In Woman's World

Hon. Gifford Pinchot, chief of the United States Forest Service, pays a high tribute to the work of women in all branches of civic improvement and problems looking to the public welfare. Speaking particularly of the women of California and the gigantic tasks they undertake and accomplish, he says: "I have known of no case of persistent agitation under discouragement finer in a good many ways than the fight to save the great grove of Calaveras big trees. The government is going to have possession of that and preserve it for all future generations. Time and again, the women have made it perfectly clear what they can do in this work. Now, let me suggest that obviously the first point of attack is the stopping of waste in our forests. Women can bring—and this is my suggestion—they can bring, as no other body of citizens can bring, to the children in the schools the idea of the wickedness of national waste and the value of public saving. The issue is a moral one, and they are the first teacher of right and wrong."

Only one married couple in a thousand live to celebrate their golden wedding.

Long engagements are costly in Russia. There etiquette requires the young man to send his fiancée a daily present.

In ancient Greece, a divorced man could not marry a woman younger than the one he had discarded.

A feature of the Japanese wedding ceremony is a bonfire, whereas the bridegroom burns all the bride's old playthings.

Polyandry is practised in Tibet. It is common there for a woman of intelligence and caste to have six or seven husbands.

The value of color is something that a clever dressmaker understands fully. Two dresses alike, but cut alike, line for line, but in different shades of the same silk, and one of them will make a woman look slender, straight and supple; and the other will give her an unaccountably dumpy, round-shouldered, square-cut figure. All women ought to make a careful study of colors whether they have a professional interest in the matter—as I have—or not. It is especially important for women of small means who have so few gowns that they must live with these of their choice very intimately. A woman who can buy 20 or 25 dresses a year can afford to make an occasional mistake when her fancy for a trying color or a too daring line carries her away for a moment. She can hang an unsuccessful dress in a closet and forget about it, and it does her no harm; but in her choice of her one new gown must wear it whether or no—a harsh commentary on her vanity, her poor judgment or her bad taste. It always want to help women of that kind the mistakes are so easy to make—so cruelly hard to pay for. Yet one can only tell her to choose carefully and buy slowly.—The Delineator for June.

Is "bridge" doomed? The devotees of its new rival—"auction," or "auction bridge," claim that it and that it has already outstayed its welcome. Be that as it may, the new game is exciting an enthusiasm in clubs and card circles far greater than attended the introduction of the present game. The distinction of having originated "auction" is claimed by the Bath club of London, but this claim is disputed in favor of "Siberia," a Russian game, practically identical with the new diversion.

The main outline of the game follows that of bridge, but a kind of poker element is introduced by the players bidding up for the privilege of "making" or "heavy" and as heavy penalties are able for failure to win the number of odd tricks specified in the "contract." There is added to the game the exciting feature of actual play, with diagrams of adversaries on by skillful betting to bid higher than they can possibly win, and so scoring from their defeat instead of by one's own hand. In fact, at "auction," it is quite possible to lose the rubber and yet make heavy winnings on it. It is perhaps too soon to say whether it is essentially a better game than bridge, but certainly it is more exciting, and calls for a different kind of skill, and has the peculiar faculty of never tiring, and that in an utterly hopeless position.

Capt. H. Browning, better known to the card world as "Slambo" of the Westminster Gazette, has issued a timely handbook, "Auction Bridge and How to Play It" (E. P. Dutton & Co.), containing rules, principles and illustrations of actual play, with diagrams of the hands, and every assistance for the would-be auction player.

Successful women lawyers are much more rare than successful doctors. Since the days of Mother Eve every one has told every one else that woman was not logical, that she acted from instinct rather than from intellect, etc. Yet by some miraculous chance the fact remains that there are at the present day women lawyers of such capacity and renown that they have been entrusted with delicate commissions by the president of the United States, who trusted them above their supposedly superior brothers in the profession.

It is true that sex is a hindrance to the woman lawyer, but if she resolutely puts aside all womanishness, she will find that true womanliness is as great an asset for her as for the woman doctor. The law course covers usually three years, and the fees are about a hundred dollars a year; this does not include the graduate course, which lasts a year at a cost of about a hundred and twenty-five dollars.

It is a discouraging profession for a woman, and unless she is absolutely sure that she is fitted for it, no college girl should undertake the long years of preparation. It takes brains and hard work and perseverance, and it is those who are lacking in any of these qualities we say emphatically, "Let it alone!" But to those who are sure of themselves and are bound to succeed, "Go in and win!"

"Many girls imagine that getting a position in the business world today is a matter of lucky chance, a trick of good looks or the effect of a mysterious 'pull' with somebody in authority. As a matter of fact, the only thing necessary to work the charm, but it is by far the rarest product offered in the market by the thousands of girls who are yearly trying to break their way into industry in New York City."

It certainly does not do merely to ask for a job in any vocation these days. One has got to prove, by some diplomatic stroke or otherwise, that one is better than most people for the place. For instance, a lawyer, who had endured a long and exasperating string of incompetent men stenographers, was finally persuaded to try a woman in the place. He was plainly skeptical of the change. Women were flighty, he was assured, and they did not have the proper sense of business obligation in subordinating all personal and social claims to their office duties.

"A week after he had engaged a young woman, however, he happened to remark in her presence that he would give anything to remember the date of a client's last call."

"It was two weeks ago, on Thursday at 3 o'clock," answered the girl promptly, and he came to see you about that rebate matter in the 'L. and N.' and if you will remember, he called two days before that to ask your advice about selling the property in New Haven to the New Haven and Hartford; and on Saturday, three weeks ago, to consult you about the Symonds' deal."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the lawyer, utterly dumbfounded, "how do you remember all these dates and details?"

