The last week has been perhaps the dullest of the season in a social way—only a tithe of the number of social events that usually enliven the six days' period between Sabbaths having taken place. Nearly all entertainments have been of a private nature—the dancing academies and other public halls which have usually a goodly quota of social happenings in their respective domains—sharing in the comparative emptiness of the week.

• • •

Among the prominent private affairs of the week was the dinner party given by Dr. and Mrs. Ewing at the Alta club on Wednesday evening, the event being in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Victor [illegible] of London, England (and Mrs. Walker), their guest, who is recently from Honolulu. The table decorations were in pale pink, and pale pink roses—the idea being carried out in the place decorations—each guest being presented with a boutonniere of pale pink buds.

• • •

Mr. Henrotin also entertained a pleasant dinner party at the Alta club on Wednesday night.

• • •

Miss Welby was the hostess at a Kensington tea on Thursday.

• • •

A pleasant affair occurred on Wednesday night at the home of Mr. Martin Christopherson in Farquers ward, when the friends of that gentleman descended upon him in a body—the successful surprise having been planned and carried out by the good wives of the ward. The evening was spent in games, and a bountiful repast made up the many pleasant ingredients of the affair, a thoroughly delightful time being enjoyed by all present. The chief promoters of the successful affair were Miss Vilate Pratt, Mrs. Angie Gabbot and Miss Sarah McClelland.

• • •

Mrs. John T. Caine and Mrs. George Alder entertained a Kensington tea this afternoon.

• • •

Miss Waneah Yearsley and Mr. Edmund S. Leaver were married on Wednesday evening, the ceremony being performed by Chief Justice Bartch. The event took place at the residence of the bride's parents at No. 136 D. First West street—a reception which followed the ceremony, being participated in by a large number of friends of the contracting parties—who joined in showering upon the young couple innumerable good wishes for their future. The newly wedded pair leave shortly for Central America, Mr. Leaver's business calling him to Salvador where he expects to reside.

• • •

A pleasant surprise party was given Monday evening by the Misses Emily Clark, Elma Perry and May Armstrong in honor of Miss Nellie Clark.

High Five was played, the prizes being won by Miss Daisy Graves, Mr. Will Richy, Miss Grace Stringfellow and Mr. Burke Kinkel, after which a dainty supper was served and games were played.

• • •

A notable private event of the week was the dinner party given on Thursday by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Riter in honor of Will Riter and Scott Wells, both young volunteers who recently returned from Manila, after a trip around the world, both traveling together as far as Paris, where they separated, Mr. Wells arriving in Salt Lake two weeks, and Mr. Riter, after a few days' delay in the auto blockade in Colorado, reaching home on Thursday. The event planned in honor of the returned volunteers was delightful in every respect, about forty of the friends of the volunteers having gathered to join in the welcome. The house was draped in flags and bunting, the table decorations consisting of pink and white carnations tied with blue ribbon, and dainty ribbon streamers of red, white and blue extending around the table, carrying out the idea of the national color scheme.

The affair constituted in all respects a charming and appropriate tribute to the gallant volunteers.

Mr. Guy Eldridge entertained at a dancing party at his residence on First South street Thursday evening.

• • •

Mrs. H. W. Ballentine entertained the Tea club at her home on Wednesday afternoon, a pleasant time being enjoyed by all present. The club meets next week at the residence of Mrs. and Miss Price.

• • •

One of the pleasantest dinner parties of the week was that given by Miss Blanche Kimball, who entertained a few friends on Thursday afternoon. The table was prettily decorated in carnations, fern and smilax, the center-piece being especially tasteful.

• • •

On Monday evening Mr. A. C. Richardson entertained a card party at the residence of Mrs. Lambert. A pleasant feature of the evening was a challenge dish supper provided over by the host, who has won an enviable reputation for the original and delectable concoctions prepared by his hand.

• • •

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Nelson A. Kinney gave a pleasant party in honor of Mrs. Hiland Grant, mother of Apostle Heber J. Grant, the event being partly in the nature of a reunion, the party numbering among its guests six of the pioneer women who came to Utah with Brigham Young's company in 1848, namely, Mrs. Martha Wells, the mother of Governor Wells, Mrs. H. P. Richards, a sister of Bishop Hoopes, Mrs. Hannah Wells, Mrs. Tira D. Young, Mrs. Susan Wells and Mrs. L. A. Wells, all of whom were accompanied by their daughters, the guests of the day, that first set eyes on the valley of Salt Lake. The event was an enthusiastic happy and successful affair, a most enjoyable time being spent by all present.

• • •

Mrs. H. P. Bauer left on Tuesday to visit friends in the East. She was accompanied by the Misses Clark.

• • •

A character ball will take place in the Fourth ward school house on 17th inst.

