BIG DRAWING CARD.

Another Chapter in the Sensational Police Raid.

CAPTAIN DONOVAN ON TRIAL.

Court Room Crowded on that Judge Wenger Expressed his Fears of a Building Crash.

The morbidly curious and otherwise interested persons thronged in and about the police court this afternoon in anticipation of the trial of Captain Donovan until ingress and egress to the building became well nigh an impossibility. The case has proved to be the greatest drawing card of any municipal court in years. All classes of people were present, among them Madam Evans and some of her girls, whose uncanny double the captain was when the raid was made.

Conditions for a first class panic were eminently favorable and at one time it seemed imminent. Every inch of space in the court room was occupied by the great audience. The windows were closed and the atmosphere stifling. The doorway and aisle were blocked. Judge Wenger seeing the situation ordered that no more spectators be admitted as he had grave misgivings as to the safety of the building if with a weight in it. A few persons crowded out into the fresh air but others apparently were determined to see and hear the proceedings even though they might be compelled to the story below. In speaking to the question at bar Judge McKay said:

"If your honor please, in the matter which is now before us the charge against Captain Donovan—I would prefer to have someone else prosecute the case, seeing that recently I have been in close consultation with the defendant. Besides I am not feeling well and consequently I suggested to Chief Pack that he get some one else to prosecute the case. I suggested Mr. Percy L. Williams or other members of that firm, seeing that they had appeared legally in other cases for Mr. Pratt. The chief has refused to do this and I have got County Attorney Whitlemore to take hold of it. Mr. Whitlemore has suggested that the case be dismissed and that it be taken up under the Territorial statutes, but to this I emphatically say 'no.'"

"This case is brought under the city ordinances and it will have to be tried in this court. I want Donovan handled as any others would be in similar cases."

County Attorney Whitlemore stated that in his request to have the case dismissed and taken up under the territorial statutes, he had no desire whatever to cause delay. He had been called into the case but a short time ago, and if it was the desire of the city attorney to proceed forthwith, he would offer no objection.

Judge Powers, of counsel for the defendant, stated to the court that he objected to the manner in which the jury had been impanelled. He contended that the venire should have been served by the county sheriff instead of by a constable as had been the case.

City Attorney McKay—At whose instigation was the venire issued by the constable?

Judge Wenger—At the solicitation of Chief Pack.

Judge Powers—I maintain that the mode of procedure in impanelling this jury was not as it should be. We object to the chief of police giving directions as to how and by whom a venire should be served.

Judge Wenger—The venire was issued under my direction and I claim that I have the right to direct in such matters.

Judge Powers—Well, we object to the proceedings and will reduce our objections to writing.

Judge Powers immediately set to work writing out his objections, after which they were read to the court and overruled, whereupon the defendants noted an exception.

The jury that had been impanelled was then called forth, their names being as follows: J. C. Cutler, C. J. Irwin, D. H. Wells, J. H. Brown and C. H. Parsons.

In the examination of the jury as to their eligibility to serve, Mr. Wells was excused, he not having been a resident of the city for a period of six months.

The remaining jurors were then subjected to a severe cross-examination by County Attorney Whitlemore, who was followed by Judge Powers, in a series of severe questions testing their eligibility to serve as jurors.

In examining Mr. Irwin, Judge Powers learned that he was a resident of Waterloo, which was outside of the precincts of Salt Lake City, and consequently he objected to his serving, and Mr. E. F. Bruer was called upon to fill the vacancy and examined as the juror.

At this point Judge Wenger directed the doorkeeper to allow none others to enter the room, because of the unsafe condition of the building, whereupon Judge Powers rejoined that it was all the more reason for allowing them to come in.

The members of the jury being satisfactory to both sides, the others who had been summoned were excused and witnesses for the prosecution taken into a private room, where they held a five minutes conference with County Attorney Whitlemore.

OFFICER GILLESPIE TESTIFIES.

