PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - OCT. 4, 1898.

Democratic Rally.

The first gun of the Democratic campaign was fired in Provo last evening. The 6:30 R. G. W. train, which brought Hon. B. H. Roberts, Jas. H. Moyle, E. A. McDaniel, S. A. Kenyon, Noble Warrum and other visitors, was met by Hon. A. C. Smoot, S. A. King and other prominent Democrats, with Dayton's silver band and carriages in which the visitors were carried to the homes of friends for entertainment. The opera house in which the rally was held was decorated with flags and mottos, and on the stage were some beautiful potted plants, and in front of the speakers' stand was a picture of Bryan, draped with flags and stripes. On the stage were seated the various ladies and gentlemen of this city. Hon. S. A. King presided and introduced as the first speaker Hon. Fisher S. Harris, who delivered an eloquent speech in which he criticised the inconsistencies of the Republican platform. He made music of the American soldiers by the government and urged the people to use their votes for Democracy and free silver.

Hon. B. H. Roberts was the next speaker. He first spoke of the importance of the coming election by reason of a legislature having to be elected, which would elect a United States senator; the election of a representative to Congress and the election of a judge of the Supreme Court. The speaker in this connection paid a high compliment to the honesty and ability of Judge Baskin, the Democratic candidate, and urged the people to use every effort to secure his election.

Mr. Roberts spoke of the necessity of eliminating issues from the campaign which were not germane. The war itself was not an issue, there was no need of any investigation to the conduct of the officers, soldiers and sailors of the war—Republican and Democratic—which was grand and glorious. There was, however, a need for investigation—admitted by the Republican administration—of the conduct of the men who had charge of the commissary and medical departments of the army and navy, who were the appointees of a Republican administration.

The question of retaining the country taken from Spain was not yet, although it might become an issue between the parties.

Neither was the tariff question now an issue, because the needs for revenue to pay the expenses incurred by the war would make a high tariff necessary for some time to come. The history of the silver question (which was a prevailing issue from early in 1893 to 1896, when the Democracy began to agitate this question and finally at the Chicago convention declared in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver, without the consent of any other nation) was then reviewed, and the Democratic and Republican platforms of 1896 compared. Both platforms declared for bimetalism and by the votes for President in 1896, the people expressed themselves in favor of bimetallism, except the few thousands who voted for Palmer and Buckner. The question then, for 12 years, had been: Having declared in favor of bimetallism, was that party would bring the desired result about. Quotations from speeches and writings of Republicans were made, showing that there was no prospect of the Republican party doing anything for silver, and the speaker predicted that in 1900 the mass would be torn from the Republican party and it would appear as the gold standard party of the United States. The speaker next spoke in favor of the United States alone taking in hand the great task of restoring silver for the benefit of humanity, and maintained that the education and productive powers of the country would enable us to do this with safety, and that the failure of the Latin union to maintain a double standard could not be used as an argument against the United States being able to maintain it. The enterprise which would be inaugurated in the new possessions lately wrested from Spain, was an additional reason for the remonetization of silver, as we would have to borrow the money (gold) in Europe and pay interest on it, or coin the silver of our hills and to carry on the needed improvements.

Hon. S. A. Kenner was introduced as the man who had discovered Sam Thurman in the eagebrush (referring to his connection with the Bear Brook Company in 1896.) He made a humorous speech and earnestly "here his testimony" to all that had been said during the evening, and urged the support of Joseph Herbin, next November, both of whom were worthy of the voice of the people.

District Court.

In the Fourth district court yesterday, the jury in the case of John Cowan vs the R. G. W. Ry. Co., wherein plaintiff sued for $15,000 damages sustained by being thrown from his wagon by a loaded car while crossing the track at Clear Creek, brought in a verdict for $250 for plaintiff.

The next case to come up is entitled Caroline Hayes vs Oliver A. Slade and Olif Hilmerick. Plaintiff sued for the possession of a piece of land on the west side of Utah lake, of which she alleges defendants took forcible and unlawful possession in 1897, and also for the rents of the land, the rents and profits, and $250 for waste committed by defendants.

Defendants deny all the allegations in the complaint.

The point in the case is the location of a boundary line about which the parties fall to agree.

M. W. Warner appeared for plaintiff and Chas. De Money for defendants.

Estate of William Hill, deceased: John C. Hill and Samuel Hill appointed administrators under bonds of $1,800.

Estate of Nelle Nelson, deceased: final account approved and distribution ordered: Chas. De Money, Thos. R. Parker and William Hunter appointed commissioners in partition.

County Business.

At the meeting of the board of county commissioners, held yesterday, the following letter was received:

To the Honorable County Commissioners of Utah County:

Gentlemen—The annual meeting of the Utah State Fish and Game Protective association will be held in this city on October 10th, 1898, and as the Legislature meets in January, 1899, and laws for the better protection of our fish and game interests will there be presented, it is desired that you designate some one or more people, who will be taking advantage of the conference railroad rates here to represent your county and your interests in this report to the end that other states may not get the advantage of our labors to provide fish and game in plenty for the inhabitants of this state. Fish are being destroyed by the thousands by means of giant powder and other similar devices and our game birds are being wantonly slaughtered, and it is in the interest of these we ask your cooperation for their protection. Hoping to be favored with the presence of one or more gentlemen for their county in every county by sending representatives to our annual meeting on October 10th next, and we thank you that it will not be long before fish and game will be the sixty-dollar rich and poor alike rather than exchanging of the first second as at present. Anticipating your hearty cooperation in advance and thanking you for the same, we have the honor to remain, yours sincerely,

THOMAS J. AIRY, Pres't.
GEORGE D. ALDIS, Sec.
For the Utah State Fish and Game Protective Association.

Joseph E. Thorne and others, of Pleasant Grove, asked for $200 to repair the county road in Pleasant Grove, and offered to do three days' work with team for $3 and three days' work by a single man for $1.50.

George Good, of Vineyard, protested against the removal of fences and trees upon his premises for the purpose of widening the county road. Referred to Commissioners Bullock and Davis for investigation.

E. G. Rowlands, of Salt Lake, petitioned the board to create a new school district, to be known as the Mount Nebo district, to be made up of parts of the county, with the following trustees: George Whitehead, Henry Miles and H. I. Brown. The petition was referred to the county attorney to draw up a resolution creating said district.