• • •

On Thursday evening the Royal Arcanum held a social evening at the lodge rooms—the evening being pleasantly spent in cards—which, with the music and refreshments, went to make up a most delightful entertainment.

• • •

Miss Alff is in Butte, where she is visiting her sister, Mrs. Forbis, formerly of this city.

• • •

Miss Emilie Miller is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. David Dejoe at Eureka.

• • •

An old time ball to be given at the Thirteenth ward hall is one of the social events planned for next week. The affair will take place on Wednesday night.

• • •

Judge and Mrs. Miner, who have been absent for some time, returned home this week.

• • •

A pleasant event of the week was a surprise party which took place on Monday evening in honor of Mr. Joseph Hyrum Smith, the large number of his friends appearing unexpectedly at his home—where the evening was pleasantly devoted to cards, recitations and music. An elaborate supper was served, and at a late hour the party dispersed—all present having enjoyed a thoroughly delightful time.

• • •

Mrs. Styer, who has been in the city for some time as a guest of her mother, Mrs. E. Wilkes, left on Wednesday for Buffalo.

• • •

Mrs. H. H. Jones, who has been visiting with relatives in the city, has returned to Wyoming.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Mayo will spend the coming week in Salt Lake, visiting with friends.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lakenstein have returned from their bridal trip and will take up their residence in Salt Lake.

• • •

Mr. E. Power of Pittsburg, who has been in Manila with the Tenth Pennsylvania, arrived in Salt Lake on Wednesday, and is the guest of Mrs. Hoyt Sherman. Mr. Power is on his way home—having been released on sick furlough.

• • •

Mr. David S. Murray left this week for a short visit to Helena.

• • •

Mr. Will Reese and Miss Vinnie Oakley, two very popular and well known young people of this city, were married in the Temple last Thursday. In the evening a brilliant reception was tendered the young couple at the residence of the bride's parents, about seventy-five friends of the bride and groom participating.

They were the recipients of many beautiful presents, a substantial mark of the esteem in which the young people were held.

Mr. Reese is prominently connected with the Utah Lithographing Co., and the bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Oakley of Nevada City, Nev.

THE CLUBS.

The week at the Ladies' Literary club-house opened on Monday with the meeting of the Shakespeare section which began a study of the play of Richard III.—this week giving a history of the play and source of the poet, and Mrs. Lenore Smith a review of Lowell's essay on Richard III.

On Friday the given over to general study was held—the program being a paper upon the "Studies of the Dutch Republic," by Mrs. Hal Hirst, and "Holland's Part in the American War for Independence," by Mrs. Louisa W. Brown, upon which talks an open discussion of Friday, by members of the History section.

• • •

On Tuesday the Woman's club met in the club-house at the usual hour for work in building when an interesting paper was read by Mrs. E. L. Morris on "The Land Problem of the People to be congratulated both upon the interesting and important subjects included in its list of studies and upon the excellent material furnished upon those topics by its lecturers.

• • •

The Reviewers club will meet on Monday at the home of Mrs. Wm. Wightman, on Fourteenth East street, when a discussion of the History and Morals of the Short Story," a paper upon the topic to be given by Mrs. W. W. Riter and examples of choice fiction to be treated in an article upon Mary E. Wilkins, read by Mrs. Harry Hinart, and Chester Bailey Fernald by Mrs. Charles H. Moore.

On Wednesday afternoon the Utah Society of Daughters of the Revolution held its first annual meeting—the event taking place at the residence of Miss Julia Farnsworth, who gave a banquet to its members in honor of the special occasion.

At the opening of the meeting a reaction of the present officers took place and this preliminary business was followed by an exceedingly interesting program, beginning with an excellent paper upon "Causes of the Revolution," by Mrs. Lucy W. Smith; a number of equally interesting articles upon Revolutionary topics making up a notable program. Amongst the list of subjects—all of which were ably treated—was "our Flag," by Mrs. Caroline Cannon; a sketch of Morris, the great financier of the Revolution, by Miss Julia Farnsworth; "James Madison," by Mrs. Myra Hoseiter; "John Adams," by Mrs. Phoebe Young; "Benjamin Franklin," by Miss Kate Wells; "Revolutionary Mothers," by Mrs. Ella Wells, and a sketch of one of these heroines—in the person of Moll Pitcher, who, when her husband, a commander in the thrilling battle of Monmouth, fell wounded, took his place at the cannon and held it till the end of the struggle—an example ably illustrating the important and active part which American women played in the conflict. Mrs. Sara Gates gave an extemporaneous talk upon the work of the round, Mrs. E. R. Wells, whose efforts have done much towards organizing and perfecting the society. Mrs. Allen Smith gave a number of patriotic musical selections, appropriate to the occasion—the interpretive details adding the charm of an exceptional treat throughout.

