NEWS OF THE WEST.

In Oregon Wife Murderer Sentenced to be Hanged.

CHILD BADLY BITTEN BY A DOG.

Hanging a Sparrow—Coal Fell in an Elevator Shaft—Injury to Seattle—Brevities.

A very unfavorable report is given of the wheat crop in Kansas.

The Cabinet's Deputies will visit half state universities on Tuesday, May 12.

Seattle (Wash.)—A genuine sea serpent. The child of a prominent Dredge-builder was attacked by the Dragon last night.

Charles Albright of Marshfield, Oregon, killed his wife on Feb. 19, yesterday, May 11, was sentenced to be hanged.

Fred McGaughey, of Los Angeles, Cal., fell twelve feet down an elevator shaft on Friday, receiving fatal injuries.

Five hundred fishermen visited Demonstration Ranch, Oregon, Friday afternoon and destroyed a large portion of their nets. The ranch are adjacent to Sand Island, which is occupied by government troops.

Governor Budd of California has called upon the state officials to inspect California every among the entire state. He asserts that the law requiring contagious diseases be reported to cities is to become effective, and if so the state board of health has $50,000 to eradicate the disease.

N. A. S. Hilgard, a prominent lawyer and society leader of Big Lake, Wash., committed suicide Friday by a shotgun blast in his mouth. Climbing over the railing of the Pentagrest bridge during a very strong gale, and leaning upon a large number of telegraph wires, he fired a shotgun through his brain and dropped into the Spokane river through bed below. He only was cruel, yet the falls and he not yet been recovered. Dependency over a love affair is stated to be the cause of his action.

A messenger came to Grass Valley, Cal., Friday evening for a doctor high and fast. Indian Springs to attend the four-year-old child of Charles Phillips, who had been terribly bitten by a Newfoundland dog. The child had been playing with the brute, and probably tantalized it until it became ferocious. The dog fastened his lower teeth under the right eye of the child and the upper teeth in the flesh of the forehead and chewed away until the teeth met. The doctor says the right eye is destroyed. The face of the boy is so right side swollen that the eye cannot be seen. Blood poisoning is feared. The dog has been shot.

"Grandpa, the little bird has committed suicide." J. B. Nelson, to whom the words were addressed by the little child, in San Francisco on Friday, glanced upward in front of the window of his sleeping apartment saw a dead sparrow, suspended by the neck, having half way down the upper sash of the window. In the arched space above the window frame some birds had built their nests, using as sparrows do, hair from the tails and manes of horses. By some means a hair had become fastened around the neck of the sparrow. Probably in trying to free itself the bird flew from the nest, but its fate was as sure as if it was tied. The bird entered to the nest, while the loop held fast its sleep on the little sparrow's throat. The result was the hanging of the sparrow as effectually as if all the proceedings had been conducted by a sheriff with all the formalities of the law.

A SHY DANCER.

Stories Told by Westerners of the Antics of the Sand Hill Crane.

The sand hill crane is a very bright bird. A Horseshoe writer says that the very name is synonymous of vigilance and alertness. It feeds on the treeless plains or in the barren wheat stubble, where it can see a long way beyond gunshot, or one of a flock is posted as sentinel, and this bird stands with full half upon, ready to give an alarm. It can be killed by decoying it with pasteboard figures cut to proper size and shape and painted, but mounted birds are better. A pit is dug deep enough to conceal a man, the decoys are put out, and the season are also as they come over. The best region to shoot them is in the Columbia river watershed and south of it in the Pacific coast states.

When one shoots a bird of the size and build of a crane in midair, it collapses like a sand bag or a rag. But such apparent collapses are sometimes deceptive, as, for instance:

Before I could reach him he scared off into the air with whooping flight. Again he lay on the ground with fearful flutters, but again he got on his feet. Running up, thinking to get him alive for a decoy, I tried to tap him on the head and even him. He showed fight, and I had my gun as I backed off, and he took to his wings.

The sand hill crane is something of a fighter of note if wounded, and the only safe crane is a dead one. Their bills are long and sharp and are capable of putting out a man's eye.

The sand hill crane has some curious habits that make him of more than passing interest to the student of birds. One on the pretty patches of their here balls in the spring, in which the select birds seem to be invited. These balls are pure social affairs from the human standpoint. There are various causes, which are sort of military motions or pretty war dances. Sometimes the birds hop over one another's backs and flap their wings, giving their peculiar cry. Sometimes two birds have been dancing, using their long bills like fences, buffoons and swords.

When Nature Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best aid to a sight and sensible remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup company.
