SHOWELL INDICTED.

Several of His Henchmen Are in the Same Boat.

NO ARRESTS HAVE YET BEEN MADE.

Judge Howell Seen by a "News" Reporter Regarding the Matter This Afternoon.

One Showell, who has figured prominently and unfortunately before the Salt Lake public, it is stated on undoubted authority, is now made uneasy by the fact that an indictment is hanging cloudy over and very close to his official head, a fact that is causing him a great deal of uneasiness.

By yesterday's telegraph also came the refreshing news that several of his most trusted henchmen are to precisely the same boat. The information, while important, is only quasi-startling, from the fact that such action on the part of the proper authorities has long been expected. There were a few who almost doubted that the seditious charges would come to a climax, but that case it appears will be agreeably disappointed.

The matter was freely whispered about the corridors of the Third district court room today and so far as the indictment seems to have been found one cage has and as there had been no arrest made a NEWS representative called upon the court officials for an explanation regarding the matter. Among them Judge Howell, the assistant prosecuting attorney was spoken to. He declared that the information concerning the indictments had not been given out from his office and he was astonished at the fact that someone had been talking. The end is expected within a few days. In the meantime the public must wait.

Musical Contest Jollings.

The contest will in no way be interfered with by the meeting in the Assembly Hall Thursday night.

It will begin at 8 o'clock promptly in the large Tabernacle.

The entire juvenile choir will be present as well as the competing choirs.

The order of contest will be First—Boys' songs—Eight contestants. Second—Little girls' songs—Ten contestants. Third—Duets—Ten contestants. Fourth—Solos—Eight contestants.

Tickets are for sale now in stores, and can be had near the door tonight.

Choir leaders or committees should be at the Tabernacle promptly at half past three.

Guidance to the Priesthood.

Elder James E. Talmage delivered an address upon the above subject last evening in the Eighteenth Ward chapel, before the Eighth quorum of Elders. A fairly large audience assembled and listened with evident interest.

The speaker drew his argument and illustrations mainly from the Bible. Among them was the case of Miriam's murmuring against Moses and her punishment, the chastisement and submission of David to the authority of Saul the persecutor. Also the Lord's portrayal of the judgment day, when the righteous shall be rewarded and the wicked punished for their conduct to the "Lord's little ones" was effectively dwelt upon.

A vote of thanks was accorded Elder Talmage at the close for his highly edifying discourse.

IN THE HOLY LAND.

A Young Elder's Experiences and Impressions—Burning of the Great Mosque at Damascus.

Correspondence of DESERET NEWS.

Thinking a few lines from the "Holy land," relative to the future prospects of the Turkish mission, might be of interest to the readers of the NEWS, I will endeavor to set forth some of my views on this question.

The work of the Lord in this dispensation has as yet not had the consideration in Asia Minor, notwithstanding a number of the Elders have diligently labored in this part of the vineyard, to establish branches and gather out precious souls to help roll on the great and glorious latter-day work. When I say the work has not yet commenced, I mean, of course, comparatively speaking, for a number of souls have been found that were willing to bind themselves before the Lord, and receive baptism for the remission of their sins, and at Aleppo, and Aintab prosperous branches of the Church have been established, the members of which, while poor in this world's goods, are rich in spiritual blessings and gifts. And though as Alfalah the Saints are persecuted by their former religious ties, still they rejoice exceedingly in the testimonies they have received through faith and good works, and are ever ready to defend the principles they have espoused.

Elder F. A. Hatch, of Provo, Utah, is present at Aintab, studying the Turkish language and encouraging the Saints to lives of usefulness and honor before God. He reports a splendid feeling existing among them and considering everything, I think the outlook at Aintab is bright and full of promise.

The same be said of Aleppo where Elder Vezeller, a native teacher, is stationed and is diligently laboring for the upbuilding of God's kingdom on earth. A number of souls have been added to this branch recently, and the Spirit of God prevails among the saints. Two or three of the brethren are professional men, as is also Brother Vezeller, and their morning and evening and knowledge of the language are a great help to the spreading of the glad tidings. Elder Albert Herman from Bear Lake county spent considerable time in this part of the vineyard. He is now at Damascus trying to make an opening there. I fear with rather indifferent success, though when I was there a few weeks ago I was asked to be baptized. They are Arabs, and Arabs are, as a rule, very hard to impress with the importance of the rites and ceremonies of the Gospel. Their former education makes them to think that water baptism is too simple an ordinance to require any previous self-sacrifice or preparation. They exhibit great interest in the Gospel when they first hear it, and sometimes are so humble, but when it comes to baptizing or else and humbly bowing before the will of our Heavenly Father, and touching pride or self, they are not absolved enough; in a very short time they cool off, and then, of course, begins to call in the question. With the Armenians it is different, for they investigate and strive for the Holy Spirit by fasting and prayer, and take full advantage of the progress of the Lord's work in the world. Aleppo and Aintab, where a great part of the population are Armenians, while here in Damascus and Syria, where the great majority of the people are Arabs, the success of the Elders has not been so marked. Another drawback in the Syrian part of the mission is the language, which extremely difficult of itself, is made still more so by the many other languages a missionary is continually coming in contact with. The weather of this week in this mission is certainly enough to which to impose the language under varying circumstances, and when an Elder is referred he is succeeded by some one totally inexperienced regarding the tongue and customs of this ancient and peculiar people.

