BUSINESS AND MINES

The City Unable to Dispose of Its Bonds.

NOT A BID FOR THE $300,000

Mines Closed by Striking Miners.—Natural Soap Discovery.—Notes of Mines and Realty.

Salt Lake City cannot sell its bonds. The bids asked for $300,000 city bonds were to have been opened at noon today, but when that hour came, lo! there were none to open. Not a bid had been put in by anyone. The orders issued by the great financial houses of the East, as noted in the NEWS some weeks ago, to their agents to make no investments in western securities, had been complied with to the very letter, notwithstanding the denial, at the time referred to, by the aforesaid agents, that such orders had been given or included Salt Lake.

The fact now stands that the city administration has $300,000 bonds on hand which it had hoped to have turned into cash in a very short time. Instead of that, the city is out just the amount of advertising the sale of the bonds and incidental expenses. The money was to have been used, or so much thereof as might have found its way thither, for putting in the gravity sewer system. The outlook, therefore, is that this extensive improvement will be checked for some time at least.

It is understood that Mayor Baskin has been advised that if an extension of time be given for sixty days on which to receive bids, some sort of a figure will be put on that may prove satisfactory under the present eagerness of the city council to secure money. If this be the case, it is not unlikely that the extension will be promptly made.

The direct cause of the failure to bid is not one affecting the city's credit, but is the extreme stringency of the eastern money market. Other western cities than Salt Lake find themselves in the same box just at this time. The fact is that money is not available, and it is doubtful whether eight per cent bonds could be sold at the present juncture in financial affairs.

FROM DEATH CANYON.

J. J. Tingrey, an old Tintic miner, came in today from Death Canyon mining district, western Utah. He reports a pleasing state of affairs in that district. The Culpamate, of Antelope Park, he says, have some very fine prospects.

THE GRIZZLY COMPANY.

The directors of the Grizzly Mining company were in session this afternoon. They were expecting the result of the assay on samples from the big strike in the Lookout mine, as stated in the NEWS last evening. The assays are from picked specimens, and will probably run higher than the figures already given. The actual test will come, however, when a car load is sampled.

CLOSING MINES BY STRIKING.

A Wallace, Idaho, dispatch says that at the noon hour on Tuesday the carmen and shovelers at the Frisco mine demanded $3.50 per day instead of $3. Joe McDonald, manager of the mine, refused their demands and the mine closed down. The Gem mine also closed down at noon. Manager McDonald has offered to put the men back to work at the same wages. Both the Frisco and Gem mines will resume on these conditions, notwithstanding that the market is very low. Should the proposition of these two mines be refused, a general shut down will follow. The Morning mine at Mullan is making preparations to close down indefinitely should similar demands be made upon them. A demand was made on Tuesday on Culbertson, manager of the Tiger mine at Burke, that the hoisting engineer work eight hours instead of twelve hours. Twenty-fours' notice was given; if the demand is not accepted a strike will be ordered.

TELLS THE STORY WELL.

Spokane Review: Samuel V. Wilson, who recently visited the rich gold fields of eastern Oregon in the region known as the Virtue mining district, from Baker City, entertained a group of astonished listeners yesterday at the mining exchange. After recounting the story of the discovery of the famous White Swan by a young man in the employ of the Baisley brothers, and its marvelous output of gold, Mr. Wilson said: "The Makel mine is even more wonderful than the White Swan or any of the properties in that district. It was discovered about the 1st of last May, and a shaft was started which is now down about forty feet on a continuous vein, five feet in width. The test of the ore taken out of the shaft during this experimental development was so hot and its value is estimated at from $50,000. The balance of the ore on the dump, will probably run $100 to the ton. A few days ago an immense boulder was encountered. This was broken open by a few shots and the result was the filling of the bottom of the pan with free gold, over $500 of which was taken out, the remainder of the quartz going into sacks. The Makel vein is almost a solid mass of gold, all the way down to the depth of forty feet and there is not the slightest intention of pinching out."

NOTES.

Thomas Kendrick Jr., who at one time kept a hotel in Ogden, and later was engaged at La Plata during the mining excitement there in the summer of 1891, shot himself at Glenwood Springs, Colo., on Saturday, in an attempt to commit suicide. He is still alive, but there is little chance for his recovery. He had grown melancholy through prolonged ill health.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Utah Loan and Building association was held at the chamber of commerce last evening. The following directors were elected: H. J. Wallace, L. E. Hall, F. G. Gerrish, A. Manasse Jr., J. Barnett, E. H. Terrance, Louis Cohn, Fred Simon and J. B. Farlow. The annual report of the association for the year ending June 21, 1893, showed the association to be in a prosperous condition.

