FROM THE COAST.

Return of Marshal-Elect Pratt From California.

A STORMY STEAMSHIP VOYAGE.

How a Utah Boy Has Established Himself in Business in Portland.

Arthur Pratt, city marshal-elect, returned home from the coast on the 9:15 Rio Grande Western passenger train last night. This afternoon he was found at his office and interviewed by a News representative. Mr. Pratt, his wife and two children started on their journey to the coast a little over two weeks ago. They stopped over at Portland a few days en route.

"The distance between that city," said Mr. Pratt, "and San Francisco was covered on the steamship Columbia. There were 217 passengers aboard and our ride down the Columbia river to Astoria, ninety miles, was as delightful as the heart could desire. But when we crossed the bar and got fairly into the waters of the Pacific ocean there was an awful change. The wind blew a gale, the waves were transformed into mountains as high as houses, down which our boat would be plunged and covered with spray. To those who had never experienced the novelty of an ocean storm the change was frightful. For two or three days during our stay in Portland the observations at the government weather bureau indicated that there was trouble ahead. I listened to this, but said nothing, as I did not wish to startle my wife, and accordingly kept quiet. The captain of the steamer declared the storm the worst he encountered for many months and remained on deck day and night ready for any emergency. The passengers kept well in-side and was seldom seen out of their rooms.

"During the worst of the storm," said Mr. Pratt, "I was thrown from my bunk clear across a big state room that I occupied with my family with a force and violence that caused me to wonder where I was at. We arrived at San Francisco twelve hours late, fortunately without serious injury to the passengers, though many of them were badly very sick. An interesting sight was the steamship City of New York, which was lying on the rocks where she was stranded, near the Golden Gate lighthouse, several weeks ago. It was thought she would be broken to pieces during the storm that caught us, but she stood the test nobly, and when we left hopes were still entertained of raising and saving her.

Regarding San Francisco Mr. Pratt said: "We remained there eight days and enjoyed ourselves exceedingly. San Francisco has a model police department of 400 men and a chief, Mr. Crowley, who is a man among men—he wins same community respect among all the better elements of society, while it strikes terror to the hearts of evil-doers. For nearly, if not quite, twenty years Chief Crowley has been identified with the police force of that city. He treated me in a most courteous manner and gave me much valuable information. It was my good fortune to see the police while at drill. They were temporarily armed with rifles and their evolutions were of the military order. The San Francisco police are the crack drill organization of California and are subject to the strictest rules and regulations.

"Chief Crowley has fought vigorously and well the saloon and gambling elements, promoters of lottery schemes, dings and lewd women during his official career. He is not wealthy and his honesty is universally recognized.

"The Midwinter Fair is freezing things up very much in San Francisco. The buildings are well under way and the Fair will open on January 1st. The Fair grounds are situated in the Golden Gate Park about two miles south of the Palace hotel, or the central part of the city."

Mr. Pratt says that while in Portland he met Zera Snow, a Utah boy who served as assistant district attorney for this Territory under Judge Van Zile for several years. Mr. Snow, he says, is one of the leading attorneys of Portland and chief corporation counsel for the Union Pacific throughout the State of Oregon. He has a big practice, a splendid reputation, a magnificent home and happy family. Mr. Snow is a brother of Utah's surveyor general, George W. Snow.

While it is not likely that Mr. Pratt will make sweeping changes in the police force by introducing new features it will be safe to say that when he takes the reins on January 1st that it will not be long before the effect will be visible to the public.

THIRD DISTRICT COURT.

The Brennan-Norrell Case Before Judge Zane Today.