During the afternoon the guests sat down to a delightful collation—the table being prettily decorated in daffodils and violets—Miss Farnsworth, to whom credit is due for a great part of the success of the event, acting as toastmaster of the occasion. Besides the members, a number of guests were invited, those present being Mrs. J. G. Fell, Mrs. Nathaniel Smith, and Mrs. Eva T. Davis. Taken altogether the first annual meeting of the new branch of the Daughters of the Revolution was an event of which the founders and members may well be proud, and it will be another feather in the cap of the society to the excellence of its initial work, together with its large number of members, and the organization does not figure as an important element in a society instituted in honor of the sole—and—Anti-Imperialism.

• • •

The Reader's Club met on Thursday in the Exponent office in the Templeton Building, when a paper on the "Life of Henry M. Stanley, the African Explorer," was given by Mrs. C. J. Thomas, Mrs. H. S. Wells following with an extemporaneous talk upon timely and interesting topics. The next meeting will come to two weeks in the Exponent room.

FEMININE FLOTSAM.

A GIRL'S POCKET MONEY.

An Allowance Adds to Her Self-respect, Self-reliance and Business Capacity.

All up-to-date education points to self-reliance and individuality. The girl of the past could be gentle, clinging, dependent, the girl of the future must be strong, capable and fearless. Her sphere when, as so often happens, she is placed in a position of self-responsibility will regard to money matters, she dislikes the fact that she must ask for every penny that she spends. She has no pleasure in giving, for she can make no sacrifices.

In this very discontent may be found one of the answers to the question which so many parents are asking, "Why do our daughters go out from home where they are needed to accept positions in the business world—often unengaged?" The girl's answer is, usually, "I must be independent," and if you will look closely into her life and study her problems you will find that the independence for which she longs is not freedom to do that which is unconventional, nor does it always include ambitious visions of a career, but is rather a sense of freedom which an assured income, however small, gives.

If it is not too late begin when she is little, this daughter of yours, and give her something, if it be but pennies a week, for her very own. Let it be understood that it is all her spending money. If spent on Monday, no goodies until the next Monday. Let her have her own pocket-book, and, if she will, give her a little note to Saturday school or pet charity. Increase the amount as she grows older, including gradually small articles of dress. When, however, she becomes a young woman her allowance should, if possible, cover all her needs. If she can start a bank account you will be surprised to find the interest she will display in saving.

To lack thrift is ill to make for peace. There is no generosity in giving that which costs the giver nothing. An allowance will add to the happiness, the self-respect and self-poise of your daughter.—Dr. Ophelia Gates, in a paper read before Daisy Valley in the March Woman's Home Companion.

How to Brew Tea.

Lovers of tea will tell you, with a wise shake of the head, that tea should never be allowed to stand at the origin of time, and should never be used a second time. This latter rule is particularly insisted upon, yet—Dr. Thomas, who most certainly be looked upon as good authorities on the tea question, say to the contrary.

The Chinese put tea into their little tea-pots, let it steep a very short time, pour off the liquid and drink it, and then add more water to the leaves. Tea from this second brewing is the best of their tea. It has not the roughness of taste of the first brew.

CARE OF THE HAIR.

Suggestions that Will Help to Keep Its Beauty.

Dryness of the hair results from contraction of the vessels which keeps out the coloring matter and allows the pigment cells to shrivel. The causes are varied, a severe cold, grief, anxiety, or excessive use of drugs, in the tubes, which is the cause of the grayness of old age. There is a very excellent preparation for restoring the lime deposit, made principally of lime or lemon juice and glycerine. To half a pint of the acid add a quarter of a pint of rose water and six tablespoonfuls of rectified spirits shaken in it. After twenty-four hours strain through muslin, add ten and one-half ounces of glycerine and half a drachm of lemon or orange oil, and shake well. It will be fragrant and milky.

Bleach hair can be saved from grayness by treating it each night with the yolk of an egg, beaten up with glycerine. The hair must be combed afterward to prevent soiling the pillows, and must be washed in the morning to take away the stickiness. Dark hair should be treated with walnut juice combined into the hair. A frequent use of sage tea, made by steeping for half an hour a small quantity of pressed sage leaves in a quart of water, and when cold adding a pint of rum, will keep the hair dark and strengthen it.

Falling hair can be stopped by washing the scalp with warm water and the yolk of an egg, thoroughly drying it by applying night and morning a spoonful of this mixture. Pure glycerine, three drachms, and lime water, four ounces, rubbing it into the roots of the hair with a brush. About ten days later put a half ounce of tincture of cantharides into the bottle and use it as before. I have known beautiful results from this treatment in three weeks' time.

