THE MEXICAN OUTBREAK.

Excitement in Durango—A Suspicious Car—Prisoners Killed.

DEMING, N. M., Jan. 11.—Much excitement still prevails here regarding the situation at Ascension. Colonel Rangines, late politico of the district of Juarez, has arrived here from Juarez, and immediately left the city for Ascension. It is expected that at Potosi, just across the border, he will be joined by the armed outbreak gang. A detachment of 150 troops has been ordered across from the city of Chihuahua and is moving by forced marches, and may be expected to strike Ascension from the south on Wednesday. The presence of General Sangiorgio may have the effect of quieting the disturbance, as the Mexican officials think highly local in character and has no political significance.

The land speculators here insist that Rangiorgio, who leads the insurgents, is not only a capable man, but a large owner of property who cannot now afford to hazard that much discontent prevails, and his original band of eighty will be rapidly reinforced and swelled to the proportions of an army.

SUSPICIOUS BOXES.

LAREDO, Tex., Jan. 11.—Interest in the Garza revolution is intensified, and startling developments are expected daily. It is understood that there will be an investigation of the contents of a car on the Texas-Mexico railroad company, consigned to Los Angeles, marked soap. Los Angeles has not a dozen inhabitants, therefore no one in that neighborhood had any use for such an amount of soap. Suspicions were aroused, and it is thought that the car contained ammunition for Garza's men.

SUSPECTED REVOLUTIONISTS KILLED.

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Jan. 11.—The Mexican government has a law which permits guards to shoot a prisoner who attempts to escape, and it has been observed down the river on the Mexican side to such an extent that those who were thought to be in sympathy with Garza, to the number of eighty or one hundred, have fallen victims to their capture.

An Important Case Decided by the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The United States Supreme Court today, in the celebrated Interstate commerce case, Chas. Cornelisson, appellant, vs. Frank Richardson, marshal of the United States district court for the northern district of Illinois, decided that witnesses cannot be compelled to testify in any criminal cases where the answers might tend to criminate them in any way of subject them to possible prosecution. This case is one of the greatest interest to railroads and is attracting the widest attention. Commissioner was asked whether he had ever detected from any railroad rate or grain shipments lower than the specific to all shippers. He refused to answer on the ground that it might criminate him and claimed the protection of the constitutional guarantee conferred by the Fifth amendment. Judge Gresham decided against him and held that he could not refuse to answer the questions and from an appeal from Judge Gresham's order that the case decided by the Supreme Court today, came up.

France Alone.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—Le Soleil, commenting on the Egyptian situation says that France being alone in opposition to England, it is more than probable that the government can do nothing whatever in regard to Egypt, especially as Turkey is certain to back out at any difficulty.

The Journal des Debats decides that the minority and youth of Abbas Pasha justify the pretensions of England to complete the occupation of Egypt and says: "Europe cannot abdicate the right to interfere in Egypt nor retain the necessary supervision into the hands of the English. France will never accept such a position."

Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-one.

To us of the United States among all the nations the year 1891 has been blest. Rebellion and revolution have disturbed Chili and Brazil. The Argentine Republic has floundered in the midst of financial troubles that have threatened to struggle out her very life. China has had yet, more sad rebellion on her hands. Russia has famine, pestilence and rumors of war, and the dikilots are busy as ever. She has expelled from her borders thousands of her strongest, thriftest citizens, and thereby incurred their undying hate.

The atmosphere of hate which the Russian government is spreading around it will inevitably bring down destruction upon it at last. This is written in the inimitable law of cause and effect. In continental Europe the nations snarl at one another and intrigue in secret and pile up their armies and armaments. Heavier and heavier grows the people's burden of taxation and want. The patient Angel will throw off the load some day. Then there will be fire and flame and iron hail. When the smoke clears away there will be no more kingdoms or empires. The storm may come any year.

As to England, England has her Prince of Wales. Japan has had a frightful convulsion of nature that destroyed 7,000 of her people. Canada has her grievance of not increasing in wealth and population.

We of the United States also have our large grievance of any kind. Most of us have small grievances, but they are nothing at all when we stop to think how much better off we are than other people. There are labor troubles in some parts of the country, but even these are fewer than they were about seven years ago. Crops have been the greatest in the history of the country. Farmers are more prosperous than they were here a eight years before. When farmers are prosperous things go well with tradesmen, manufacturers and economic, therefore all is well. Turn the leaf. Eighteen hundred and ninety-two is full of bright hopes. Forward!

The new structure over the Mississippi at Memphis will be 6,000 feet long. It will be supported by eight piers, they are to height from 112 feet to 197 feet.

TERRITORIAL SUPREME COURT.

Opening of the January Session Monday Afternoon.—The Church Cases, Etc.

The January session of the Territorial Supreme Court opened at 1:30 Monday afternoon, all the Judges being present, namely, Chief Justice Zane, and Associate Justices Anderson, Blackburn and Miner. There was not a very large attendance of the members of the bar.

ADDRESSING TO THE BAR.

Upon the motion of Junius Sutherland, Mr. J. W. Smith, Jr., of this city, was admitted to practice at the bar of this court.

Upon the motion of Attorney Schroeder, Mr. John R. Thomson, who came with a certificate from the Supreme Court of Nebraska, was next admitted.

On motion of Col. Ferguson, Mr. Alvin V. Taylor, of the Second District of Columbia, was admitted.

The fourth and last applicant for admission to practice was Mr. Ira Jamil Hulcomb, who was moved by Attorney A. R. Heywood, of Ogden.

THE CHURCH CASES.

