THE TICKETS.

The NEWS is now able to present to its readers the full municipal tickets of the two parties which will contest for supremacy in this city at the election on the 7th of November—the Citizens-Independent and the Liberal. In another part of this paper will also be found a complete list of the names put forth by the Democratic and Republican parties for members of the Legislature from the various districts of the Territory. The various conventions have done their work, and, except for soon declinations and consequent changes as may occur, the matter now rests with the party committees, the candidates, and the voters.

The latter are presumed to possess intelligence enough to know which principles are most worthy of their support and which candidates deserve their suffrages. It is to be hoped their conduct will justify this assumption, and that no man will be chosen to represent any section or any class, of whom his own neighbors or the people at large will have reason to feel ashamed. None of the candidates named are sure to be defeated; it will be well for the Territory and a happy day for its people if such discrimination shall be employed that victory may perch upon the banners of those only who are most capable. This may be a visionary hope—we believe it usually proves so in politics; still, it is worth striving after.

As to a choice between the two lists of candidates for the city offices, we venture to say no real friend of the municipality can long remain in doubt. On the one hand, the gentlemen named enter the lists as champions of a revolt against extravagance, disorder, lawlessness and misgovernment, and they are citizens whose personal reputation and actual interests are a pledge that they will be conservative and prudent in office. On the other hand the candidates stand upon a platform defiantly commemorative of the present disgraceful regime, and there few pledged, so far as such platform pledges mean anything, to its continuance; while they themselves are in some cases too worthless to be identified with a cause so discreditable and to others too worthless to deserve any decent man's vote. The contrast is too great to admit of any one's mistaking it. The Citizens-Independent ticket's principles and ticket confidently ask the support of all reputable men, Democrats, Republicans, Liberals and voters of no party affiliations. For these the movement was called into existence. It ought to be successful, and if they stand by it it will.

"'TIS A WISE CHILD," ETC.

Through tiresome and excessive reiteration of his particular newspaper organ, many people from sheer exhaustion have come to assume that Mr. C. L. Allen, a Liberal nominee for the Legislature, is "the father of the present school law." By way of refreshing them with a morsel of self-truth, the News takes occasion to tell them that he is nothing of the kind. The present school law owes nothing of such parent as Mr. C. L. Allen.

The gentleman was the father of a school law which "died a-borning"—it died resistedly. It never, the lower house of the Territorial Assembly, the only part of the Legislature to which he ever succeeded, was even successful in its travail with the subject. To the upper house, the Council, belongs the credit. Mr. Cahoon, of Davis, chairman of that body's committee on education, and Prof. Jenney, committee from Salt Lake, united in long and in good faith on a measure which, brought forth a creature that after much amendment gave way to a substitute, which was promptly passed by the Council, was accepted by the House in lieu of any bill that under consideration in that branch, and went to the executive office. Governor Thomas considered the bill carefully, felt freely discussed its objects, but suggested two score of sorts of amendments. These were considered by both houses of the Assembly, whereupon the measure received approval and went into the statute book. This is the "present school law."

So that, while in the multiplicity of parents the bill may justly know where to look for its father, it will hardly overlook Prof. Jenney of Mr. Cahoon to favor of Mr. Allen. The latter was no more to father than any one of the other twenty-three members of the House or the other ten members of the Council, of the Governor himself. Mr. Allen deserves abundant credit for his connection with it if we concede that he was willing to act as we came to act for, while we believe he positively voted against the bill, it is not exactly to say this was out of pique because he couldn't have his own way, he was doubtless in favor of the objects sought by the measure. Thus far we yield him praise, but no whitter.

ABOUT THE SIBERIAN JEWS.

