Who Will Tell Something of Them? Relatives Wish to Know.

They Came West in Pioneer Days, en route to the Pacific Coast—May be in Utah.

We give herewith two letters of inquiry asking for information regarding relatives who came west in early days, and concerning whom some Utah people may have some knowledge that will be acceptable to the inquirers. One of the letters, addressed to President Wilford Woodruff, says:

[illegible]

ALLEN, Kalamazoo county, Michigan.

The other was written to President George Q. Cannon, and is as follows:

[illegible]

SAMUEL SCHEURY,
1823 Chestnut street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

The copy of Joel Sands' letter reads:

NAUVOO, Ill., Jan. 2, 1846.

Dear Brother—I received your letter and am happy to hear from you all. I sold my mill last week for nine hundred and eighty dollars. They take possession the first of April next. [illegible]

Yours, JOEL SANDS.

If any one here is able to furnish the wished-for information, it is hoped a prompt response will be made to the inquirers direct, at the postoffice addresses given.

AN EDUCATIONAL TOUR.

Elders Goddard and Maeser Report Their Labors in Arizona.

THATCHER, Graham county, Arizona, February 8, 1895.

Editor Deseret News:

Thinking a brief account of an educational tour through the Maricopa, St. Joseph and Mexican stakes would be interesting to your numerous readers, must be my apology for asking a small space in your paper for the following: Dr. Karl G. Maeser and myself left Salt Lake City on Tuesday, January 29th, on the 7:10 train of the R. G. W. Railway, and after traveling 715 miles we reached Colorado Springs. Here we changed cars for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway, passing through Pueblo, La Junta, Albuquerque and San Marcial until we arrived at Deming, being 1,255 miles from home. We were detained here for some time, and learned that the population of Deming was about 1,200. [illegible]

We left Deming on the Southern Pacific railway, and after a travel of 310 miles we reached Maricopa station, Arizona, passing by Bowie, Tucson, etc. [illegible]

[illegible] were made; the Church academy [illegible] Sunday school reports were given by the superintendents [illegible] We also had a few interesting exercises by the children. President Hakes and his counselors were present at all our meetings.

[illegible]

On Monday evening a few of [illegible]

On Tuesday, February 5, in response to an invitation by President Hakes, [illegible]

That ended our first appointment in Arizona. [illegible] we went to the Arizona Improvement company's farm of fruit orchard, [illegible] From here we were taken to Tempe, and after spending a few hours together waiting for the train to transfer us towards St. Joseph stake, the place of our second appointment, we bid adieu to our hospitable friends.

GAY X. ACKLEY SACKETT.

Warned Against the Silhouette Artist Who "Did" Salt Lake.

After Attempting Suicide Here He Went to San Francisco Where He Figures in Other Sensations.

Salt Lakers will easily remember X. Ackley (that individual's interpretation of his word exactly) Sackett, the famous silhouette artist, who for nearly a year was as familiar a figure about the amusement resorts in and near this city.

During the last days of the Wonderland performances and for a considerable time prior thereto he amazed and astonished large numbers of people by his remarkable skill as a silhouettist. When summer came last year he was a [illegible] at Saltair, Garfield and the parks, and did a rushing business in his line. While he made money in large amounts he spent it very freely and had a life that was gay in the extreme. During the latter part of the season he entered upon a round of dissipation which was brought to a termination by the artist attempting suicide in an East Temple street saloon one night by repeatedly stabbing himself in the breast with a pen knife. Companions prevented him carrying out his intentions and he was placed under restraint and watchers for a few weeks and on recovering he quieted down and a little later disappeared from the city.

Wednesday's San Francisco Chronicle contains a lengthy account of another sensational chapter in the artist's life together with two silhouette cuts of himself one of them his own work, the other by a "rustical artist." The article was as follows:

It was with feelings of surprise akin to horror that the Pure Food people at the Pavilion learned that a gay Lothario was moving in their midst. The news came from Denver, where a [illegible] is supposed to be pining away all for love of X. Ackley Sackett, the charming silhouette artist of national fame.

In a letter sent to the Food Exposition X. Ackley was depicted as a truly phenomenal crusher of hearts. He was alleged to have left a trail of broken bleeding organs from one side of the continent to the other, and was looking for fresh conquests. For the future peace and happiness of maidens fair, the Denver correspondent suggests that Sackett be checked and bodily from the food tournament.

X. Ackley has a stand or booth in the Pavilion where he cuts silhouettes in black and white and sells upon the passing throng. He does not look like a gay deceiver and denies that he is one. [illegible] artist argues. It is due to his winning ways.

The charge made against the picture cutter is that he once eloped with an [illegible] to Elkhart, Ind., and spent the honeymoon [illegible] in jail. As X. Ackley had a wife and three children at the time, the [illegible]

[illegible] of prominent citizens.

He was accompanied by a pet dog and a woman supposed to be his wife. During the week that X. Ackley operated in Elkhart he made the acquaintance of a young woman, the daughter of a state senator, who had $60,000 in her own right. They eloped, but were captured and wrenched apart in the bleeding state of Kansas.

Sackett was not prosecuted, as the girl was of age and supposed to know what she was doing. Relatives in Denver took charge of her and she is there yet.

About three months ago the silhouette artist came to this city, and has since been plying his vocation in prominent localities. He has a stand in the Baldwin hotel lobby. Not long ago X. Ackley achieved some notoriety and a black eye in that famous conflict between actors and waiters in the Louvre. When the food show opened, the artist opened a booth at the Pavilion, but as business was not very good he closed the engagement.

In reference to the elopement Sackett says that the girl followed him away from her home. On leaving Elkhart he went to [illegible] and then to La Porte, at both of which places the heiress [illegible] her intention of joining the fascinating artist. But he said, "Nay, nay, Pauline," or words to that effect, so he says. On departing from La Porte Mr. Sackett was joined by the Indiana maiden, who accompanied him to Chicago. She had some money and a [illegible] full of clothes, so the pair [illegible] were made to [illegible]. They stopped a while at Kansas City and then journeyed on to Topeka. Meanwhile all the detectives in that quarter of the globe were camping on the trail of X. Ackley.

"When we got to Topeka," Sackett said [illegible], "I went into the depot for breakfast. On going back to the train I found the girl under arrest, and the officers took me on a charge of having swindled a bicycle firm. But that was only a trick to keep me in jail until the relatives of the girl could take her away. Then I was set free."

As to the charge of having two wives, one in Washington, D. C., and the other in New Jersey, the silhouettist says the latter are both one and the same. He and his wife used to live in Washington, but she is now selling peanuts on a Jersey ferryboat. They were married [illegible] years ago, but separated in 1891. Sackett says he [illegible] to procure a divorce.
