THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Resolutions on the Home Rule Bill.—Other Business Transacted.

At the adjourned session of the Democratic Territorial convention in the Constitution building on Saturday afternoon, the committee recommended that the Democratic convention to nominate a delegate to Congress be held at Provo at such time or might be thereafter determined by the Territorial central committee.

The committee further recommended that Judge H. P. Henderson be selected to fill the vacancy in the central committee occasioned by the death of Mr. Dyer. The report was approved and Mr. Henderson accorded a seat.

The committee of three, consisting of R. W. Sloan, J. W. McKean and W. H. King, appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the views of the Democratic central committee upon the Home Rule measure now pending in Congress reported as follows:

Whereas, the Democratic party of Utah profoundly appreciates the efforts at all who are striving to secure for Utah a much needed measure of relief therefrom,

Resolved, 1. That in supporting the Home Rule bill they have carried the principle of all classes of citizens, who are for the Territory's lasting good and continued prosperity.

2. That all free liberty-loving people who in the west, east, north and south will be gratefully to the gods work now undertaken, and the victory shall have been won, and we be honorably rewarded.

Upon the report of the House congressional committee on Territories upon the House bill to be printed and distributed throughout the Territory.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The chairman and secretary were directed to issue an official call pursuant to the action of this day taken regarding a Territorial convention, and the committee adjourned to meet at Ogden, Saturday, May 14, at 11 a. m., unless sooner convened by the chairman.

The Territorial Democratic Society held a meeting at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon at the rooms of the Central Club. The roll call showed the following members present in person or by proxy: H. P. Henderson, president; A. T. Schroeder, secretary; E. A. Smith, R. W. Sloan, T. J. Scanlan, J. Greenwood, L. G. Long, W. F. Smith, S. A. Merritt, J. J. Tyler, Thomas D. Dee, H. C. Lett, J. H. Moyle, George Cullen, A. H. Snow, and J. W. Judd.

Judge Smith announced the recent death of Frank H. Dyer, chairman of the executive committee and vice president from Salt Lake. On motion, E. A. Smith, W. H. King, J. Greenwood, J. J. Tyler and R. W. Sloan were appointed a committee on resolutions. They submitted resolutions expressive of deep regret at Mr. Dyer's demise, and in recognition of his valuable services to the cause.

Utah's World's Fair Building.

The Utah World's Fair commission has decided to construct preliminary plans for an exhibit structure to be erected at Chicago, for the Territory. The cost of construction for the World's Fair at Chicago has promised to furnish plans for Utah's building free of cost. They will be submitted to the commission and strongly backed for approval. It has not yet been decided whether wood or glass and iron will be used.

An individual who has evidently run out of something to write about has been continuing people against the wholesome of fresh air into their sleeping rooms. Good heavens!

Late dispatches indicate that the emperorship Germany may be overcome at last by an energy that made it easy for them to whip France in 1870, namely, temperance. The brewing and distilling business has increased enormously in Germany in the past five years. The increased consumption of intoxicating liquors is chosen in the energetic efforts of Emperor William to suppress drunkenness. Worst of all, the numerous forms of intoxicating drinks in their efforts to supply the increased demand and gross rich forms, adulterate the liquors with poisonous and hurtful drugs to an alarming extent, producing evil which will probably take both to prevent and further check at any time. In time these adulterated intoxicants will destroy the manhood of Germany, and of France as well.

Of much interest to sportsmen would be the annual proposal for the World's Fair by that prince civil service man, Theodore Roosevelt. Theodore wants to have an exhibition in connection the play of all the weapons and wounds used in North America in hunting, killing and trapping since the country was discovered. He would begin with the tribe and weapons used by the wild Indian when the white man first set foot upon the continent. Next he would exhibit the means used by half pay of United Boers and others, who first settled in the western wilds of the old times. Along with these would be exposures and "shooting," also similar boats and implements of all the kinds of game that have ever been taken in North America. And of all, wind up the show, would come the celebrated artificial Rice, fishing tackle, rifles and hunting camping outfits of hunters and judges of sport. He would name the display collectively the "American Sportsman's Exposition." Highly interesting it would be. With all their fine and expensive new Bonanza guns and outfits, however, the hunters of today can kill no more game as much as some fellows who lived on and fished in old times who had no outfit at all to speak of.

A Crowded Hands.

The highest civilization of good roads cannot be too often and too strongly preached in this republic. Improved carriage roads such improvers as are the wonder and delight of every American who goes to Europe, are what we want. If members not much have seen and them, whether by the state by aid by or just hard upon the good and money expense of "marching the roads," and taking charge of the matter itself, or whether by a few enthusiasts in each neighborhood evening public sentiment to the personal value property would force thoroughfares, and so permanently hitch-ade to every in the matter. Any way or manner, good roads we must have in this country.

The states themselves are beginning awakened clearly to the need, and several bad governors have warmly fought for civilized highways by message and otherwise. Any neighborhood can have good roads. There are books written in abundance telling just how these can be made—books that anybody can understand. If a farmer could not induce his neighbors to join him in building an agreeable road, he could make high, dry and beautiful the highway passing his own land certainly. The increased value such a highway would put upon his farm would be to pay him enough in one way, while the increased beauty of his grounds would be quite as impressive in another.

If you want to build up your place and set up the Farmer's Home lots and will then to city people, build good roads. Colonel Alfred Pope, writing in The Forum, tells us that bad roads force people to live in cities, while good roads draw them into the country. It makes a great difference whether you undertake to a railway station in the suburbs or whether it shall take you fifteen, and that is the difference between a bad highway and a good one. The increased cost of transportation on a wretched highway is more than sufficient to pay for a smooth, hard roadway. And the cost of transportation is one of the most serious problems at present confronting us in this big country.

Colonel Pope has a plan of his own for improving our highways, and it is as follows:

I would have each state by a legislative enactment do at once two or three things by the direction of the municipal, city, county and commercial organizations, or establishing a new one, namely, for building in the opinion, measured constructions, and, finally, and effect of the different modes recommended to have the municipal, city, county have some kind of class organization and advisory commission by appointment or election, and were appointed to the state in all and and bridge building and repairing, and especially good roads and was a good, practical and rational plan for the whole state, thereby, I would have the state road law or amended and amended some through highways, connecting the principal towns in the state, and connecting them with the railroad stations, neighbors, where they are most needed, either for good traffic purposes or for the pleasure of travelling.

The state would thus remove the monopolies and the general subjection of farmers to the necessities of their country roads, and would give them the example and advice, and the influence of the different towns in improving their neighborhood roads as feeders to the main road. I would have the state take the expense of the repairs of main roads, and in the law were enacted to have a commission to be appointed by the governor, and to be paid for their work, and the commission adopted and carried into effect the Roman road system, and I would have the money to keep them in good condition by the parties who made the road, and the commission adopted and carried into effect the Roman road system, and I would have the money to keep them in good condition by the parties who made the road.

A Lively Race.

A dozen horse carriage maker says that one day not long ago a dumb man walked into his shop and picked up a little and spoke. After by offer a blind man came in, who took up a hammer and saw, and in the afternoon a deaf lady drove into the barn-yard his father's horse and hold. The carriage maker is wondering for the fulfillment of these omens.
