POLITICAL SUMMING UP

The Old Order of Things and the New—Utah in and Out of National Lines—Some Reminiscences and Conclusions—Remarks by a Veteran at a Primary.

Written for the "News."

I wonder if anybody around here remembers a man who once figured prominently for a somewhat short time and in a way, if it were—who was given the name of Eiffel Tower O'Brien and who signed the union. It being about the only opportunity we had of accepting of any compliment, we accepted it and signed the union. Perhaps some reader in the land that cheers and instructs at this time, that? Probably not few do, and those few remember the hum made because of the tomfoolery which the joke gave him and the unfitness with which his patriotic purpose was received by the other. I speak of the name was given him by the Tribune, which has always been generous in that way, and as O'Brien was tall and long and slender the purpose of telling talked about [illegible] than any other, the compliment stuck, as previously herein set out.

E. T. and the undersigned were thrown together a season which are often expressive but never explained. The next time I saw him he reminded me of somebody—one unknown and not given name. He said, as he himself gives it, a future writer him, which we will let future O'Brien's name remain [illegible] behind him and [illegible] of other might circle, the [illegible] of church and state without the [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] through whose instrumentality the thing was to be [illegible] Democratic party and Liberal party. The people's party and Liberal party. Parties and people [illegible] and disgust with the secret very much so [illegible] formed.

You tell me where I lived. Often had I answered that question in the [illegible] and compensation as that prompted by Eiffel Tower, and I stood it. We are always chairman and other of the [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] whatever we had an [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
