THE VOTE IN DETAIL

McKinley 661 1-2, Reed 84 1-2, Morton 58, Quay 61 1-2, Allison 35 1-2.

NOMINATIONS MADE UNANIMOUS.

Pabst Nominated for Vice President—The Convention Adjourns Sine Die.

St. Louis, June 18.—When the secretary proceeded to call the roll, there was no response until the state of Iowa was reached, when John N. Baldwin of Cerro Gordo state nominated Senator Allison.

Kansas, Kentucky and Louisiana were called, no one responding. Upon the call of Maine, Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts took the speaker's stand and nominated Speaker Reed.

The clerk proceeded with the roll call until the state of New York was reached, when Hon. Wm. A. Sutherland of that delegation, arose and presented Chauncey M. Depew, who placed Gov. Morton in nomination.

At the close of Depew's remarks about the gold standard, a voice asked:

"What about the erring sisters who walked out of here awhile ago?" (Laughter.)

Mr. Depew—They have deserted a Republican convention composed of the party from all sections of the United States, and they walked out because they objected to the gold standard. I wonder how they will feel when they arrive at the gate of the Celestial City, where they will find that it is under a Republican government? (Laughter.) I wonder how they will feel when they find that, as we are told by the old apostle, the sinners are joined with gods? (Laughter and cheers.)

When Pennsylvania was called, Gov. Hastings arose, was cheered, and placed Quay in nomination.

The balloting proceeded, with several interruptions and challenges, until the last territory was reached. It was evident beyond Ohio votes that McKinley was nominated.

Vice Chairman—The chair is prepared to announce the vote upon the roll call. The following votes have been cast: For William McKinley, 661.

The announcement of the McKinley vote precipitated an outbreak of cheers and yells and the usual demonstration of such a tumult at a presidential convention, waving of hats and plumes, diversified with incoherent noises, innumerable and everything which could be gotten into motion in the hands of the howling thousands.

At 5:45, while a salute of 100 guns from a piece of artillery outside the convention was still out-thundering the yells of the crowd, Chairman Thurston, by a determined effort of Vice-Chairman Cannon's gavel, brought the convention to order and announced the remainder of the ballot as follows: Morton, 58; Allison, 35½; Reed, 84½; Quay, 61½; Cameron, 1; Brown, 1.

The nomination of Mr. Hobart was made unanimous.

Mr. Bostwick of Ohio offered a resolution, which was adopted, making the permanent chairman the chairman of the committee to notify the Hon. William McKinley of his nomination, and the temporary chairman the chairman of the committee to notify Mr. Hobart.

All the officers were thanked for faithful performance of their duties, and the work of the convention was completed.

Chairman Thurston said: I am sure that every delegate is happy to the core at the result.

The political tide flowed in the convention and out of it.

Politicians Leave the Scene.

St. Louis, June 18.—The last Republican politician of the state of Dakota, Gov. Mellette, left the city for home this afternoon. It is probable that the entire delegation will be in the convention tomorrow. It is certain that the convention will be over in a few hours, and it is generally agreed that a good ticket and platform will be nominated.

When the senator left last night, several Republicans who were sitting near the door were suddenly on the alert, and Senator Perkins of Vermont walked to the door with Mr. Hanna. He was followed by a dozen others, who were with the other party in the St. Nicholas hotel, speaking the sentiments in unison with the leaders, who are now in the Associated Press room at the hotel. Senator Perkins gave out the following in behalf himself and colleagues in opposition to any action:

I felt the opposition because I believe the financial question to be the only issue upon which we have relegated, and we I could not support or advocate a single gold standard. I thought I owed it to the convention not to longer participate in its proceedings, and I believe the sentiments of the gold standard will prevail in a further revision in prices, to the utter ruin of all producers of wealth, and that our adoption of that standard is just in the come of the present panic, enforced idleness and misery among our people. I believe the gold of the world is monopolized by professional speculators of the world.

It is for the interest of the people of the United States, who are entitled to make all produce to pay gold. It will result in forcing all the world premium money in value, and take the values of all the commodities of the producing and enterprising American people. The tariff is the only issue of importance for which the Republican party exists today, and that is no longer a issue between the parties, for a tariff for protection has become the settled policy of this government. The only question of issue between the advocates of McKinley and those at the Wilson bill is one of rates of duty, and the difference between the two tariff measures is a very slight one indeed. This is conclusively proven by the fact that the Republican party in passing a tariff measure through the House of Representatives last winter accepted the Wilson bill.

I think the time has come when it is the conservatives duty, as every man who believes we cannot permanently prosper with gold monometallism, to exercise his whole strength to prevent accentuation of that policy.

I believe the majority of the people of my State are with me on this question. If I am mistaken in that they will approve or condemn my course at the polls next November. I have felt impelled to this course by a sense of duty, by a deep conviction that the welfare of my constituents depends upon a proper result in of the question, and I could not listen to any sentiment of personal comfort or interest which might be presented to turn me from the course which I believe myself to be impelled by duty.

