THE METRIC SYSTEM.

A Few Words of Inquiry, That Merit Attention.

Editor Deseret News.

Having always been a firm friend of the metric system, and having heard some very strong language against it in Sunday School lessons, I concluded, after reading your editorial and Dr. Talmage's lang and lecture five orders on the subject, to ask an still more right from a religious point of view.

Some says that, "the French people in their first revolution made a attempt to abolish alike the Christian religion and the hoarbiest weights and measures of all ancient nations, in exchanging the former by a morality of philosophy and liberty, and the latter by a new system of nature." Says again that it was conceived in rebellion against the common faith and creed of the Christian world.

He further complains of the taking of a portion of the earth, a curved line, instead of its axis, a straight line in the same position with reference to all parts of the earth. I fail to see just how he could possibly measure the earth without getting it indirectly through one of the meridians. He refers to and recommends the "Bible," as revealed to Noah and his children and used by the Israelites, and which, he says, is the standard measurement of the great pyramid, as a proper standard upon which to base a decimal system. The cubit recommended by him is 20.625 of our inches long, obtained from computations made by Sir Isaac Newton and said to be based on a mathematical part of the semi-axis of the earth. The axis of the earth is ascertained by taking the means of terrestrials of computations given by the British ordnance survey.

Much more is said upon the subject by the writer mentioned and I recommend that it if possible all the relations of Mr. Ross be met fairly and if he is correct or not let us know it.

The question arises naturally enough, Was there ever a standard or measure or of weights revealed? If so what are they? If not, then we are at liberty to adopt the metric system or any other at our will.

There is no comparison between our present abominable system of weights and measures and the metric system, when we think of the time that will be saved in students and business men when it is once introduced. The thing we have to meet, though, is that every manufactory or a pair stocks, a pair of gauges, a pair of scales, a tape, chain, rod or rule will have to get a new one. Our county, maps and records will gradually have to be changed. Our public land survey will never fit evenly and nicely to the metric system, but surveyors will find least trouble of any class of citizens in making the change.

Trusting a few words from the off side of the question may not be amiss and that the News may take up the subject in the light mentioned and give us all the information that can be had, I am yours truly.
