CHARACTER OF THE COUNTRY.

Part of It Is Up On End, On Its Side, and Upside Down—The Mysteries of Its Roads.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO THE NEWS.

LAKE CITY, FEB. 8.—In former communications I have endeavored to make your numerous clientele of readers acquainted with some of the possibilities of the great stretches of practically unknown realm in the central portion of this state. From Nephi on the south to the southern terminus of the Union Pacific at Milford, with the exception of an occasional station and now in a while a few residences or at best places put up for that purpose, the country is very nearly a monotonous waste, fringed at varying distances with bald-headed and featureless elevations which produce absolutely nothing in either of the great kingdoms—animal, vegetable or mineral. It is not thus but the flat country—and it is far everywhere else—that invites attention and suggests thought. There is perhaps not an acre of it that would not produce nearly-five bushels of wheat or a corresponding quantity of other produce indigenous to a wheat-growing climate, for it is at last well demonstrated that sagebrush and greasewood do not vegetate on barren soil; they are only there for the purpose of relieving our department of the cosmic system what can be done and keeping it, so to speak, till we see fit to do so in Salt Lake hold. I didn't try to estimate the number of acres, but any of my calculations, which are settled in consideration because of the ease with which they are evolved and their general inaccuracy, placed the figure pretty high and led to the additional conclusion that they would produce enough breadstuffs to feed the entire population west of the Missouri river, with a few small families on the east side thrown in—not to the river up in the computation. At present the lands referred to are open to entry; they are easy to cultivate, the climate is good, the railway and a good-sized stream are conveniently called a river provide them midway, and the presence of some of the rear is the remaining factor in the problem. In this connection it was a engineer during that one year to have thought of trying the artificial crew, or if any one has thought of it that it should not have been tried. Archimedes was the Kodak of ancient times, I believe, and a lot of many people would laugh to see the idea of going back to the time darkly shaded with antiquity for ideas with which to conduct modern operations; but if we can benefit anywhere in any way by doing such a thing, why not? The process is simple and inexpensive, but little time, money or labor would be wasted even if the experiment should prove a failure, and if successful it would seem an immediate increase of the State's taxable property by an immense sum and an addition to the value supply of human sustenance not at present is inestimable. The cows is sluggish as a rule, but to cows has fall enough to have a screw, and if the spirals were not too large would do so continuously, thus producing a steady, even though comparatively diminutive, volume of water from the river to the banks above; a crude of instruments would do the rest, so far as this phase of the proposition is concerned, and now you are. Independence seems to be inviting posture in the midst of all this present desolation, and as something remarkable at her feet, a steel and stable repealing on one hand side and the other entwined with blooming vines of varied foliage, while a smile of welcome ever plays on her fair visage. It will, of course, be easier for the wayfarer to look in the figure with his natural eye suppose along the road, albeit the same a fancy, it is a figurative sentence to write I have here given expression, of course. A lake of truthfulness would not permit me to say such a thing in any other vein, and an inherent and lasting regard for womankind in general would not permit me to locate such a place just now; but it will be a good place for them in the future come.

Another fine strip of land yawns lonely between Milford and Minersville, the section being in fact the western limit of the other spoken of, due to come along unknowingly to the center of life separating it from Tule district, about 100 miles north. Perhaps the land last spoken of would be more productive than any other, as the portions of it bordering on the Beaver "river" that have been cultivated have shown splendid results. But it is a problem whose solution is so rapid that the longing spoken of is very narrow indeed, and to get water upon it elsewhere is or has so far been utterly out of the question. The situation is somewhat aggravated by the circumstance that the Lincoln mines, one of the most silver-lead deposits of the West, use been abandoned because it has been found impossible to overcome the water encountered in the shaft. This mine is a good deal higher than any part of the land spoken of, yet the water pumps in so fast as the 6 at Minersville have been able to get it out; the people here are thus constrained by the double trouble of there being no water where it is wanted, and any amount of it where it is not wanted. The immediate location being within a mile of each other and the lower adjoining the two waterless ones. If any one of nature's revenges, I would like to find out what good it is to last.

