A snow slide in Ogden canyon at the mouth of Wheeler's canyon buried T. W. Welsh, his team and wagon. Fortunately Welsh was not completely covered and was enabled to extricate out. When he found his horses' heads out of the snow, he shouted encouragement and got his team and wagon out after a very close call.

PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - MARCH 11, 1896.

Garden City Notes.

Rev. Joseph Willis, of the M. E. Church, has in charge a petition to the Legislature asking for Roosevelt to be Governor Littlefield's Honor Mission in Ogden. The W. C. T. U. of the State, under whose management the Rescue mission is placed, is the originator of the petition.

A large audience witnessed The Senator by the Frawley company tonight, in the opera house, and thoroughly enjoyed the standard dramatic work presented by the talented company. They would have drawn crowded houses could they have remained two or three nights longer. Anyon is their next stand.

On Friday the teachers and students of the Brigham Young Academy will visit Salt Lake City schools, the State Legislature and other points of interest in the capital. They will return in the evening and close the "day" with a ball in the opera house.

Mrs. Ella Bowen returned from Baltimore last evening, where she accompanied her husband, Mr. Gustav E. Robinson, last September. Mr. Robinson remains to finish his studies in the college of physicians and surgeons.

H. C. Ambrosen's tailor shop, near the Brigham Young Academy, was broken into Monday night and four coats, two vests and one pair of trousers, which had been left to be repaired, were taken away.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Twelves returned from a two weeks' pleasure trip to California, last evening. They are highly pleased with their visit to the Golden state.

An Unprotected Metropolis.

Instinctively the public thought, at the first alarm over the Venezuelan question, was directed towards the city and harbor of New York. If our coasts were unprotected, certainly the greatest prize which a foreign foe could hope to secure, and to the possession of which Blenkenshire would be directed instantly, was the commercial, industrial and financial metropolis of the Western hemisphere.

And what a pitiable spectacle was presented! Throughout the length and breadth of the great land not a single the magnificent approach from the ocean the fact population and wealth of the city and the protection is only two great guns of modern make, which might cull destruction at the invader. As to monitors, not quaint enough horse could find West through the pathless sea, round the peninsula Fire Wadsworth and Hamilton, Port Lafayette was a pitiable rule. A begging attorney, unable to decently clothe the efficient patriotic population to the act of national self-defense. Thus it is that Fort Hancock at the Hook had also been equipped with two twelve-inch guns of modern make—the most formidable type of cannon yet manufactured in this country for coast defense. The rest of the armament at the Hook consisted of three dynamite guns—two of fifteen-inch and one of eighteen-inch caliber. Fort Hamilton, it was noted, possessed a ten-inch mortar of nickel steel, but the gun, it was discovered, lay all tilted in on the mounts of the emplacement of which not been prepared for it, awaiting a carriage. Fort Wadsworth had been favored with an eighteen-inch gun, but that also was not in position.

There in was embraced the entire complement of defenses for New York harbor.—North American Review for March.
