An Elevator in Florence.

"In Florence," says a traveler, "I encountered the slowest elevator known. It was in one of the palaces, and a party of us wanted to go to the upper rooms. After a considerable time the [illegible] thing [illegible] down and an attendant [illegible] the doors of its dingy interior. He bargained with us for the trip at about five cents a head, and then, after carefully looking us over, took out some weights from the floor of the cage till he decided he had balanced our joint avoirdupois. We then entered and the 'lift' began the ascent. We moved so slowly that the ladies became alarmed, fearing we should be stalled between floors, and though the height was not great, not more than that of a four story building, we were several minutes in accomplishing it.

"Two or three of our party who had preferred the stairs to the known slowness of the elevator, had reached the gallery, rested from their climb, and well begun a survey of the pictures before we arrived. And the complacency of the attendant was so [illegible]; he evidently thought [illegible] remarkable for comfort and speed. I longed for a command of language to give him a word picture of some of our New York elevators. —New York Times.

Umbrellas That Will Not Be Stolen.

Among recent novelties is a tourist's umbrella, which is unique, owing to the fact that it is not liable to be stolen. It is made like the ordinary umbrella, except that the handle may be unscrewed and placed in the pocket. [illegible] —New York Journal.

WHY HE LAUGHED.

An Interesting Interview Which Took Place During War Times.

On the day after we tunneled out of the Confederate stockade at Salisbury, N. C., and while each man had taken his own direction, I came upon a colored man in the woods skirting a field. He was digging roots to make himself a tonic, and I broke through the brush and came upon him so suddenly that there was no time to dodge. He was kneeling down, with a parcel of roots beside him, and he looked at me for a minute and then asked:

"When did you all git out of dat place?"

"Yesterday," I replied, seeing that he had at once discovered my identity.

"An what yo' all gwine to now?"

"I'm going to try and get to the Yankee lines."

He began to grin, then he broke into a chuckle; then the chuckle became a laugh and he rolled on the ground. I thought him demented and was about to move away, when he sat up and said:

"I jess laffed an couldn't help it."

"I don't see anything very funny about it."

"But yo' hain't no ole nigger, yo' see. Hit's powerful funny an I'se got to laff some mo'."

He indulged in another fit of laughing and rolling, and when he had recovered from it he took a seat on a log and said:

"'Bout fo' months ago de missus she calls me up one day an looks at me a long time an den says:

"'Moses, I has a dream las' nite. I dreams dat one o' dem Yankee prisoners got out o' dat pen at Salisbury an dat yo' was hidin him in de woods back yere. Ise gwine to hev yo' whipped for dat, Moses.'

"Did she?"

"She had me led up an whipped, sah, an I jest didn't git ober smartin for two weeks. One mawnin 'bout two months ago she calls me up agin an says:

"'Yo' boy Moses, look me in de eye! I has a dream agin las' nite. I dreams dat one o' dem Yankee prisoners got out o' dat pen at Salisbury, an dat yo' was hidin him in de tobacker house. Dat's anudder whippin for yo', Moses.'"

"And you got it again?"

"Jess laid it onto me de powerfullest sort, an dat smart didn't dun go away fur ober so long. 'Bout fo' weeks ago de missus dun called me up to de big house agin. She looks at me a long time, an den says:

"'See yere, Moses. I has anudder dream 'bout yo'. Las' nite I dreams dat one o' dem Yankee prisoners dun got out o' dat pen down to Salisbury, an yo' was dun hidin him in de brush ober by de swamp. I can't put up wid dat, Moses, an Ise gwine to hev yo' whipped mighty hard for it.'"

"And she actually had you whipped again?"

"My back hain't dun got well yet, sah; but—yo! yo! yo!—Ise dun got to—can't help it."—

He went off into another "spell," lasting a complete minute, and when he had recovered I said:

"I can't see anything in this to tickle you so."

"Dat's 'cause yo' hain't me," he replied as he wiped his eyes. "Dis mawnin missus dun called me up agin. She was looking mighty pleased, an [illegible]

"'Moses, I has anudder dream 'bout yo' las' nite. I dreamed dat one o' dem Yankee prisoners got outer dat pen down to Salisbury, an dat yo' found him in de woods an [illegible] right up yere to me. Yere's a nice piece of bacon to pay fur dat, Moses, an yo' hain't gwine to be whipped any mo'.'"

"Well?" I asked, as he rolled around again.

"Why, sah, can't yo' dun see what tickles me? Missus had fo' dreams, an I got three whippin's befo' yo' dun come, an now Ise gwine to hide yo' under de stuff in de [illegible] till dey git fru huntin an dun go to glory 'long wid yo'."—New York World.

A Man of Peace.

Dr. Gatling was at the Ebbitt House the other day. "Yes, I'm the cause of the Gatling gun," he said with a smile. "I invented it. I look on it as one of the great philanthropic works of the age. Saved no end of lives, my gun has. How? By scaring people. Its mere presence has kept down more trouble and riot, and without even parading the streets with it, than anything else I know of. I've letters to show to that effect. People who don't stop to think might carry an idea round with 'em that I'm bloodyminded man. Not much. I'm for peace every time. See my gun."—Washington Cor. Kansas City Times.

The Air in a Room.

In a room the air arranges itself according to its temperature. The hottest lies along the ceiling, the coolest along the floor. The hottest is the newest and purest. The coolest is the oldest, and therefore the foulest. The air is gradually cooling from contact with the walls and windows. When hot air enters a room it rises at once to the ceiling and spreads across it. If there is an escape there, an open window or ventilator, it goes out, leaving the cooler foul air almost undisturbed. From this we see that a window slightly open at the top may cool a room, but not purify it.—New York Journal.

Advice to Girls.

Don't conclude that a man is a gentleman because he has the manners of one.

Don't think because a man is a graceful and interesting talker that he is everything else.

Don't fail to take a man at his word when he says he is poor.

Don't be familiar with men, and don't permit familiarities from them.

Don't think because a man likes you that he wants to marry you.

Don't think a man is not in love with you because he has not proposed to you.

Don't be silly about the men.

Don't be rude to a man in order to show your independence.

Don't let a man impose upon you, simply because he is a man.

Don't believe everything a man tells you, either about himself or yourself.—Detroit Free Press.

Poor Boys.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Grandma Tan[illegible], "them boys ought not to be playing football. The newspapers says that the Mayflower players aren't strong in their backs. I shouldn't think the family would let 'em, should you?"

"No, indeed, grandma," replied Tom seriously. "It is very dangerous. Why, you can't count on some of those poor fellows for anything more than a quarter back."—Boston Post.

Many Dust Particles.

In his own laboratory Mr. Aitken calculated [illegible] of dust particles in a cubic inch of air, near the ceiling [illegible], and above a Bunsen flame the enormous number of [illegible].—Good Words.

Keep your bedroom windows open at night. If the cool air seems unpleasant the bedclothes should be increased. The effect of the purer air will soon be ascertained in increased health and spirits and a larger capacity for bearing the toils and troubles of the day.

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, [illegible], cleansing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup [illegible] Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling [illegible]. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. When for years there have been [illegible], pain, coughing, spitting, [illegible], night sweats, weakness, slipping down hill, when doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the point of despair, when there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, then we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it.