Colonel Woodward, Colonel Chatman Scott and General Rollins of Los Angeles visited Gray valley, California, Sunday to inspect a strata of petroleum said to be found in two places in that valley. The larger portion is found on a bluff, fifty feet below the top, and is over two feet in thickness. The smaller ledge crops out above it, and General Rollins is of the opinion that a still larger one, perhaps four feet thick, will be uncovered below it. The mineral appears to be an excellent soap. It has the appearance on the top of the finest castile soap. Half way through it is quite a brown tinge, and at the bottom it assumes a reddish cast. Trials with it have proved that it is excellent for all purposes for which soap is used, though it makes no suds. A little applied to a razor strop gives a razor a fine edge. It is believed that the mineral will prove valuable in more ways than as a substitute for soap, and they forwarded samples to San Francisco for careful analysis. If the find proves valuable it is General Rollins' intention to organize a company to purchase the land, erect a factory and handle the product on a large scale.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

A Fireman on a Passenger Train Caught Under the Engine.

ALL OTHERS ESCAPE UNHURT.

Evan Stephens Tells of the Bella Fiske Accident on the Chicago and Northwestern.

This morning the mail brought to hand Professor Evan Stephens's letter regarding the railway disaster in which he and a party of Salt Lakers were on the 14th instant, as stated on that day in a telegram to the NEWS from Belle Plaine, Iowa. The letter has by some means been delayed five days in transit. It reads:

In a wreck? Yes, and fortunately, out of it, and live. But one soul stepped across the narrow gulf into eternity, the rest of us being permitted to stand on the brink, scarcely conscious of the nearness of the awful abyss. Only by degrees did the situation dawn upon us as we neared the massive engine lying in a steaming heap of metal, mud, earth and splinters in a roadside ditch, its great body half crouched against the bank like some wounded animal on the point of expiring. Then came upon our half-roused senses the awfulness and reality of what had taken place.

As quickly as possible we organized at each section, where our friends were a moment before slumbering, if all were safe; then as quickly advised them to hastily don their raiment and leave the car lest another calamity might follow—another running train dash upon us before our bewildered minds gave the signal of danger; for fire or steam might be doing ready work, as our berths were almost even with the derailed engine.

How quiet everything was! I thought I heard one cry at first, but everything became as still as if it were only an ordinary halt at a station. We alighted. One moro was just breaking, and in the dim light we beheld an appalling sight. The track in our left was torn into splinters. Just beyond the baggage car on its side, with the sleeper next to our own crushed into it, while the crash that was originally between the two lay the opposite side of the track, side towards us, with only one end broken through. Our own car was but slightly damaged, by being somewhat thrown against the one ahead of us. There was a broken window caused by the flying debris of the torn up track. This was in a section used by two of our party.

As we gazed upon the wreck about us we listened with dread for cries of suffering, but none were heard. Marvelously, every one seemed to have escaped. The engineer came out of the heap of debris almost unhurt. But wait, one is missing. The fireman is nowhere to be seen. He is buried in the bank with the engine. Only one! But to one fond mother, one loving wife (a year ago a happy bride), it is almost too cruel as if the whole creation was in that intense mass, while we, in seeing each other safe, almost felt, for the moment, as if the whole world should rejoice with us in our deliverance! Passionable selfishness, perhaps, for the world is wide and contains many throbbing hearts, with not few who feel in the unless of friendship with our own.

In about an hour the mangled form of the fireman was taken from under the engine. Death doubtless had been instantaneous. The baggage was falsed out of the tattered baggage car, many trunks with the contents having been ripped. In six hours the track was cleared and the undamaged cars, drawn by another locomotive, carried the relieved passengers toward the "White City" as if nothing had happened.

A flat car, which had not been securely fastened on a side track, had rolled its way on to the main road during the night. That was given as the cause of the frightful accident.

Sandy's Incorporation.

Just as the NEWS goes to press the Sandy incorporation question is being again discussed at a special session of the county court. Despite the strenuous opposition which is offered to the scheme, the advocates of incorporation are sanguine of being able to carry their point all round.

Mrs. George T. Brice has gone to visit her mother, Mrs. George Ainslee, in Denver.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Lawson Wants an Investigation of Alleged Irregularities.

A SERIOUS OFFENSE HINTED AT.

Mayor Baskin and the City Attorney Called Upon to Advise the Council as to the Facts of the Case.

Trouble of a serious character is brewing in municipal circles. Charges exceedingly grave are being covertly whispered about among those who claim to be on the inside. When approached some of these solemn individuals shake their heads ominously and say their solicitors have been aroused and that on inquiry they have ascertained more than they care to tell.

In this mysterious manner things have been going on until an attempt will be made to hold an official investigation. Those who are instrumental in forcing the matter to an issue say they are doing it simply to expose fraud and not to further any private scheme of their own.

Several weeks ago Councilman Lawson, in opposing the granting of the franchise of the Salt Lake & Ogden Gas & Electric Light company, said that "money makes the world go, and it appears that money rules this franchise."

Later in the session, in speaking on the same question, he made the extraordinary statement couched almost in the same language, with the exception that it was stronger, that "money rules the world and money is ruling this franchise."