In Judge Zane's court this morning was resumed the hearing of the case of George Brennan vs. O. W. Norrell et al., which commenced yesterday afternoon. There are 10c of the last dealets it. On July 14, 1893, the defendants, who did business under the firm name of Henry & Norrell, went before Justice Kreager and swore to a complaint against Brennan, claiming the sum of $188.20, and that he was about to leave the country for the purpose of defrauding them. Judgment was entered against the defendant for the amount demanded. Brennan then sued Henry & Norrell in Justice Leatrice's court to collect the sum of $200, alleged to have been assessed as damages by reason of his arrest. On the hearing he testified that he had paid his attorney a large amount for services rendered, and that court issued to the jury for $200 as damages and $50 for attorney's fees, from which judgment the defendants appeal. The defendants then alleged that Brennan was guilty of perjury when he testified as to the amount paid his attorney, and the case was taken before Judge Zane. The jury instructed him on the charge in October, 1892, but the case never reached a hearing until October 11th of the present year, when he was tried and found guilty. A motion for a new trial was made, and pending a decision of the motion embezzlement was deferred, and the matter has since been hanging fire.

Attorneys Rand and J. R. Anderson now appeared for the plaintiff and C. O. Whitney as for the defendant.

In the end the jury found for the defendant.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In the case of the Stonos Utah Grocery company vs. O. C. Lockner et al. motion was made and granted to limit and take testimony at Park City. An order was also made allowing the clerk mileage.

In the case of Louis Trasher vs. Alexander Pollard, tried yesterday, a thirty days' stay was allowed to file statement on motion for a new trial.

F. E. Gregg vs. Wm. Dunbar et al. Default; judgment for plaintiff as made of recently related.

In the case of James W. W. Fitzgerald vs. Wm. Dunbar, the death of the defendant was mentioned and the case was continued.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE WORLD'S FAIR will be represented at the Theater on Monday and Wednesday evenings next in a series of not stereoptican pictures. The spectacle is said to be a magnificent one, and one that faithfully shows the wonders of the great Fair.

The Thirteen Club, ruled by the Mendelssohn Quartette club of Denver, occupies the Theater next Tuesday evening. We hope the entertainment will be well patronized, just for the sake of the ends. Really next to several of the musicians from Denver, a city that we feel proud to claim as our sister, we have seldom seen such a good Tabernacle crowd. But the managers of the concert ought to know from experience and recent examples that it is only by personal canvass that a liberal entertainment can be made entirely successful in Salt Lake City.

FINED ONE DOLLAR.

Experience of Editor Wallis, Formerly of Ogden.

Through his attorney, J. H. Hawley, Editor Wallis, of the Morgenbladet, on Monday pleaded guilty to the charge of violation of the anti-lottery law and was fined $1 by United States Judge Boalty, says the Boise Statesman. Mr. Wallis' offense consisted in publishing an advertisement offering a prize, to be drawn for, as a means of increasing his circulation. The authorities took the matter up here with a view of having the law strictly defined that to prosecute the editor. Mr. Wallis was indicted, and Judge Boalty interpretably, in an opinion on a demurrer, held that the publication was in violation of the anti-lottery law. The left Editor Wallis, practically to alternative but to plead guilty.

Both Mr. Hawley and District Attorney Ward addressed the court in Mr. Wallis' behalf. They were satisfied the defendant had innocently violated the law and urged the court to be as lenient as possible.

Judge Beatty said he did not think Editor Wallis had intentionally broken the law. Although, ordinarily ignorance of the law was no excuse, there were circumstances in connection with this case of a peculiarly mitigating nature, and a nominal fine would better subserve the ends of justice than severe punishment.

CLEVELAND WILL ANSWER.

But Whether Directly or in a Message is the Question.

INFORMATION ON THE HAWAIIAN MATTER IS AT HANDY—THERE'S VILLAS'S LATE INTERVIEW.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—It is the opinion gathered from the statements that there is response to the resolution of the Senate calling for information on the Hawaiian affairs. The information will be given, and whether as a formal response to the Senate resolution or in a special message from the President which have no use of the resolution, has not yet been determined. The information I gathered was can be had at any time. It was apparently put in shape to accompany the President's forthcoming special message upon the annexation question when the message yesterday.

There is some but authority for saying Minister Willis's present instructions are similar to those of Mr. Blount. It is probable the instructions to the Minister are to be so phrased as to enable the provisional government to allow the queen to resume her throne. It is intimated from responsible sources that the queen will be asked to go to Washington and be received by the President, with the provisional government leaders as guarantee of protection by the United States.