I understand a city has been started in Utah in which future missionaries may gain at least a foundation of modern Arabic. I would recommend that those who study Arabic with the view of filling a mission in this country acquire also a knowledge of German, for this language is indispensable in missionaries in Palestine. Our Elders have met a number of those who in the German colonies throughout this land, and no doubt there are a few more waiting for the rays of the Gospel light to bind to on them.

Though my views concerning the Eastern people have undergone some change since arriving here a year ago, I still believe there is a great work to be done in this land. Ministers of the Holy or Israel will be found outside the dark pales and be more inclined to listen to the Gospel. The Elders will have to be patient and full of faith and Christian love, for they will certainly meet with much opposition from those who profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus as well as from the followers of Mahomet. The Greeks and Christians and the Heretics, though flying different colors, are just as much a part of Palestine today as when the Captain of our salvation was made to suffer the death of a malefactor on Calvary, and though the spirit of the age prevents them from doing the same with God's servants in this day, they DO their hands as high to heaven, and pull just as long and strong at the shackles of Proclete, Apostles, and Missions following, as did the self-righteous people who cried, "His blood be on us and our children," eighteen hundred years ago. Our Lord "taught as one having authority" and had the ear of the people, but all the false religious systems of His day, and His only authorized and consecrated servants of all ages have done the same thing. No wonder they were, and are, rejected and opposed by the great majority of the world. The stone that was hewn out of the hill Cumorah "without hands" continues to roll and gather moss and the "kingdoms of this world are mostly become the Kingdom of our God and His Christ," and I am satisfied but a bright future for the Turkish mission.

DON C. W. MEARS.

P.S.—Since writing the above I have received a letter from Brother Herman from which I learn of the destruction, by fire, of the "Moral Mosque" in Damascus. This magnificent building was at one time a heathen temple of either Greek or Roman architecture, as its massive stones and beautiful arches indicate. After Constantine's conversion the Christians built a church on the site, and it was dedicated to John the Baptist. Three centuries later, when the city fell into the hands of the Moslems, the church was divided, by treaty, equally between the followers of Mahomet and the followers of Christ, and for the next century these two churches were occupied side by side. "In the accession of Walid, the sixth Khalif of the Omeyyades," says Ferguson, "the whole church was demolished by the Moslems. The Christians protested and showed that, by the terms of their original treaty, their rights were solemnly guaranteed to them. But Moslem policy, then as evinced as it is still, found an easy mode of evading inconvenient treaties; and the poor Christians were compelled to submit. The Khalif immediately entered the church with guards and ordered them to remove or destroy every vestige of Christian worship. Standing on the great altar Walid himself directed the work of spoliation. Seeing his position, one of his followers, more superstitious or more timid than the rest, thus addressed him: 'Prince of the faithful, I tremble for your safety. The power of that image, against which you stand, may be exerted against you.' 'Fear not for me,' replied the proud Moslem, 'for the first spot on which I shall lay my battle-axe will be that image's head.' Thus saying, he lifted his weapon and dashed the idol to pieces. The Christians shrieked every at horror, but their voices were drowned in the triumphant shout, 'Allahu-Akbar.' Having thus claimed possession, Walid spared neither time nor expense in decorating the building. He made it the most magnificent mosque in his wide dominions. And even now, neglected and shattered as it is, it has few equals in the Mohammedan empire."

The mosque was surrounded by business houses, bazaars, etc., and I understand the entire streets of bazaars were entirely burned up. Brother Herman says when the fire started the greatest confusion reigned. Great crowds of excited people gathered around, stores and shops were pulled and their contents carried off by marauding Arabs. He was carrying a room in which were very many goods belonging to his branch recently, and he says that he just fell out if he attempted to move, everything he had was stolen and in such a fix he was unable to be very successful in recovering the goods. I think the "saint" had shutters, locked down and in proper place himself in the Lord's ranch. The house was saved. The wind blowing from the east kept the hungry flames from licking up the interior of a place, which to the surprise of the hundreds and thousands of people on that street. When I reflect how closely the mosque and house were connected and surrounded by very dry and inflammable structures, I marvel that the latter was spared, while the former, a large stone structure, with a great many outer buildings, was totally destroyed.
