Fears of Death Among California Adventurists.

HOUSE BLOWN UP BY DYNAMITE.

Killed His Wife—Hit by a Bucket Falling 600 Feet—15 Electricians Killed.

The police commissioners of Portland, Oregon, will ask the council for $6,000 to run the department the coming year.

A big slide, covering the railroad track six feet deep for a distance of 100 feet occurred Saturday on the Northern Pacific at Robert's Hill, Oregon.

Mathias Kelley, aged 23, who came to Butte from Hancock, Mich., a few days ago, was killed in the Mountain City mine, Montana, Saturday morning, by falling down an ore chute.

Manuel Martorel, living at the old schoolhouse of Santa Domingo, north of San Quintin, in Lower California, murdered his wife Wednesday and then committed suicide.

Jesse D. Shaffer, aged 45, an old-time miner, who has been in Montana since 1867, was instantly killed in the Spotted mine near Butte Saturday afternoon by the fall of a bucket with 600 pounds of rock in from his head.

Reuben Lemon, Statesman: Ed Canaan has gone to Salt Lake to undergo an operation. Several months ago Mr. Canaan was shot in the arm by a robber at Walter's Ferry. He has never had free use of his arm since, but hopes the surgeon's knife will give him relief.

Benjamin L. Hill, a railroad brakeman formerly in the employ of the Southern Pacific company, shot and killed his wife Agnes at San Francisco, on Saturday night. They had had a quarrel. Mrs. Hill was 21 years old and leaves a two year old son. Public sentiment is against the slayer.

A. Livingston recently purchased a mining claim in Pine Nut, Nev., at Wilkes Barre for $50, the understanding being that Zito would return and run a tunnel to blow the lime cap off. He did so, and when the smoke cleared away saw one of the richest pockets yet seen in Pine Nut. He hastened to and secured to himself the property back with, but Mr. Livingston refused to sell and is still the owner.

H. W. Hoffman, an engineer and electrician in the employ of the Electric Improvement company, at San Jose, Cal., was almost instantly killed at the works Saturday night shortly after going to work. It was Hoffman's duty to turn on the circuits every night, and he was engaged in that task when, it is supposed, he placed the back of his right hand on the pole of the switchboard and received the full effect of 2,300 volts.

The habitation of Joe Barco, an Italian shoemaker at San Pedro, Cal., was wrecked by dynamite Friday night and Barco, his wife and baby narrowly escaped being blown into eternity. The bedroom in which they slept was filled by splitting wood, but, strange to say, Mrs. Barco and the baby were not severely hurt. Barco was less fortunate, being badly bruised and burned, but he is thankful that he was not killed outright. His injuries are very painful, his flesh being turned almost off one side. It is supposed a block of dynamite had been exploded on the porch by an Italian whom Barco had whipped for insulting Mrs. Barco.

Unless rain soon comes, and in abundance, the farmers and fruit growers in Southern California will become frightened at the prospect of a drought. Up to this time about eight inches of rain should have fallen this winter, but there has been less than an inch and a half. The usual rainfall in this region is seventeen inches. Fruit growers are irrigating almost as generously as in the summer season, and pumping is at a standstill throughout Pomona valley from lack of rain. In Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties thousands of acres have been prepared for winter sowing, but rain is necessary before the seed can be placed. Because of the fear of a dry winter barley and hay have advanced from forty to fifty per cent in three weeks.