When the hair is thin, soft and fine, and comes out easily, it should be brushed very lightly. In fact, it is better to lay aside the brush entirely and comb and arrange the hair with the fingers each night before retiring and gently massage the scalp with the tips of the fingers. Dry, thin hair can be successfully treated with vaseline applied to the roots and rubbed into the scalp. Such hair should not be washed with soap oftener than once a month—once in two months is better. Coarse, strong hair is the only kind that can stand a frequent shampoo.

There is one point I desire to impress firmly upon every woman's mind—the great necessity of a comfortable hairbrush. The expensive articles will not stand such treatment," is the exhortation I hear on every side. Perhaps some yourself with well-made articles that will stand cleansing in soda or ammonia water, forever the nasty, thick well rotten the bristles of brushes and dull the luster of combs. This cleansing process ought to be under-taken each week, for the dirt which is carried away in the water came from the hair, and should not be put back into it nor removed by other means. How women can expect to have light shining hair with such dirty toilet articles as I sometimes see passes my comprehension.

HOUSEHOLD BOOK-KEEPING.

Prosperity Comes With Careful Regulation of Home Expenses.

The old adage has it that "A wife can throw out with the dishwater more than her husband can put in with the shovel," but Edwin Sanderson gives in the March Woman's Home Companion some very practical suggestions on this question. He says: "Undoubtedly the wife is responsible in large for the success of a business and affords the same opportunity as a successful business for a good manager of finances. Many a good income has been frittered away by lack of this care. With a carefully kept record of the expenditures of the month or the year there need seldom be no question as to what has become of the money, or a deficit, and the best of the family can see for himself just what is needed in personal management to keep up his home.

"Such good management does not consist merely in preventing the extravagant or wasteful, but involves the care and judgment which secure the return for the money which is of the most value to the family. Under such management money is not spent in one direction and left out in another, and the best of the family is not allowed to worry over an apparently necessary amount which is spent in some more vital direction. It will be found that the note fact that an accurate record of expenditures is in condition of economy. When it is to be remembered that each purchase is paying for some thing, in the account and there is a natural desire to make the showing of the end of the month as favorable as good management as possible. In closing a month's accounts the result is always certain to be compared with that of the preceding month, and if there has been an increase of expenses one is certain to be concerned for the purpose of finding out how it happened, and whether it may be avoided the next time. Thus the system promotes that vigilance and care which are essential to good management, and which will fail to produce the most gratifying results from the standpoint of economy."

Remodeling Sacques.

Children's sacques may be changed to shape. This is no longer a theory, but a fact. The sacque may be increased in size by gentle and repeated friction. It may be lengthened by pulling. A nose too pronounced in childhood be restrained in its growth by means of a little instrument, consisting of a clothespin. This instrument, by compressing the nasal artery, diminishes the flow of blood to the organ and thus restrains its growth.

A fat nose may be remodeled by judicious manipulation and made to have more beautiful lines.

Narrow mouths may be widened by inserting small pieces of fine surgical sponge into them. These bits of sponge, which will dilate with the moisture, in mouth for extend the mouth.

Cronies noses—those that incline to one side or the other—are easily remodeled by pushing the nose in the opposite direction. It may take a week to correct the defect, but it is not difficult, and requires only patience and persistency.

MAKING HOMES ATTRACTIVE.

How an Unsightly Factory Suburb Was Made to Blossom as the Rose.

"The common theory that factory districts are necessarily ugly and unsightly has usually led residents of those districts to accept the existing conditions as inevitable," writes E. L. Shaw in the March Woman's Home Companion, citing a notable instance to the contrary. Yet it is an interesting fact that a factory and a factory community in one of our middle-western cities has done more than any other institution or notion to illustrate what may be done by unity of effort, and by the simple use of time and strength which may be cultivated in every locality. A few years ago it was as unlovely an area and place, but now it has vines and flowers and gardens in every corner, front and back yards, fences and walls, windows, doorways and verandas show the pleasing ornamentation of green foliage. How this was accomplished? First, the owners of the factories cleared up their own grounds and planted where and where everywhere possible. This example of neatness was followed by many householders in the district. Then a civic public spirited man united in an organization, each member of which was not only to make his own grounds beautiful, but was to induce at least ten others to do the same.

"The rules followed in planting were: 1. Open lawn centers—having the lawn clear for a space of 50 feet. 2. Planting in masses along the borders. 3. Planting in curves rather than in straight lines. Add to these rules the principle that fences are unsightly and should be covered with foliage; the walls and porches should be made picturesque by vines, and that the rear yard should be kept in as good condition as the front. The association extended an invitation to the people of the whole community to join the movement, and it grew rapidly. It soon became popular to plant vines and shrubs and cultivate flowers. The employment of such vines as the Virginia creeper, moon-flower, wisteria, ivy, trumpet-creeper and honeysuckle and such shrubs like spirea, deutzia, weigela, barberry and others has completely changed the appearance of a neighborhood that was formerly dull and unlovely."