Notwithstanding the doubts at first entertained of the authenticity of the statement that wealthy Jews were being expelled from Siberia, it now appears that the first rumors about the matter were but too well founded. A New York dispatch now states that about 500 will soon, at the command of the czar, leave Siberia for America. It seems according to the latest accounts that Siberia by a Russian law is emptied from Jews. They are not permitted to enter it for purposes of trade except by special tickets from the czar. The law has frequently been transgressed, it is said, by wealthy Jews, and the expulsion takes effect upon them. They must either leave the country or pay a redemption of $500 for the privilege of remaining in accordance to Russia. The number is not thought to be as large as at first estimated.

A San Francisco Chronicle reporter recently interviewed one Mr. Hotel Cohn, one of the latest arrivals from Siberia in that city. His story is that two years ago a edict was promulgated ordering every Jew in Siberia to leave if they would not become members of the Greek church. In consequence thousands became nominal Christians. The others saw by one received written orders to leave by a certain date. Mr. Cohn recently got notice to leave in four months. He advises other that they can well-nigh finds to take their with them. He was informed afterward that the petition had been handed over to the minister of justice, and by him denied.

In the short time which he had to depart he could not dispose of his property advantageously, and even had he been given a longer allowance he could hardly have realized more, he said, as the Jews who remain do not care to buy anybody else's, now, since it will be their turn next to become. The other residents get the property for very little when they are willing to purchase at all from a Jew.

Cohn made a rule each of a few days, and one night with his wife and two young children he slipped down the Amur river, a tributary of the Amoor. He, along some food, and in two months they traveled 500 miles on their way to a port on the Pacific. When the family reached Yokohama the shoemaker's money was enough to bring all to them here, and as his wife and the youngest child died at sea, the Japanese port. At present he resides in Sacramento, Cal., and he says he is happy in his independence and faithful and neither perhaps desires and marriage to Russia, the other son engaged in building opium dens, the wife and five daughters in a orange grove and thousands of miles from her husband and their other child, depending on charity for their subsistence.

It appears that but little preparation has been made for the reception of such exiles as may find their way to this country, because they have generally been supported and to need any pecuniary assistance.

OF TISSUE MIGHTY THIN.

The News does not care to enter into a passage at arms with the anti-Mormon organ in this city, and begs apologizes to its readers whenever it feels compelled to notice any of the slanders and falsehoods against the Mormon people, to which the Tribune's columns have ever been open and with which almost daily since the beginning of its career they have been filled. It weapons are such as contain a self-respect, provoke most journals from controlling and the News are based under the still unfortunately in the hope that in time even anti-Mormon fanatics would be ashamed by their bogus journey and look on their brother as a fellow-being and acknowledge his obligation. We are not going to abandon that hope now, when the manifestation is nearer than ever before and such great evidence as by from time to time indeed upon the subject, about to end, as the Tribune of Sunday morning, with the assertion in one day with such which it is alleged to contain a fulsome eulogium of ex-Governor Ireland "statesman" "patriot" and "citizen."

To think of a moral industry as further witness than the history of the alleged "misdemeanor" of an ex-territorial governor, Morgan County, has been sufficiently drained and and emphasized by the officials and accusers interested in their subjects. A jury was in no wise to have the matter a fair and impartial trial. A jury was in no wise to have the matter a fair and impartial trial. A jury of twelve men, we are told to believe, with the Salt Lake Herald, which says:

> Now mark the intimate Ross with full particulars of the case, adhering from well known reliable residents of Morgan, the members of the jury and their interest, and a character and thorough explanation of all the facts relating to the indictment. It is made as clear as the sunlight on a shadless day. Can the whole situation, with nearly unbelievable and damnable, be so kept of the one-time prisoner who has been trying to cajole or persuade body to bend to the fact of his guilt, and who, worse of poor as a market among a people who take no notice of him. The charges was committed by the Mormon (?) and the place Pennsylvania (?) proof the man Lemon to write something about it which he employed and subject to sell for purpose and the Tribune, and that is all there is of it.

