THE KAISER AND BISMARCK.

The Latter will be Permitted to Say all He Wants.

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—Since the North German Gazette gave denial of the report that the ministerial council had considered the question of prosecuting Bismarck, two utterances of the Emperor have been permitted to come out. Speaking to the Austrian ambassador, the Kaiser said: "The Duke of Lauenburg, as he styles the ex-chancellor, will not understand or yield himself to ... which are necessities of my ... but has never been intended ... the empire's tribunal should interfere to prevent his saying or writing whatever he likes, so long as he does not violate the law."

It is understood that the Kaiser's words were in answer to informal inquiries made by Emperor Francis Joseph.

Chancellor Von Caprivi, conversing with a member of the Reichstag, said: "The government has not the remotest intention of prosecuting either Bismarck or his newspaper organ. Bismarck's personality, associated as it is with the creation of the edifice of the empire, places him above the measures that might be taken toward less illustrious men."

... day, but the Parnell sympathizers demolished the platform which had been erected for the speaker's accommodation.

In the afternoon, responding to a calling delegation, Parnell reviewed the circumstances of the disputes in the party, conveying the idea that he had assumed his present position on finding the destinies of the party confided to McCarthy, a gentleman of great amiability of character, but without practical acquaintance with Ireland's wants.

He dwelt at length upon the unsatisfactory nature of

and declared that after so bungling the land question for ninety-one years that one-half the population was banished or starved to death and the remainder until the League was founded were unable to hold up their heads in the presence of a landlord or bailiff, the Imperial Parliament would make another pretended settlement and declare the Irish legislature unentitled to any power in the matter, and in the second place the Imperial Parliament would keep control long enough to renew the fifteen-year tenancies, so that in the first fifteen years of the Irish Parliament they would have a constabulary with rifles, swords, bayonets, etc., collecting back rents fixed by the Imperial Parliament.

In reference to the police, Parnell asserted that the best judges considered a force of four thousand men were more than sufficient to preserve the peace in Ireland. Why, he asked, should four thousand men be kept to trample upon Irish freedom and throttle Irish aspirations? They were kept because it was intended to keep the land question within the jurisdiction of the Imperial Parliament. This was a vital, and the most vital question for Ireland now.

"Gladstone," concluded Parnell, "gave me twenty-four hours to quit. I could not give the meanest servant less. I have no alternative but to take you into my confidence and offer to stand cheerfully by your decision and your orders."