Mr. Lawson was highly pestuous at the time and spoke in thunderous tones but was not replied to. Subsequently the franchise was granted by the council and vetoed by the mayor. Later the executive disapproval was sustained. Later still that action on a vote of reconsideration was reversed—and now the charges are made that all is not right. Councilman Lawson is indignant beyond measure and said the public must know the details and with the accomplishment of that end in he had the following cumbingly worded resolution drawn up which he expected to present at the meeting of the City Council on Tuesday night last but was prevented from doing so on account of a sudden adjournment:

Whereas, It is alleged that the contracts heretofore given the Salt Lake Electric Light company are irregular and

Whereas, It is alleged that the franchise to the Salt Lake and Ogden Gas & Light company, was irregularly granted, and hence illegal, and

Whereas, The City Council is anxious to protect the city and its citizens; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Mayor and city attorney, be requested to investigate and advise the City Council as to the facts.

J. L. LAWSON.

Lawson says he will introduce the resolution at tomorrow night's session and urge its adoption. In case it is rejected he declares that he will "go to the bottom" by other means probably not so pleasant and expeditious but more effectual. He intimates that certain gentlemen of public trust are notorious money takers and have embellished with glaring brilliancy upon their official brassets the letter "B," signifying bonds and says he is anxious to tear off the covering and turn on the light.

Altogether the prospective "expose" promises some sensational developments and very reading.

Councilman Heiss was seen by a NEWS reporter this afternoon, and when questioned said that he had heard those rumors for some time but knew nothing of the facts. He could, however, that a full and speedy investigation would be made of an affair that was assuming serious proportions.

Councilman Folland and Evans were also spoken to on the same subject and admitted that they, too, had heard of the charges. Folland said he had seen Lawson's resolution but did not know what was back of it.

The Murder Case.

PLEASANT GROVE, June 22, 1893.—The Thomas Jensen murder case seems to have got terribly mixed among the papers. Here is the full jurors' report, although late:

An inquest holden at Pleasant Grove city, in Pleasant Grove precinct, county of Utah, on the 13th day of June, A. D. 1893, before Wm. H. Freeman, justice of the peace, upon the body of Thomas Jensen, whose names are hereunto subscribed. The said jurors upon their oaths do say that he came to his death by a wound inflicted upon his head with some edged tool by some unknown person. In testimony whereof the said jurors have hereto set their hands this day and year aforesaid.

LEWIS HARVEY,
OLE ANDERSON
EDWARD WARDSWORTH.

WM. H. FREEMAN,
Justice of the Peace, Pleasant Grove District.

FOR THE FAIR.

Frank and Howard Driggs of Pleasant Grove leave for Chicago this afternoon. The boys will visit relatives in Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois and take in the great Fair. Howard will return in about three weeks. Frank will remain in Chicago to attend the convention of deaf mute teachers, which convenes there next month.

Court Jottings.

W. H. Fuller has filed an action against E. L. French et al in the Third district court to collect $2100 on a promissory note secured by a mortgage.

The Salt Lake Building & Loan association of Utah has commenced suit against Margaret Green et al in the Third district court to foreclose $1000 on a bond secured by a trust deed.

W. H. McCornick vs William Goodwick et al; judgment by default in favor of the plaintiff for $622.37 and costs.

J. H. Harris, trustee, has filed his findings in the case of William H. Hemenway vs. Daniel Turnipseed et al. Plaintiff sued the defendants, who were stockholders of the Wasatch stone company, to collect $445.56, being the amount of a judgment which he had received against the company. The defendants were the signatures of the company and put in certain placer locations, a fact which proved to be patented, in full payment for the amount of the capital stock. They claimed that the locations were made in good faith and occupied by the company in a regular manner, and hence they were not personally liable for further subscriptions. The referee has found for the defendants.

WITHIN OUR GATES.

D. R. Shreve, who once wore the stripes of a cuttlish cad is one yet in some respects, since over from his Mecca headquarters and was mingling with friends today.

***

J. P. Sylvest of Ogden was one of the June tin village's contributions to our floating population today. He seemed to enjoy the wind as one in the manner born.

***

John L. May, fresh from the rifle pits at Ogden, where he has been teaching the young idea therefront how to shoot, is back to Gotham at the City Hall as smiling and affable as of yore.

***

W. L. Cook, clerk of the Second district court at Beaver and one of Salt Lake's sons, came up to the scene of his nativity this morning and was considerably engaged looking around among judges and lawyers' headquarters during the day.

***

John M. Coombs, just returned from Washington (where he was a delegate to the Presbyterian conclave and incidentally to the big show at Chicago) dropped in today. He has not dropped off, however, to either Fisher or Spring since leaving us a couple of months ago.

***

Col. Cora M. Rice, a distinguished Kentuckian, arrived here a short time ago and with Kentucky modesty has kept himself in the background. He is known as well as any man in the state of Daniel Boone, Henry Clay and John C. Breckenridge, and was introduced to the NEWS by Col. Joseph B. Wallace. Long may we know such Americans!
