WRIT OF REVIEW APPLIED FOR

Salt Lake County Claims to Have Been Deprived of the Right to Tax,

And Order Issued from Three Railroad Companies' Rolling Stock Ex-Creased Assessable Aug. 30th.

Deputy County Attorney Orlando F. Pulman, on behalf of Salt Lake county, filed an affidavit for a writ of review against the State Board of Equalization in the Supreme court today, wherein defendant was directed to certify to the proceedings in the matter of the apportionment of the rolling stock assessable of the Rio Grande Western, Oregon Short Line and the Salt Lake and Cedar railroads is being alleged that the apportionment is arbitrary, irregular and contrary to law.

The complaint was form that the method adopted and followed by the State board in making the apportionment among the counties of the assessment of the rolling stock of the railroad companies, was to apportion the same in the different counties through which the railroads run, in proportion to the number of miles of track now or may within the boundaries of the counties, so that each county was assigned such proportion of the whole assessment, as the number of miles of main track within the county, bears to the whole number of miles of main track of the road within the State.

A statement of the apportionment to Salt Lake county is then given, which is held to be illegal, by which the board did not apportion the rolling stock in proportion to its value in the various counties, but in the value of another class, viz, railroad main track in the various counties.

By reason of this erroneous and illegal action, plaintiff says it has been damaged in that it has been deprived of the right to tax and derive revenue from property located within Salt Lake county.

Plaintiff prays for an issuance of a writ of review, the annulling of the apportionment and for a new apportionment to order that the rolling stock assessment of the several railroad companies may be allotted to Salt Lake county.

Chief Justice Zane ordered that a writ issue, made returnable Saturday, August 20th.

THE WOODMEN'S EXCURSION.

What With Rain and Wind They Had a Most "Glorious" Time at Saltair.

The elements were against the Woodmen of the World yesterday, for along towards evening it rained "pitchforks" and made things most uncomfortable for the two thousand and odd people who had assembled at Saltair.

It suffered quite a drenching. The rain came in from all directions. The big pavilion shortly after the storm, resembled a raft wrecked on the high seas, while men, women and children, and in their summer apparel, sought refuge in every conceivable corner, with tables upturned in front of them to keep out the wind-driven torrent. People who had figured on "having themselves loose" as the shades of evening were falling, did so, but in a different direction from that anticipated, as the greater portion of them, fastened to the cars, flying all southbound, to the tune, flying all southbound, to the tune, flying all southbound, to the tune