ALL SEEN IN ENGLAND.

Comments of the London Press on the St. Louis Convention.

London, June 18.—Nearly all of the morning papers comment upon the results of the St. Louis convention yesterday.

The Chronicle says: Yesterday's ballot shows that high tariff and sound money are to be the watchwords of the Republican party. We want sincerely congratulate the Republicans on the second of these if we did not fear our words might be used to injure them. A high tariff would undoubtedly injure our trade, but we take comfort in the thought that nothing that the United States could do would expose our commercial interests to so great a danger as would free trade in America. With regard to McKinley's personal character, no word has been heard here which is not to his honor, and we offer him our congratulations upon the position he has attained in the eyes and hearts of so many of his countrymen.

The Times: Mr. McKinley has won the first heat in the presidential race, knowing now that the battle is not finally won. The silver question appears to have found some comfort in the outcome.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: Mr. McKinley's nomination is a blow to the silver cause.

The Standard says: Mr. McKinley's victory was a triumph in struggle against the free silver craze. Not only have McKinley's golden arches of the opposing conditions so positively opposed them, but they also in some extent dominated the majorities at the last. McKinley has to go to Reed opponents on the political question under the sun that we could wherever except protection. But the silver infatuation thought he was their man, and he undoubtedly gladly would have been so if he could have jumped that way. But it did not, and to that extent that the wording of the currency resolution was softened and modified, the East may be said to be victorious. In spite of the efforts to the contrary, the Standard continues, the East suffered an eclipse. If McKinley's victory over his rivals was the victory of the commercial interests, he is not a distinguished man in any sense, nor learned nor wise, but he is a kindly popular as governor of Ohio, and he knows how to manage the machine.

In regard to the platform the Standard says: The gold wanders patriotic affirmation are praiseworthy in the extreme cries are impossible to be applied in one program. We take it that if bars and free protection wins the day next November, a deferred currency is almost certain to follow. The victory of the Republicans means an era of exclusive tariffs and jealous immigration laws. Powerful industrial monopolies will be brought back to their helpless dependence. It is a time when the United States is to be kept in a position to stand such unprecedented experiments and just when our national trade was retiring, we do not like the outlook. It is not good for the United States nor for us. As capitalists we are usually conservative, but we must bear the evil as best we can, for manifestly there is no help for it.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

A Boat Blown to Splinters and Ten Persons Killed.

LITTLE FALLS, N.Y., June 18.—At the Taylor Chain plant, one mile west of this city, where the state meet of the L. A. W. was held last place, the steam yacht Tom Sheard exploded her boiler as she was being moved this afternoon in that vicinity. Ten of the crew were killed outright, one died while on the way to the hospital, two died at the hospital and seven other is fatally and seriously injured.

The boat was blown to splinters and pieces of the boiler were thrown 300 feet. Three of the bodies have not been recovered and are believed to be in the river. Capt. Sheard is the Utica trophy sculler. The explosion is believed to have resulted from the defective working of the pump connected with the boiler.

The Movement Spreading.

DETROIT, June 18.—The Tribune, one of the oldest daily newspapers in the West and the leading Republican newspaper of Michigan slaps the back of the party, will tomorrow unequivocally repudiate today's action of the Republican convention in declaring absolutely for the gold standard as against bimetalism. The Tribune will say that while the party's candidate is all right "the platform on the only important issue before the country is absolutely unpatriotic and anti-Republican."

It will say: "No one's Republicanism can be impugned if he continues to stand squarely on the national and state platforms of last year, and if he repudiates utterly the false and unAmerican declarations of the St. Louis monstrosity."

The Tribune advises active campaigning against the "anti-bimetallism" congressional candidates.

SANGUINARY CONFLICT.

Reported to Have Taken Place Between Revlos and Venezuelans.

NEW YORK, June 18.—A dispatch to the World from Caracas, Venezuela, says: A sanguinary fight between Venezuelans and Indians is reported in a cable dispatch from the Venezuelan consul at Trinidad to have taken place in the disputed territory of Guiana. The Indians claim that the Revlos was in the Indian territory, and the Indians drove them out, and now is thought to be in arms. Officials here say if there is no more action it will have been on account of the Venezuelans at Point Barima. After Venezuela claims on the Cuyuni river, where the Indians assembled for the raids, there are the Venezuelans troops, while Point Barima is guarded by a few policemen only. The disputed south western section is inhabited by Indians and Spaniards exclusively.

There is a full money's worth in every package of Schellhase's Best tea; but the little book in the package is worth extra money to you if you do not know how to make tea exactly right.

The difference here can be made exactly right and yet made exactly right is greater than we dare to say—you wouldn't believe it.

We will send the book to you (free) if you ask for it; but you'd better have the tea too—ask grocers, sell it (money-back tea).

Schellhase's Best tea, with baking powder, spices, and the rest, is certainly good; it is the best we know how to make.
