

AN ECLECTIC PRAYER.—There is a minister down east who detests written sermons and who correctly thinks that prayers should be the extemporaneous outpouring of an overflowing heart. On this occasion he had an unusually large congregation, among whom was a cute one, who, knowing the pseudo-religious ultraism of the priest, determined to take some of the "starch" out of him.

The prayer commenced:—

"Father of all, in every age, by saint and savage adored"—"Pope," said a low but clear voice. The minister, after casting an indignant look in the direction of the voice, continued—"whose throne sitteth on the adamant hill of Paradise"—"Milton," again interrupted the voice. The minister's lips quivered for a moment, but recovering himself he began, "we thank thee, most gracious Father, that we are permitted to assemble once more in thy name, while others, equally meritorious, but less favored, have been carried beyond that bourne from whence no traveler returns."—"Shakespeare," responded the voice. This was too much. "Put that impudent rascal out," shouted the minister. "Original" ejaculated the voice, in the same calm but provoking manner.

THE THISTLE.—The use of the thistle as the Scottish national emblem originated as follows:—When the Danes from England invaded Scotland, they availed themselves of the pitch darkness of night to attack the Scottish forces unawares. On approaching the Scottish camp unobserved, and marching barefooted to prevent their tramp being heard, one of the Danes trod with his naked foot upon a large prickly thistle; and the sharp cry of pain which he instinctively uttered suddenly apprised the Scots of their danger, who immediately ran to their arms and defeated the foe with a great slaughter. The thistle was thenceforward adopted as the national insignia of Scotland.

MASSACRE OF BARTHOLOMEW.—The whole-sale slaughter called "massacre of Bartholomew" took place in France in the year 1572, commencing at Paris on the night of the festival of St. Bartholomew, August 24th, by secret order of Charles the Ninth. The number of Protestants (called Huguenots) throughout France who thus lost their lives amounted to 70,000.