"It is a part of my profession to remember what goes on in the office and keep a written record of it," announced the girl proudly, and she showed a drawer by the side of her desk in which she kept a diary, indexed, of the professional visits, telephone calls, cases dispatched, and in fact, every detail of office routine that transpired daily.

"It is too good to be true," raved the lawyer ecstatically. "A stenographer who thinks of her work as a profession, and a girl who is willing to do more than she is asked to do, is beyond my experience in human nature." Needless to add, a man typist never again invaded that official sanctum, and the girl who took her work as a professional was advanced year by year to a splendid salary."

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, July 18.—Mrs. Ernest Green recently entertained a party of Salt Lake and New York friends at dinner in honor of the Fourth of July. Red, white and blue were the colors employed in the decorations—the affair was delightful in every way, the party being a congenial one, and the genial hostess, assisted by her brother Mark, gave their friends a most pleasant time, a strong reminder of her father's, A. W. McCune's, hospitable entertainments.

Mrs. Green and her three children are expecting Mr. Green next week from the west where he has been for some time. Mr. Mark McCune returned from Utah Thursday evening and will take up his studies early in September, preparatory to entering Columbia.

Junius F. Wells came down from South Royalton, Vt., Tuesday on business, making a few brief calls on friends before leaving Wednesday for Boston on his way back. Mr. Wells is expecting a big number of Utahns at South Royalton for the 24th of July celebration and is making arrangements with several families whose farms are near the cottage for entertainment during the three days they will be there. President Rice and a few others from New York will go, Boston and the more eastern conferences will be better represented in numbers, the distance and expense being too great for those below Providence. Mr. Wells is indefatigable in his efforts to bring before the eastern people the design and object of "Memorial Cottage" and the "Monument," which have attracted wide spread interest throughout the state, the good accomplished will only be known in later years.

On Thursday, Elder Cecil Gates, who has been laboring in the Pennsylvania conference with Camden as his headquarters, arrived in the city on his way to Vermont where he will complete his labors in the mission field. Saturday evening, Elder Gates with his cousin, Elder Ross Beattie, left by boat for Boston, where they will visit with Irving Snow and the elders there for two days and then proceed to Vermont, to be present at the Twenty-fourth anniversary of the "Memorial Cottage." Elder Gates will then go to his new field and Elder Beattie return to his labors in New York City.

Mr. Joseph Scowcroft is still in New York and is not unkindful of his friends these warm days, when opportunity offers, he and several of them repair to the sea-shore. Last week he entertained Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Kohn at dinner and last evening Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Russell were his guests at Manhattan Beach and Coney Island; the rush for the ocean resorts is tremendous during the months of July and August.

Elders Eric and Walter D. Hammond spoke at today's services in the Latter-day Saints' hall. Elder Hammond has labored in the Brooklyn conference for two years and the last six months in the Providence, R. I., conference, filling a fine mission in both and making friends everywhere; he is now released to return home. Wednesday next he will leave in company with friends, going by way of Washington, where they stay a day, then on to Chicago and the home. Mr. Eric is here on business and will be in the city several weeks.

On Friday Mr. Matt Browning of Ogden arrived in the city making his headquarters at the Imperial with his friends, Messrs. Scowcroft and Douglass. Mr. Browning leaves tonight for Utica, Buffalo, Detroit and Chicago, business keeping him in each place for a short time, but he expects to reach home by the 25th. Mr. William Douglass of the Scowcroft firm, arrived in the city a week ago and will be here for another week. Mr. William McCune of the same house left for home several days ago. Mr. Scowcroft leaves next Saturday for the west.

The "Gay Hussars" begin the season's work Thursday next at Atlantic City. Mr. Frank Foster is now assistant stage manager and also in the cast under H. W. Savage; the fight is still on between Schubert and Savage over the "Gay Hussars," and despite all warnings, the latter will produce the piece the coming week, expecting to play New York early in the autumn.

Miss Anna Nelson of New England, who recently joined the Church, has come on to New York to make it her home for a year at least; she will go west with her family later on.

Wednesday Miss Sara Hendry, who has been in New York for several years, leaves for her home in Salt Lake going by boat to Galveston, where she will visit with friends, then will take the train for Los Angeles where she remains for several weeks with her sister, arriving in Salt Lake late in September. Miss Hendry has been a member of the Utah colony for so long that she will be greatly missed by everyone; her friends are many and all wish her the best of good luck wherever she makes her home. Busy Days in the Homes GETTING READY FOR THE BIG ENCAMPMENT

Nearly everyone has friends and relatives coming. Purchases are to be made, and the economical shopper looks to this store.

As the stores are closed to-day, Monday will be a lively shopping day. Here are a few of the good things we will offer you.

Look Them Over Carefully, For The Values Are Unusual!

Final Clean-Up Sale of Boys' and Girls' Spring and Summer Apparel at Half Price!

A half price sale in this department is an extraordinary opportunity for parents. All our goods are new—this season's purchases. They are selected from the best manufacturers in America. The regular prices are so low that half price means a much greater value than usual in such sales. To us it means an actual loss of a part of the original cost, but our policy is to begin each season with entirely new lines. The practice of marking boys' and girls' apparel at close figures has become recognized by mothers who make a point of a comparison of prices and values. This has influenced trade until the growth of the department has been remarkable. Announcement of sales, therefore, means a reliable reduction from regular prices already below the ordinary. Notwithstanding the sweeping half prices, we wish to emphasize the high grade values, the splendid workmanship, the admirable patterns and the neat styles.