Officers Pack, Gillespie and De Young were then sworn for the prosecution and after the reading of the complaint by Clerk James, Officer Gillespie took the stand and testified as follows:

I had been a police officer in Salt Lake City over two years. On the morning of the 6th of February, about half 1 o'clock, he and Officers Pack and De Young left the hall and went along State street to Third South; there we met half a block to a house known as a house of prostitution.

Judge Powers—I move to strike that out as a conclusion of the witness.

The prosecution consented to having it stricken out and the witness proceeded.

The woman who keeps the house goes by the name of Lil Evans. Two other women reside in the house. All are well known prostitutes. The witness and Officer De Young went to the front door, while Officer Pack went to the back door. Witness knocked at the door and was asked by one of those on the inside, who it was and what he wanted. He stated that he was an officer of the law and had come with a warrant of arrest. The place was dark and it was fully fifteen minutes after he first knocked until he was admitted. When he and Officer De Young went in they found the three women and a man in the house. The man's name was Joe Richards.

The witness here drew a sketch of the house and its location to the streets of Third South and Franklin avenue.

A moment or two afterwards, Officer Pack and Captain Donovan came into the house from the back country. Witness asked Mr. Pack if the captain was found in the house. Officer Pack answered that he was, whereupon witness placed him under arrest and ordered Officer Pack to convey him to the hall. The witness wore a black slouch hat, and a large overcoat. He was very pale and nervous when found.

Upon cross-examination by Judge Powers, witness stated that the raid was made under directions of Chief Pratt. They were told to make it in the morning. It was just breaking day when the witness and the others left the hall. The chief gave no reasons as to why the raid was made. He simply ordered the officers to make the raid. It was a general round-up, and all were jailed with the exception of the one behind the jail which had been run in the day before.

The witness was still being cross-examined when the News went to press.

LITERARY NOTE.

"The Anglo-American Imbroglio" serves as the caption under which two most important articles open the February number of the North American Review. The first is entitled "The Venezuelan Difficulty," by Andrew Carnegie, and the second, "The British Feeling," by the Right Hon. James Bryce, the distinguished author of "The American Commonwealth." These two articles, from so eminent sources, characteristically describe the sentiment pervading England and America respectively over the subject of the boundary dispute between the former country and the South American republic.

MINES AND MINING.

A Light Day and Few Sales On the Stock Exchange.

NO SALES OF LISTED STOCKS.

A Higher Figure Demanded for Mercur—A $50 Rate From Denver to New York—Dips and Spurs.

When Colier Cobbern of the mining exchange called time this morning very few of the brokers were present. Afterwards, however, they dropped in one by one, and when the call of the listed stocks was reached, nearly all interested were on hand.

Generally speaking, the day was a poor one, and not one share of listed stocks was sold. Active hostilities commenced on Mercur, and a slight advance in quotations was the result. Woolley appeared extremely anxious to get hold of some of the stock, and made offerings all the way from $6.75 to $7.15 for it; but Kenneth Donnelan, who seemed to be the most willing to sell, held out for $7.25, from which price he stubbornly refused to recede. The movements on the other listed stocks were about as usual, as great amount of enthusiasm being manifest.

The calls of unlisted stocks opened with Camp Floyd, which Allen offered at 25 cents. This offer was quickly taken up by Conway, who commenced in getting 1,000 shares—the first sale of the stock that has been recorded on the present exchange. A sale of 1,000 shares of Dalton was made in order, after which Little Pittsburg was taken hold of and worried to the extent of 5,000 shares being sold.

The closing figures were as follows:

Dips and Spurs.

Mining men who have just returned from Mercur state that the recent bulletins issued by the company are the most severe that they have ever encountered.

The assays of a car of ore taken from the face of the Ajax drift, show to the ton $1.30 in gold, eighteen ounces silver and twenty-three per cent copper.

High grade ore has been found in the Rover group in Camp Floyd mining district at a depth of seventy-five feet. The face of the vein reveals a chimney, which gives evidence of the continuation of the ledge—one between Mercur and Sunshine.

