
HOME.

No other word brings to our minds more pleasing reflections than the little word home. Forest Dale is intended to consist only of homes. It has attractions that no other addition in Salt Lake City possesses.

In times like the present people look for homes where their taxes are likely to be as low as possible, and their other expenses in proportion. Forest Dale, a subdivision of the old farm of the late President Young, is just far enough from Salt Lake City to be free from city taxes. Vegetables and fruit are cheaper, and for building purposes brick can be bought for at least one dollar per thousand less than in Salt Lake City. While it is wise to consider the question of economy, other matters are of even greater importance. Forest Dale has its own water system; the springs from which the supply is obtained producing over 1,000,000 gallons of pure, clear water in 24 hours. The pipes are laid all through the addition and those who purchase a home own the water piped to their door as well as the land their house stands on. One electric car system passes right through the addition, while another runs within a short distance of it and will also eventually pass through. Good school facilities exist, two teachers being employed in the Forest Dale school, with a high school for more advanced pupils near by. The social enjoyment of the neighborhood is not neglected, for the Forest Dale Pleasant Hour Club being formed for the express purpose of furnishing at home plenty of harmless yet pleasant recreation. The old farm house furnishes quarters for concerts, dances and socables. These, with the Sunday Schools and kindred meetings, bring the young a field for the development of their talents, without which no people can progress. For those who desire a home whether large or small we have property unencumbered anywhere. We desire to sell only to home makers. If you want a home, our agents will be pleased to take you to the property, and let you select that which suits you best. Line of any size can be obtained. Call at room 216 Dooly Block, opposite Building, see plat of the ground and obtain any particulars you may wish. No trouble to show property.

SOMETHING ABOUT BEES.

The Utah Beekeepers' Association to Meet Again in April.

A Correspondent Writes of Bees, Honey, Bee Stings, Toads and Insects.

FARMINGTON, UTAH, Oct. 12, 1893.—The semi-annual meeting of the Utah Beekeepers' association, which was advertised to be held last Saturday, was attended by so few of the members of the association that no business was transacted and the meeting was adjourned till the day preceding the opening of the next April conference. These meetings have weekly been held the day after the adjournment of conference, but by mistake the custom was not observed in the instance.

***

On account of the shortness of the season, the frosts and the grasshoppers, the honey crop this year is far short of the general average. The industry is an important one, and should be encouraged, as the sweets the industrious bees gather would truly be "wasted on the desert air" if not saved and stored by the "busy bees." It is also an established fact that in assisting to fertilize plants bees are a great help to the agriculturist.

***

One question that was to have been discussed by the association is the great damage that bees are doing every fall of late years, to the fruit crop before it has been gathered, when it has been punctured by other insects, and also after it has been placed on sufficient to dry.

***

Another important question that requires attention is the clamoring for reuse of moth millers and other destructive insects. A good many people think that bee men are much to blame for this state of affairs, as many of them kill hundreds of cords every year. The reason of this is that more than one hundred uses have been found in the strength of a hive. It can be easily perceived that the soil is a great benefit to agriculture by destroying insects and they should not be destroyed. The bees can be made secure from them by a hive proof fence, if the hives are on the ground, or if on a scaffold, by a platform extending out in front of the hive entrance about one and a half or two feet. I might suggest that there are worse laws passed than one that would prescribe a penalty for cruelty to bees.

***

Examine all new colonies of bees as many of them have not made sufficient honey to winter on, and it is better to kill the bees, or put them in with other swarms, than to allow them to consume the honey and then starve to death during the winter and coming spring.

***

Considerable honey can also be saved by examining all of the hives, either by lifting or observing the number of bees that are working, during warm days. All swarms that are liable to cast free through the winter can be treated the same as the light new swarms. In thus treating bees I take right comb honey from the winter stores or some of my hives, and replace it with dark comb honey, or pieces of comb containing considerable bee bread. In melting honey that is in old comb, it should be in a large vessel containing water, otherwise it will run on the bottom of the can.

***

Contract all hive entrances with tin or other material to prevent mice finding an entrance during cold weather while the bees are in a dormant condition; and by all means have water placed room on the hives.

***

When either bees have attached a weak swarm, replace the hive being robbed with an empty box or hive, as nearly like the position and if some empty comb is in it, it will better satisfy or receive the new arrivals, then they are not apt to attack adjoining hives. In addition to the necessary patent smokers a very good one can be improvised by cutting a hole about one inch in diameter near the bottom of any kind of a large can. Put some gives of wax, hay or rubbish in the bellows, then some dry material that will burn readily, and smother the fire with more wet or green stuff. You can increase the quantity of smoke by blowing in and doing up the material on top, or decrease it by pressing the pile down.

***

It is remarkable, and very fortunate that serious casualties do not occur more frequently from the terrible stings that mature bee gives the bee owner in inflicting as real or supposed enemies. A hive of bees that can be approached by children, is almost as dangerous as an open well. Reports are frequently published of horses and other animals being stung to death, after tipping over or otherwise disturbing a colony of bees. A calf belonging to my nearest neighbor was killed some time since through getting a short rope that was tied in its neck entangled in some bushes close to a row of bee hives. It did not sting any of them over, but disturbed the hundreds enough to cause them to pour out nearly as thickly as when swarming, completely covering portions of the calf's body. They were very tolerant force in their attack on the poor brute. We hastily smoked the hives and poured cold water over the calf's body, then scraped thousands of stings out of its hide, but it only lived a few hours.