Gratified as we are with this expression of the popular verdict, and confident as we are of being able to produce all similar fabrications, we must decline to provide affidavits and return statements to contradiction of mere editorial reportings in the signs referred to, such as have on two or three occasions found a place in its columns since the Mormon "outrage" above mentioned. Something more tangible than a yarn concocted in the Tribune office and spun in the fancy of the editor's brain will be needed to draw out Ross. We have no ammunition to waste on drivel. If, after the late journalistic experience of the Presbyterian preacher and the ex-Mormon in Mexico, any more Mormon "outrages" are to be extracted from informants capable of signing their names to them, there is a chance that we may deem it worth while to go to the expense of sifting them to the bottom.

Meanwhile, why does not the Illustrious Tribune call out the troops because of the miscreants' deed in stretching a rope the other night across the sidewalk near the Twelfth ward meeting house to trip the night? Wasn't that a tripe incident bearing to show Utah's antipathy for religion?

PLENTY OF GOOD.

Those who persist in taking the hypochondriac view of life and things and see in the vista of the future, among other indescribable ranks, the overpopulation of the globe with a corresponding diminution of the means of sustenance, cannot properly be said to take a short-sighted view of the event of there is anything at all in their forebodings it must be a long way in the future. We need not consider Europe, millions of square miles of trackless waste in Russia alone, give thought to the interior of Africa, where are vast ranges of forest, mountain and plain which have never yet echoed the human voice; nor let our attention rest upon the wilds of Australia, where a district of territory as large as half the United States is still a forbidding wilderness. We can come into the heart of civilization and find—the present exposure of the world a basis upon which to predicate conclusions as to how long it will probably be before elbow-room will be at a premium in this comparatively little 5,000 still big enough world.

At the World's Fair on the 9th there were gathered together all told 91,464 persons! Just think of this immense army being congregated within the narrow span of Jackson Park, where there was also a great mass of large buildings occupying probably half of the space, and then let one's thoughts branch out, if they will, into the all but infinite space beginning at home and ending nowhere, in search of a cure to the solution of a wearisome and useless problem. It is a subject that sublimity sufficient might prove a Billing companion piece to some of Camille Flammarion's unwelcome announcements, but even then the consolation would be far in the future that it would interest only the very few. It is quite impossible for the well-balanced human mind to fix itself intensively upon a theme whose finite is so very remote.

Speaking of the great throng at the Fair reminds the Chicago Times to say that, dealing with large numbers it is difficult for the human mind to grasp their significance. This mighty throng at Jackson Park, on the 9th, numbered within little more than a square mile, considerably more souls than are in various states of the Union. For the 91,464 who came under Tillotson are run through for the sake of the significance of the illustration.

It is not probable that within this generation, at least, the idea of this enormous will be seen, in the opinion expressed, and we are thinking of it, however, it should be borne in mind that a few years ago the great cities of which we have been speaking, almost a state of place of all, though in possibly might have been conceived. Many things that are only possible today may be probable tomorrow and Rome was not built in a day.

Incidents of the two city limits, opposite the office "janitor of the press" when the Wayfarer will appear in the sky over the steel, all conquering battle of Great, not in the most the ultra sagacious name of Deseret.

We need not be surprised—strong in Utah's sandy deserts of the city's interests must be offer and deep cash. Brother Brigham's!

The account of sighting of comet which has for one month by a New York judge—Gerry alone—reached through an full-fledged American citizen in seven minutes. This almost equals the pace set by the Chicago divine cards.

The experience of an Indiana countryman who during a visit to the World's Fair paid six dollars for having his hair cut, suggests that it is not only painful but sometimes also costly to get one's wishes in this old.

It will be interesting to see how, in his present mood of justifiable exasperation, President Cleveland will frame his thanksgiving proclamation.

A comparison of the two municipal tickets now before the people of Salt Lake City can easily but one sentiment—"Well! Well! Well!"

Mr. Conkling's friends have forbidden him to write any more letters. He would be sensible, Mr. Jack, doesn't need the warning any longer.

The party of warmed Powers and missed opportunities finds itself long on chin-music but short on votes.
