THE WILSON FAMILY.

Steps Taken for the Raise of its Scattered Members.

"Recognizing the obligations of children to parents, as the strength in union, we the descendants of Bradley Wilson, do hereby unite ourselves together under these articles of agreement, for the purpose of a writing genealogical information, as yet, and filling the memory of our ancestry, and of mutual assistance in assuring our virtues in our lives.

In pursuance herewith, we agree:

1. That the name of this association shall be "The Wilson Association of Utah."

2. That any relative by blood of Bradley Wilson or by become a member of this association by equity, in the articles of agreement, and shall be received by majority, they become an honorary member in the same manner.

3. That the officers of the association shall consist of a president, a vice president and a secretary and treasurer.

4. That a meeting of this association shall be held once year on or a set the first day of April, at Salt Lake City, Utah, for the election of officers and for the transaction of other business.

5. That each member of this association who has a family or divorce from the necessity, an honorable or death, is to be or not family.

6. That each member and pay, so far as means will permit, a pro rata of the expenses necessarily incurred in carrying out the purposes of the association.

7. That these articles may be changed at any regular meeting of the association by a two-thirds majority vote of the members present.

Each are the articles of agreement under which a association was made years, on the 29th instant at Ogden City, to organize the Wilson family named therein.

During an exchange of ideas were at the meeting of the family, it was alleged that in 1847, the brother Wilson mentioned, with his entire family of seven sons and their families, all joined the Church in a body, believe the fact being made so by those in his history, by the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Bearing from Vermont in about 1844, this patriarch settled in the state of New York, with the intention of locating his family of boys on farms near him. Finding that part to be beyond the locality suited for his purpose, however, Bradley Wilson, in about 1845, again took up the line of the "Course of empire," and moved his way, with his numerous children, I to central Ohio, where he settled in Highland county.

Here the Gospel found the family in the spring of 1847. Oliver Stringer and George A. Smith were the bearers of the message. Coming into the neighborhood as Mormon, these two [illegible] series were received with witness, so to speak the use of the edifice for preaching, and were treatment with promise, unless they let the locality. Learning the condition of affairs, and knowing it was the usual one on the other unbelieving inhabitants to have the use of their meeting-house, the Wilson boys said the brethren was they would submit to the wishes of committee of seven to see for itself. Accordingly, notice of a meeting was given out, and, with the Wilsons on guard, services were held without disturbance. On taking leave of the family the next day, Oliver Stringer told them they would yet join the Church, but received for answer simply, "I guess not," from the old patriarch. The pressures had not been so great, and many doubts, it seems, before they were overtaken by a mob in a wagon with a summons to relate. Their defilements of the previous night had recommended and were ready for baptism.

Being out their farms, the family removed the same year to Missouri, where they all settled at Tenny's Grove, and many miles from Far west. Here the troubles and mobbings and the driving of 1838 found them.

At Nauvoo, the father, Bradley Wilson, died in 1842, but the sons, Winfield Orin, Sam, Clinton, Guy Carlton, Henry Harvey, Lewis Dallas, Bradley Barlow and Hosea Washington became active in the "Nauvoo Brethren." After the exodus from Nauvoo, Guy Carlton died on the plains, but the other six all reached "the valleys" and all died here, faithful to the last, with the exception of the youngest, who went on to the Bernardino and remained there till his death. George Clinton, Lewis Dallas and Bradley Barlow, as they were all in now know, as Wilson ward, West of Ogden; Winfield died near his home at Farmington, Davis county, and Henry Harvey was afterwards called to the "Dixie" country, and settled at St. George, so that with the subsequent moving of its members, the family is now scattered from the north to the extreme south of this intermountain region.

It is, therefore, of interest to note that another of the retired families of the Church spoke taking steps to unite its members, and to keep green the memory of the parent.

At the meeting last Sunday Wm. L. Barlow Wilson, of Wilson ward, was chosen president of the association; George Clinton Wilson, of Ogden, vice president, and Lorenzo Wilson, of this city, secretary and treasurer. It is expected that all members of the family will join the association in communication with the secretary, and furnish him with the data required to keep good their memorials in the society.

CROP BULLETIN.

Idaho State Weather Service for the Week Ending Monday, September 30, 1895.

The past week has given warm and pleasant days with very cool nights and frosty mornings. The growth of vegetation has been effectually stopped by the frosts of the past two weeks.

The precipitation was very light, and confined particularly to the northern section where light falls of snow were reported in several localities.

The weather has been favorable for harvesting and threshing which are now well under way and progressing rapidly. Over the extreme southern section and in portions of the western section all of the grain crop has been thrashed.

Potatoes are maturing and being dug and stored in many localities; shipments have been made from several of these during the week. Late potatoes and other vegetables are ready for stores.

The hay crop with few exceptions is cut and stored in good condition.

THE BEST
FAMILY MEDICINE
Has Has Ever Known. Words of Praise from a New York Lady:
AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for some years, and always derived the best results from their use. For costiveness and liver troubles, and for the prevention of headaches caused by these complaints, Ayer's Pills cannot be surpassed.

When our friends ask us what is the best family medicine, we invariably reply, Ayer's Pills. Taken in time, they will break up a cold, relieve congestion, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and we, indeed, the best family medicine I have ever known."—Mrs. Mary Johnson, 300 Elder street, New York City.

LITERARY NOTE.

In an article on Some Notable Women, in the October Ninety Magazine, Mildred Aldrich reviews the career of Ada Rehan, Grace Hall, Ellen Terry, Clara Fitzgerald and some well known actresses, accompanying illustrating it. There is also in this number an interesting criticism of Smith and his works by William Morris, accompanied by a fine portrait of Smith and specimen of his house at Abbotsford. The reproduction of famous paintings in the October Ninety are almost of exquisite; one yet given, and includes The Pied Piper of Hamelin, The Spoiled Child, Forbidden Fruit, etc. Max Pemberton and L. Cope Cornford contribute two remarkable clever stories and the editorials are terse, well written and on subjects of interest.

"Now or never you must climb
Upward to the peaks sublime,
Leaving trivial things below;
Upward, where the laurels grow."

Nothing is more inspiring to the ambitious young man than to read the Life stories of those who, from the poorest surroundings, have climbed the ladder of success.

Thomas A. Edison was a train boy.
Jay Gould canvassed for books.
P. A. Collins worked in a mine.
Henry Clews started life as a bookkeeper.
Augustine Daly used to earn but $8 a week.

Such facts seem stranger than fiction. Yet the list could be indefinitely drawn out of men who, born poor, with few educational advantages, have, by persistent work, by hard study, by putting to its best use every opportunity, climbed the ladder of fortune and success.

Greater Opportunities