A telegram to Broker R. L. Coborn was read at the exchange today, bearing the information that a special train for the opening of the New York Mining exchange, would leave Denver on the 12th inst., for which a round trip of $50 had been quoted. A meeting of the exchange to appoint representatives to attend the New York opening, will be held shortly.

Mt. Pleasant Pyramid: M. G. Ralph returned last week from an extended trip down into southern Utah. He reports a new and important gold discovery in the western part of Iron county which is attracting much attention, and where the State Line mining district has just been organized. Several properties are already giving great promises, and Mr. Ralph himself has one over which he feels very sanguine.

Cripple Creek As It Is.

Most mining camps are dreary, bleak and cold in winter and not over endurable in summer; but Cripple Creek is an exception to the general rule. Here the hills are rounded, grass grown and pine-clad, with miles of carriage roads and hundreds of miles of good trail, or bridle paths, little sunny vales full of wild flowers where crystal brooks ripple through the tall grass. Leaving Cripple Creek, the Florence railroad winds away through forests of pine, while the Midland, after crossing an open park, drops suddenly into dark canyons, deep gorges and wild glens. The scene from Cripple Creek at morning, when heaven's searchlights sweep over the shoulder of Pike's Peak, catching the summit of Sangre de Christo range and turning its way down to the base, showing every gorge and peak—almost every pinon—fifty miles away, is worth crossing the Atlantic to see. More gorgeous still is the scene at evening, when the sun lowers down across the western range and bathes its way up to the top of Pike's Peak, turning the trees to torches and the crags and spires to spikelets of gold. The thousands of tourists who will go to the top of the Peak next summer can, by the aid of their glasses, look down into these great gold fields and count a half dozen busy towns, holding no less than twenty-five thousand souls, that have been built up around the original camp of the cripples. Last summer they ran suburban trains every hour out of Cripple Creek, and now they are to have a free delivery of mails and there is talk of another railroad direct from Denver. This latter enterprise, it seems, would be a senseless undertaking, not at all necessary to the prosperity of the camp nor the country at large. The sharp competition between the rival roads already there will insure low rates, probably lower than the railroads can afford. What more do they need?—February Review of Reviews.

Sixty Miles Twelve Earth and Moon.

The magnifying power of the telescope can be made by mere change of eye pieces to range anywhere from about two hundred to four thousand. This highest power will bring the moon, optically, to within just about sixty miles from the observer's eye; but he will see her surface much more clearly than one can see the details of a terrestrial landscape at that distance from the top of a mountain, because in the latter case the surface is viewed very obliquely, and through the densest and hatiest portion of our atmosphere.

Any lunar object five or six hundred feet square would be distinctly visible in a telescope, for instance, as large as the Washington. A line much narrower than this, especially if it differed much in color or brightness from the background, would at once strike attention, and so would any brilliant object, even if no larger or brighter than any ordinary arc light.—North American Review for February.

Died at Mesa City, Ariz., January 31, 1896, Sarah Thompson Phelps, relict of Patriarch Morris Phelps, born March 20, 1820, in Pompret, Chautauqua, N. Y. Who received the Gospel in 1835; was at Kirtland to witness the consecration of the Temple and its dedication and to set her testimony of the Gospel therein. With the poor and persecuted she fled to Missouri in 1838, there to endure the terrible persecutions and poverty of the coming winter and the exodus the following spring of 1839. She was among the first at Nauvoo, was married to Mr. Phelps at Macedonia in 1841 and witnessed all the persecutions resulting in the Prophet's martyrdom and in our expulsion from Nauvoo. She arrived in Utah, settling at Alpine in 1850; moved to Montpelier, Idaho, in 1863, and when her husband died in 1876, with her son Hyrum she came to Arizona in 1879. She was president of the first organized Relief Society in Maricopa Stake and has long been a mother and matron in Zion. She has gone crowned with the love and blessing of the poor and all who knew her. She left two children, twenty-eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren to bear her name through all ages to come.

Elders Hawks, Openshaw and Patrick, H. F. Johnson gave words of consolation and of hope in the resurrection at her funeral, hoping that the close of this earthly probation might be like with hers in their having so good a record.
