he passed away.

As the deceased is the eldest of a family of five and has been taken from us, the death was strictly unexpected, as there is but little care as a great sorrow to his parents, and to his family, also to his neighbors, friends and acquaintances generally, some of whom could hardly believe it at first.

He always lived a life quite closely to his family, which, perhaps, is the one of his to whom a certain disposition and no more lovely boy and his loss was sincerely felt by his parents, and yet our heavenly Father has taken a member to England a month before, to where we will, the young and to those who knew him well, his parents not unmixed mourn by the mother deprived, as she was, almost of the presence of both of her children.

The funeral service was held in the Nineteenth ward meeting house at 12 noon on Sunday, July 26. Elder Alma Greenwood conducted the exercises and Elder James Partridge led in closing one. The following hymns were sung: "O Lord, responsive to Thy call," "Cheerful by nature, mild and kind," "Come, all ye bright spirits, come to sing." Appropriate solo music was made by Lizzie Jack Lowry and Thomas Stevens. Prayer was offered by Elder Hyrum Dutton and Elder Henry S. Naisbitt.

Our readers are wonders why it is that any person should be hampered by sickness or pain, while another, who pays no heed, strength and almost every sunday, living therefore, yet apparently with no caution to the real character of other persons. Yet, the wise man of the Savior comes to mind—"That the works of God should be made manifest." Also the words of Abraham to the rich man in Lazarus's place, in our Lord's parable—"Thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented."

The deceased was of a cheerful, generous, kind, generous disposition, and was a very willing worker, according to his capacity, in and out of his home. He was generous to a fault, and was of no vices or bad habits. He inherited strong and robust and strong limbs of every kind. He was generous to a fault, and was friendly to kin, for who knew him was sorrowed.

He was born a weakly infant to his parents. Prayers ascended to Heaven that he might be spared to them for a companion, and successful when they were repelled. He seemed to say to his father, "Good by, you go to meeting with you, wait you, I am well enough," or, "Ask mother if she will let me go to meeting tonight." In death, it was sorrowful for greatness, greatness of mind, and when he was made to go it was a test of an inviting night.

Arise! ye spirits, ye souls, ye,
Ye souls, ye souls, ye souls.

The sincere desire to soften their heartfelt thanks to all their friends, including the doctor and nurse the young ladies who attend the morning house, for their kindly attention in the sickness of his, and for all the kindness and sincere sympathy manifested to others.