Speaking of freaks of nature, they are somewhat abundant hereabout, adding being more strikingly unique than the physical aspect of the country in places. In the early days, when the earth was and so hard a crust, it has been alleged, but a huge liquid mass, it seems as if the forces within and without made things so lively for a while that the whole surface was heaved into ridges, and in the cooling time came along and put a scientific destruction by the waters, but only a hasty consideration of it a contemplation of the upper row of ridges, it is believed, was and the Big Virgin "river"—which sometimes has enough water in it to make the bed real damp—that regularly and system because sandy, hollow terms. The only assured thing is that the next development will be altogether different from the present one and all others. The country is on its side in places, on its back in others, and in others still on its head, and tangled up everywhere. There used to be a road south of Virgin City that led across the stream just spoken of and then on up the canyon through which it flows. This road at this particular place was considered extremely crooked even for this country, meaning that description should never be attempted; it has been likened to a corkscrew, but this has regularity and form, while the road has neither. A stranger seeying the feat of getting to the other side of the ravine by means of that road would as likely as not after trying to follow it two or three hours find himself at the place where he started. If not back of that, with his wagon reposing on three wheels at a point he could not describe and might never be able to find again. Some people may say that this is an exaggeration; but it is any more so than the face of nature itself at the places spoken of, then surely old Munchausen must rest uneasily in his tomb. That the soil wherever cultivated is productive in the highest degree, and the roads on the whole as good as human hands can make them, is but a tribute to those hands and the brains which control them. They have steadfastly maintained the work of subjugation and made themselves prosperous and happy under circumstances which would have caused the average tenderfoot to shrivel up and be blown away.

The St. George division of the Fifth district court came to a close on Friday and Judge Higgins with the paraphernalia of his court is on his way to Parowan, where a term opens on Thursday next. But little business of consequence has so far been transacted.

There is a good deal of excitement over the mineral discoveries at Desert Springs, and men are leaving here every day for the land of promise.

INVITED TO TENNESSEE.

Governor Wells Receives a Cordial Letter From the Chief Executive of the Big Bend State.

Governor Heber M. Wells has received the following from the governor of Tennessee:

Dear Sir: It is my pleasure to formally announce to you, and through you to the people of your great state, the fact that the state of Tennessee will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its admission into the Union by holding a grand industrial interstate and international exposition in the city of Nashville, beginning September 1, 1896, and continuing 100 days.

As this will be the first instance in which such an event will be conducted in the manner proposed, it is the desire and intention of the citizens of Tennessee to give to it that magnitude and importance which the dignity of the occasion demands. It will be our pleasure, with grateful hearts and pain for pride, to call to mind the heroism and sacrifices of the men and women who made possible the Tennessee of today. We will review with pride the part Tennessee has taken in the affairs of our great republic, and it shall be our pleasure too to inculcate in the hearts and minds of our children greater love for Tennessee, for her clear skies and the American Union.

I desire to invite yourself and the honored citizens of your State to join with us in this season of rejoicing, to come among us, to partake of our hospitality and good cheer, and through the influence of this event to renew and strengthen the bonds of perfect love and American citizenship. I shall not only consider it a pleasure, but a great privilege as well, to have you with us at some time during the continuance of the above-mentioned exposition.

The details for carrying into execution the plans for the Tennessee Centennial and International exposition have been placed in the hands of our best citizens—men and women selected alone by patriotic impulse—and I desire to commend these gentlemen and ladies to your kind consideration.

Again urging your kindly interest in this enterprise, I have the honor to remain, yours very truly,

PETER TURNEY, Governor.

FRED W. KNOX.

Out of Luck, and With Only $5 to Get to Salt Lake With.

The Sacramento, Cal., Record Union of Sunday says: Officers Biggins and Wilson, while hunting about for suspicious characters last night, ran up against a young man in Chinatown whom they took to the police station and who may prove to be an "interesting" captive.

The man gave his name as Fred W. Knox, and says he is from Los Angeles. He had among his effects an employe's ticket over the Los Angeles & Pasadena railroad, and it bears the name. He claims to be a civil engineer, and probably is one, as a memorandum book that he carries contains the names and addresses of several persons of that profession. He also has a small case of draughtsman's implements.

In the book he carries is written a letter addressed: "My Dear Wife," and dated at San Francisco, February 7th. In it he tells her of being out of luck, with nothing to do, and only $5 with which to get to Salt Lake. He had just been to the jail to see a friend, but he had been taken away to Salt Lake.

But what causes the police to believe the man is not "straight" is the fact that in his memorandum book are pasted the signatures of perhaps thirty or forty persons, all cut from letters or documents of some kind, and it is surmised that these had been collected for use in filling out checks. Among them is the autograph of Marian Harland, the authoress. Color is given to this suspicion by the fact that he had in his pocket three blank checks, one on the Bank of Watsonville, one on the Bank of Hayward and the other on the Bank of Reno. On these checks are certain figures, perforated with back instruments, one being "$500.00." These checks, it is supposed, were to be filled in with a corresponding sum, and then one of the signatures appended.

