Amusements.

John S. Lindsay, supported by a first-class dramatic company, will present on Tuesday, Sept. 8th, "The Noble Outlaw," at the Salt Lake Theatre. Although this is not a new play, it has never been given in Salt Lake City. It is full of humor, and the plot is one that makes a lasting and elevating impression on the minds of all who hear the play.

On Wednesday, Sept. 9th, "The Wagonteaser" will be given. This play was presented for the first time on any stage about one week ago to one of the large houses of this Territory, it was received with gratifying success. Mr. Lindsay says he never witnessed such a flattering reception for any new play. There are in it many telling situations, and it brings up one of the issues of the hour, the labor question.

Mr. Lindsay's company is under a high state of discipline. These two plays have been rehearsed thoroughly, and the company has made especially for them. To a Salt Lake audience it is needless to dwell on Mr. Lindsay's popularity as an actor, and this, in connection with the fact that he is one of those who gave the legitimate drama a firm footing here in the earlier days, enlists him in a generous reception.

"Wonderland" continues to be as popular and entertaining as ever. Next week the principal features will be the "Royal Marionettes," the Parisian waxworkers, the Italian Gypsy Orchestra and Captain Chilesden's famous Indian collection.

Admission as usual, 10c. The division of order and regularity is observed.

JUDGE ZANE KEPT BUSY

Divorce Cases are Still in the Ascendant.

ONE OF THEM COMPROMISED.

A Number of Orders Made This Morning in a Variety of Matters.

Judge Zane was engaged nearly the whole of this morning in chambers, and transacted the following interesting business:

In the divorce suit of Mattie J. Brannan vs. George Brannan, on the ground of cruelty and failure to provide, Attorney Stewart represented the plaintiff, a good looking young woman about twenty-four years of age.

Her statement was, in effect, that she was married to the defendant at Sheldon, Vermont, on the 1st of January, 1888, and they came to Salt Lake in the following November, where she had resided ever since. He had refused to provide her with the necessaries of life, though an able-bodied man. He was a "hard cricker," and whenever he got any money he spent it in liquor. She has $2,000 in her name when she married Brannan, and $600 of this, which she possessed in cash, was spent in trying to make a home for him in spite of previous. Defendant had done very little work since their marriage, and what he had earned went chiefly in drink. During the Eight Hour law he lived in the city and had maintained himself by taking tickets and working out. She said he had deserted her and clothing and all he had bought for her was one pair of shoes. He called her all sorts of vile names; on one occasion "cuckolded" and struck her, and had threatened her life with both a gun and a knife. She had not lived with defendant since that. He was drunk when he attacked her. In reply to the court, plaintiff said the defendant was now residing in Sugar House Ward, and was a laborer.

A young man named Williams, a boarder at the plaintiff's house, testified as to the defendant's drunken habits and his bad conduct towards her. He had seen him threaten her when holding a large butcher knife in his hand. Defendant would "get drunk from Saturday night till Monday, and then be sick for two days afterwards."

Judge Zane granted the decree prayed for.

HE MADE'M PAID UP.

In the divorce suit of Elizabeth Brown vs. Alexander Brown, a motion was made by Attorney Barlow Ferguson asking upon the defendant to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt in neglecting to pay the alimony previously ordered by the court. Counsel said he had been informed on good authority that the defendant had stated he would not pay any more money than he had already paid. This, however, he denied.

It was explained to the court that $175 were still due from him.

Judge Zane ordered the defendant to pay $75 down forthwith, and the final hearing on the motion being postponed till September 14th.

RISEN AND MADE UP TO.

The proceedings in the divorce suit of McDougall A. Dayer vs. Jessie H. Kaylor again came up, this time in quite a new and unexpected shape.

Attorney Critchlow, who appeared for the defendant in the case, informed the Court that the parties had settled their differences and were now living together again as husband and wife. Plaintiff now filed a quasi desiring that the suit be dismissed and no further proceedings had therein.

Colo. Clark, representing the wife, said the allegations in the original complaint were very serious ones, as against the defendant. Plaintiff applied for an order temporarily restraining her husband from disposing of his property, and also cited him to show cause why he should not pay alimony. Her case had rested, the hearing, however, had never been had. It was time that the parties had now reconciled their differences, which was very proper, but he thought the defendant should be called upon to pay attorney's fees and certain costs.

Mr. Critchlow said his was an aggravated case of mother-in-law, and, as I am informed by the defendant, she was very active in having these proceedings instituted. He did not know on what principle counsel now seeks to have the defendant bound to pay in the way he has suggested, in view of all the circumstances, as it appears this was really a groundless action. I would like note to resist any such claim as that.

Colonel Kaylor — There is no mother-in-law in the case, let me say, except the one which a woman has for her daughter, who in this instance was lately married.

Judge Zane — Inasmuch as this motion is made for the dismissal of the proceedings, I am disposed not to make any order as to fees in this case. Let the case be dismissed. There is so much of this sort of thing just now (referring to the large number of divorce cases), that I am inclined to encourage compromises rather than otherwise.

THE HUGHES DIVORCE CASE.

In the long pending divorce case of Hughes vs. Hughes, Attorney Talbot informed the judge that he hoped to hear from the defendant at a later part of the day, and he would be in the court during the afternoon as to the present state of affairs.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Abraham Hosmer et al. vs. A. Heist et al. This case, which had previously been before the court, having reference to the dancing of the wife of Billy Lakemen, comic, was mentioned by Attorney Van Horne, who moved for an injunction order, which Judge Zane granted.

George H. Chasen vs. Martin T. Lindelof et al., by application of Attorney Bowman, leave was given to withdraw the answer of T. A Webster to this case.

In the matter of the Salt Lake and Hot Springs Railway Co. vs. the Salt Lake Mill and Elevator Co., an order was made, on motion of Attorney Critchlow, that the check pay over $500 to the plaintiffs.

In the case of Stephenson vs. Stephenson was set for trial on Sept. 14th.

Susan Duffer vs. J. Colson et al. On motion of Attorney Critchlow, the hearing in this case, on the order to show cause heretofore granted, was set for Sept. 14th.

M. G. Stringer vs. Gilbert L. Chamberlain. The motion to dismiss attachment in this matter, on application of Attorney H. J. Denny, was also set for hearing on Sept. 14th.

The cases of Larson and Henry Halley (for whom Attorneys Rawlins and Call appeared respectively) were mentioned. An order of the court is sought upon judgments obtained in the court below against the Utah Central Railroad Company, for the first case for $1410.65, and in that of Halley for $200, including costs, to have certain moneys in the hands of T. J. Hutchinson applied in satisfaction of these judgments. Plaintiffs were former employees of the defendant company, and the original claim was for back wages.

By consent the cases were ordered to stand over till 2 o'clock.

HE WANTS HIS COAT OUT.

Governor Thomas is in receipt of a petition praying for a suspension of sentence in regard to Dr. Singleton Hound, the notorious "Jack the Ripper" who has so will "leave the city forthwith." It is set forth in the petition that Hound is a native of Ireland, and "has always lived in the city and has maintained himself by taking tickets and working out. She said he has the deformed arm clothed and all he had bought for her was one pair of shoes. He called her all sorts of vile names; on one occasion "cuckolded" and struck her, and had threatened her life with both a gun and a knife. She had not lived with defendant since that. He was drunk when he attacked her. In reply to the court, plaintiff said the defendant was now residing in Sugar House Ward, and was a laborer.