***

I have heard of several small children in Farmington being discovered in the act of poking sticks in the entrance of bee hives. It was almost like putting a brand of fire close to a keg of powder as far as the danger is concerned. Although there would be some expense incurred in placing a board around the apiary, it would be preferable leaving them as, in case a child should be fatally stung from playing near them parents would always regret that the small colony had not been met.

***

I asked an excellent physician what course to pursue with the stings, and was advised to use an external application of diluted ammonia or a strong solution of baking powder or saleratus. Wine, liquor or strong tea taken inwardly are effective remedies. For one or only a few stings a good method is to extract the stinger immediately, then bite and rub the wound, or pinch the wound with the thumb and finger, thus forcing the poison out of the wound or something is bound to get into the blood. This needs to be done as quickly as possible.

Returned Home.

Elder Frank M. Cannon of this city returned home from a mission to England on October 7th. He left Sept. 5th, 1891, and labored principally in the Norwich conference, enjoying splendid health all the time. Elder Cannon's address is 130 1st street, this city. He will be glad to see anyone who may wish to hear from saints or friends in the Lowestoft branch of the Church.

The Kimball "Summer."

In the matter of the estate and guardianship of Alfred H. and Theila R. Kimball, minors, the hearing on petition to revoke letters of guardianship of Susannah Dyer came before Probate Judge Blair yesterday afternoon. Attorney Williams, for the petitioner, asked for a further continuance on account of the illness of his associate, and an order was made setting Tuesday, October 17, for hear arguments. This is the case in which the petitioner, one Smith, made some bitter charges against the guardian as published in the News at the time, and which he attempted to substantiate on the testimony of a female witness, who declared that she was real the history of the respondent "by cards."

Many of the Same Kind.

If applicants for marriage license continue to be as numerous during the next few weeks as has been the case for the last month, County Clerk Doty will have to consider the advisability of erecting additional quarters to hold them. Before the ink again published in the News yesterday, still others were added thereto before the office closed last evening. Among the couple were Henry A. Stevens, of Ogden, 23, and Tillie Fetzer, of Salt Lake, 18. They were married in consequence by Judge Blair at the residence of the bride's parents, on Seventh West street.

For Labor Performed.

The case of Edwards Bevan vs Adam H. Paul et al, carrying on business under the firm name of the Third Term Mine, and in which the plaintiff alleged that defendants were indebted to him in the sum of $69.50 for work and labor performed, was called up in Judge Bartch's court late yesterday. Paul did not file an answer in the case but the other defendant averred that he had leased the property to Paul, and therefore were not liable for any debts incurred. In the lower court judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount and the case was appealed. The hearing was proceeding when the court adjourned for the day and was resumed this morning.

Iowa Conference.

Minutes of the Iowa Conference, held in the Huntington hall, 103 Broadway, Council Bluffs, Oct. 1st, 1893, Conference President George T. Marshall Jr. presiding. Andrew Jensen from Salt Lake City, Chas. E. Fletcher, Geo. A. Beal, Jos. M. Jepson, Jos. Cluff, Wm. West, W. J. Butterworth, S. A. Rucker, Hans J. Nielsen, Francis Webster, and Elder Cook, the latter two recently arrived from Zion, were present. Elders M. F. Weaver and J. J. Jensen were unable to attend and Elder F. S. Carroll was detained on account of ill health.

At the opening remarks of Elder Marshal, a feeling of sorrow was plainly manifest among the Elders and Saints present, at the announcement of the death of Elder Charles W. Stagner's wife, which kept our beloved brother from our conference.

Elder Butterworth spoke at length on the duties of the Saints. Elder Beal followed, giving some very interesting statements pertaining to missionary labors. The afternoon session was occupied by Elder Andrew Jensen, principally on Church authority and fulfillment of the Saints since 1830, which was very interesting.

The evening session was occupied principally on the same subjects by Elders Marshall, Jensen and Jepson. Many encouraging words of counsel were given to all present.

At the Priesthood meeting the reports of the Elders were very encouraging and a congenial feeling was expressed by all present.

Those desirous of corresponding with the Conference do so by addressing them in the following Saints of labor.

Geo. T. Marshall Jr. and W. J. Butterworth, 101 Graham avenue, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Geo. A. Beal and H. J. Nielsen, Hume, Bates county, Iowa.

Jos. M. Jepson and Francis Webster, Sedan, Chautauqua county, Kansas.

Jas. Cluff and Wm. Hendon, Meadow, Shelby county, Kansas.

Stephen A. Rucker and J. Cook, Beaman, Burt county, Nebraska.

M. F. Weaver and J. J. Jensen, Warrens, Monroe county, Wis.

Elder Wm. West was formerly released to accompany Elder F. S. Carroll home on account of ill health, Elder Geo. E. Fletcher returned home to attend the funeral of his wife's mother.

Conference was fairly attended and a good spirit prevailed.

CHAS. E. FLETCHER,
Clerk of Conference.

Beware the Knife.

Allcock's Porous Plasters are more preferable to mixture preparations, capacity and safety of action, and are the only reliable plasters ever produced. They have successfully stood the test of over thirty years; are by the public their virtues have never been equalled by the numerous imitators who have sought to trade upon the reputation of Allcock's by coating plasters with some inferior, and claiming them to be "just as good as Allcock's," and they stand to-day foremost not only of the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.