Entries in his book shows that he has been in Denver, Pueblo and many other places, and it is thought many of the signatures are those of Los Angeles people, though some are undoubtedly of persons in the East. The man is an opium fiend, and had a full opium supply.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The attendance at the Theater last night, where As You Like It was presented by Miss Effie Ellsler and her company was considerably larger than that of the previous evening and the play was followed with considerable interest. Miss Ellsler's Rosalind was a sweet character, lovely in its simplicity and faithfulness. Mr. Blinn's Orlando was also very good, and the principal characters were so well supported the play was a thoroughly enjoyable one from beginning to end. One feature of it, which was particularly appreciated, was the "cuckoo song," rendered by Miss Ellsler in her bewitching manner and revealing that she is the fortunate possessor of a sweet, musical voice, well trained. Frequent applause was accorded the players.

The engagement of Miss Anna Eva Fay at the Theater opens tonight. The little lady is confident she can please everybody with her mysterious performances. Miss Fay, her special manager says, has had the honor of appearing before crowned rulers of Europe, and she carries as a souvenir a watch presented her by King Oscar II, in person.

At the Grand, Harvest and at the Lyceum, Bills are drawing good houses. Rumor has it that Miss Tittell is about to leave the latter place and that an actress from San Francisco is to be engaged in her stead. Miss Tittell is one of the favorites of the Lyceum.

Supreme Court.

The Supreme court met at the usual hour this morning with Chief Justice Zane presiding. The opinion of the court in the case of C. L. Cole, appellant, vs C. Duchenne was delivered by Judge Miner. The court affirmed the ruling of the lower court.

Brigham Young Trust company vs Henry Wagner, appellant. The case was argued by J. A. Williams for appellant and by Attorney Harlow Ferguson in reply; it was submitted and taken under advisement.

Before Judge Young.

The following cases were disposed of in Judge Young's court today:

Mary Hurton vs H. M. Hurton for divorce; defendant restrained from disposing of his property and ordered to show cause on the 15th inst. why order should not be made permanent during pendency of suit.

Thomas F. Tolhurst vs Elizabeth Jones Tolhurst; plaintiff ordered to show cause on 21st inst. why he should pay the defendant alimony, costs, and attorney's fees as prayed for in defendant's cross complaint.

ABSOLUTE SUPERIORITY

THE BASIS OF DR. G. W. SHORES' NOTABLE SUCCESS

Superior Training, Superior Experience, Superior Skill, Superior Ability is What Has Made Dr. Shores the Master of Diseases—Capable of Curing Where Others Fail.

Heaven's blue dome is as high above the earth that men must look up to gaze upon its beauties.

Dr. G. W. Shores' famous system of disease treatment is so far superior to all other methods, and cures so rapidly and so far beyond the ones so great in curing chronic and long-seated cases, that he stands a veritable colossus among the quack pretenders that infest this country and they look up to him, imitate and copy him—they try to follow him, but fail. Shores has no rivals, he has none to equal, for his methods are so different from those in general use as far from night.

In Doctor Shores' work there are no misrepresentations, no lights colored rapacious to prey upon the mind of the weak and confiding, in short no deception of any kind, self or nature but the plain unvarnished truth.

Every home is a sufferer cause to Doctor Shores, the case is given the most careful consideration, if curable you will positively be cured so, and if incurable you are not deceived by false hope. Doctor Shores gives you the benefit of his years of study and experience and does for you what he can, but will never tell you he can cure you unless he can—never keep your money hoping up to extend a few week month and finally in the end let you drop in mortification, confusion and despair. Such methods are the earmarks of quacks, charlatans and rogues and the treatment and cure of disease by them failing he can be trusted to the best advantage. Remember the "cures" worse or what know them." Don't take any man's unsupported word, but ask the people, test and try each statement to the exactness of truth, and refuse all found wanting.

Thousands of our home people have paid in their every dollar for the specious promises of pioneer to cheap for the people to go and see them—get the truth from their own lips, then bear in mind that "what has been done for others can be done for you" and go to Doctor Shores at once and get the cure you need to-day; don't put it off till tomorrow or next week, such means may prove fatal to your restoration to health.

Remember that you can come to Doctor Shores, "the People's Doctor" as you would go to your own friend, without fear or shame, and can get a thorough examination and the expert advice free of all charge and feel as welcome as if you paid hundreds of dollars for it.

And remember further that when you begin treatment the whole and only cost to you, no matter what the circumstances of your case or the nature of your disease will be a few cents a month, so cheap—so low, and the cost never and pays for everything, time, skill, watchful care, tenderness and all medicines with cures.
