GONE WITH THE FINS.

Where is the thrill of last night's feast?
Where is the star of last night's star?
Where is the music that echoed hence?
Gone where all the past goes by.
For last night's music is over and done,
The opulent banks of the long gas gone,
And the work that echoed back here to people
Vista's what we realize gone to.

Where are the chairs that we used to wear?
Where are the fountains we used to hear?
Where are the lamps that lighted the way?
Gone where the gas companies go.
For the city has changed and the comers too gone,
The city we are seeing a brighter light,
For the dark days used as it used which,
And the gaping hat gones were dead, too.

Where are the tells that we drank Bohemian?
Where is the pie that we ate? Gone!
Where are the dishes we had every day?
Where have the pies gone to?
Gone with the pies and the cakes we ate,
Gone with the dishes we used to eat,
Gone with the pies we used to eat.

Where are the girls we used to know?
Where are the fellows we used to know?
Where are the fellows we used to know?
Gone where the gas companies go.
For the city has changed and the comers too gone,
The city we are seeing a brighter light,
For the dark days used as it used which,
And the gaping hat gones were dead, too.

Where are the tells that we drank Bohemian?
Where is the pie that we ate? Gone!
Where are the dishes we had every day?
Where have the pies gone to?
Gone with the pies and the cakes we ate,
Gone with the dishes we used to eat,
Gone with the pies we used to eat.

You can't bring one back if you want to,
We can mourn the loss of pleasures,
Bring back the old gas and the old days,
Where was we to turn to?
For gas and present comes,
Do the fellows that used to come and read,
The bodies that used to come and feed,
And the times that used to happen?
The gas has gone and the seasons,
Robert J. Burdette in Rolling Stone Journal.

The Jewish Idea of Jesus.

Never would the name of Jesus have been uttered by the Jews with any feelings of admiration, had the gulf and the barrier of ages not intervened between them, his own kinsmen, at a time when it was deemed wise policy to exonerate the Roman prefect and his soldiers from the crime. We should at the thought of the millions that fell as victims to this righteous charge, but we do not blame Jesus for the crucifixion perpetrated in his name. Neither shall we consider Jesus as a performer of miracles to which quality alone, in judge from Rabbinical tradition, he left a lasting impression on the generality of Jews. These wonders cures formed his specialty of the entire class of Essenes, a sect of ardently zealous practicing baptism and in consulting of the Holy Ghost, from whom the carpenter's son of Nazareth claimed.

The greatness of Jesus lay in that he had new grandeur to bestow upon the Jews, in that he broke down the barriers of the school and brought the wisdom of life from the burning bush to the heart, thus striking the keynote of humanity. He actually became the Redeemer of the poor, the Friend of the outcast, the Comforter of the wretchedness. He lived both through His life and through His death as the man of sorrow, a deeper sorrow, a more intense calmness in suffering, sickness and sin. Life to Him a new holiness, a greater importance. And as He went forth to seek and provide for the lost sheep in Israel, so did the Church founded on His name go forth to redeem the poverty stricken, the lowest and the neglected, all the lower classes of society.

Christianity was the gospel for the poor and the despised. Belief in the words of love of Christ's and of Christ's mercy, entered among the lowest classes and the cross a new power of interest, a magnet, which was magic. Jesus represents the highest ideal of the Christian. Moses points to a higher type of manhood. Neither Moses nor Golgotha, but Zion is the focus and goal of united humanity. Old Christianity indeed doubtless and entirely true, the Jewish conception of the world's Judaism lowest Eros on, and holiness, righteousness and faith. Date, the earlier part of life, is also the elegant and more indispensable one. Still, we believe that, as has been recently so well said, the two together yield the perfect truth; their unity will make humanity whole and free.—Rev. Dr. K. Kohler, in the Monarch for March.

Stores of the Middle Ages.

The stores of the Middle Ages and of the era of the Roman emperors had Greenland Germany and Scandinavia, generally were built of brick, tiles or similar material, and were so large as to be extensive, some times taking up the whole side of a room, and in the latter country in winter the cowhouse and Markets were spread thereon and the family sled there in lieu of the bedsteads of succeeding years.

The fire was built at the bottom, and the heat and smoke passed through various flues, maintaining warmth, before they made their exit to the chimney. Some of these were faced with porcelain, and were highly ornamental. It may be remembered that a specimen of one of these was shown in the Swedish department of the Centennial exposition in Philadelphia in 1876.—Philadelphia Press.

Hearing the Facts.

"Sit down and put your hands and face," was the hearty invitation given me as I entered a Lincoln office recently and I smiled. I was pleased with the cordial manner and the thought of entering my face struck me as funny. Come to think of it, there is a good deal that is written in the dength. Why not set the face down in a quiet corner one day and read the lies of the morning by ourselves? Hearing is supposed to be good for sore eyes, and we may see a good deal of world and comprehend it, if we come to believe, but we see the same thing, differently, when affected by prejudice, when, now, hearing the facts, which, of course, lessens all those differences, and, when we have heard the facts, we can, in a quiet corner, see what we think.—Lincoln Journal.

Where Eagles Will Soon Be Unknown.

Eagles are now very rare in Lincoln County, Ore., but it is said they will soon cease to be seen in that section for good. The last eagle killed in the county was killed a few days ago by a farmer near Toledo. The bird measured 7 feet from tip to tip of wings and 3 feet from tip of tail to end of bill. The farmer thinks the bird must have been driven from its haunts by the snow.