The first business after the adoption of new members of the bar was the calling of the calendar and the setting of dates for argument of the respective cases.

The first on the list was that of the United States vs. the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints et al., and upon its being mentioned Mr. Varian said—There is nothing ready now; therefore it had better be passed.

Judge Judd—I applied to Judge Lochmore this morning to have him or no wish file his report in this matter. His reply was that he was working on it and would be able to get it in in three or four days. I would like to have the case set down for argument towards the end of the month. I can accommodate myself, however, to a date that would suit others.

Mr. Varian—I do not think it should be set until we see what the report is.

Hon. F. S. Richards—We would rather not have the case set today; not until we have seen the report.

Judge Zane—Let it be passed for the present.

DISMISSED AT PLAINTIFF'S COST.

On application of United States District Attorney Varian, the case of the People vs. Rod Swasey, appellant, was dismissed at the appellant's cost. Swasey, it seems, was convicted in Judge Blackburn's court of stealing a calf. He entered an appeal against the conviction, but was subsequently pardoned by the governor.

Money Lost on Bidding Cars.

"It is imagined by nearly every traveler who pays seventy-five cents or one dollar for a meal on a dining car that the company is reaping a wonderful harvest," said a traveling passenger agent of one of the leading roads in America, "but the figures will soon convince the most skeptical that the project is a losing one to the companies, and every one would dispense with the dining car service if they only could. It is the great competition existing between the different roads and the desire on the part of the public for rapid transit that forces the companies to place dining cars on their through trains. All of the great trunk lines the roads are putting on faster and faster trains every few months.

As soon as one company puts on a train that will cover the distance between any two important points quicker than the other roads can, then all the rest of the roads set to work to reduce the time, and inside of two or three months some other road will announce a train that will make the distance in less time, thirty, forty are minutes at an hour faster than its rival. And so it goes. It may of these fast trains should happen to be delayed a minute or two, dining hall is then the choice with the passengers, and they will reach the end of destination all the way from forty minutes to an hour earlier, and the result would be that they would carry the majority of the traveling public. It is not cheap meals the people who travel on railroads want so much today as rapid transportation. Last year the Pullman Car company served 5,500,000 meals on their dining cars, and profits realized did not pay 1 per cent upon the investment. A leading western road had last year but $30,000 on the dining car service."—Toledo Blade.

Gave Her Ring to Uncle Sam for Liberty.

A young lady, a gold ring and a United States postal letter box were the central figures in a scene in the postoffice building at the corner of Jackson and Clark streets, Chattanooga, which was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic audience.

A young lady in Chattanooga went to drop a letter in one of the new postal letter boxes, with the lifting lever, and being evidently used to the old style of box, where it is sometimes necessary to order that the letter be put through the bottom to push it through the slot with the finger, she followed the minute with her hand to be sure that it was safely deposited. Then, satisfied that her sacred epistle was safe, right, she wanted to withdraw her hand, save the ring on her finger held for hard cruelty, and all her efforts to withdraw it proved in vain.

Some suggested that she try to pull her finger out of the ring, but the attempt proved unsuccessful. Then few excited persons favored breaking the box with an ax, when a bright fellow had appeared upon the scene, and viewing the situation, immediately went for a rule with which to file the ring off the finger. It proved impossible to get the file into the box, and finally after half an hour the hand was extracted minus the ring.—Boston Cor. Chicago Herald.

A Lapse of Memory.

"Hospital! Are any other that I know in the proper vein today," quoted Mr. Scribbler as he threw aside his pen and substituted a stumpy lead pencil in its place.

"What's the matter now?" asked Mrs. Scribbler as she left her ironing to come to his assistance.

"It's only that Christmas story I started to write for The Echo. I can't for the life of me get beyond the opening sentence."

"Let me see what you have written," said his wife as she looked over his scribbled and read from the paper on the table—"It was Christmas eve. The poor little match girl on the corner shivered in the biting blast." Why, there's all right, I think," she said encouragingly.

"But I can't seem to remember what comes next," remonstrated Mr. Scribbler.

"Let me see! Um—in the biting blast—and—and drawing her ragged shawl about her slender, frozen body—I'll tell you her nearby stock of wares to the passers-by."

"That's it!" exclaimed the author as he threw his wife to him and kissed her tenderly. "What a lady you are, dear. I suppose I have written that thing hundreds of times, and yet I had utterly forgotten it."—Life.

A Flash of Science.

An English chemist who was at a Washington hotel exhibited a little telephone he had made which would resolve into the Fahrenheit of a fly. It was only a small affair and consisted of a box with a sheet of thin straw paper stretched over the upper side. By means of a little electrical device, consisting of two carbon disks, a carbon pencil and a wooden lever, the sheet of paper over the top of the box was caused to produce vibrations when a fly walked over it strong enough to act sympathetically on an ordinary telephone transmitter when held close to the latter.—Washington Post.

"German Syrup"

Asthma. "I have been a great sufferer from Asthma and severe Colds every Winter, and last Fall my friends as well as myself thought because of my feeble condition, and great distress from constant coughing, and inability to raise any of the accumulated matter from my lungs, that my time was close at hand. When nearly worn out for want of sleep and rest, a friend recommended me to try thy valuable medicine, Boschee's German Syrup. I am confident it saved my life. At least the first dose gave me great relief and a gentle refreshing sleep, such as I had not had for weeks. My cough began immediately to loosen and pass away, and I found myself rapidly gaining in health and weight. I am pleased to inform thee—unsolicited—that I am in excellent health and do certainly attribute it to thy Boschee's German Syrup. C. B. STICKNEY, Picton, Ontario."
