Another Chapter Opens in the Parsons Scandal.

TESTIMONY FOR THE DEFENSE.

Unexpected Disclosure—A Conspiracy Evident—Prindle and Forker Exposed.

IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE MARSHAL TO HAVE ACTED AS CHARGED.

A Mysterious Boy—The Good and the Bad—Strong Evidence by Entire Books.

The NEWS report of the Parsons case closed yesterday afternoon with the examination in chief of Mrs. Gissy, at whose house Annie Prindle lived for a short time as "domestic prisoner."

Answering Mr. Varian, in cross-examination, the witness said her husband had been acting under the marshal at the penitentiary. She had known the marshal since 1879, but witness and her husband had lived in the city only since about January last. Her attention was first directed to this matter one day last week by some one who called at her house and told her that the marshal had been arrested. When she inquired of her husband, upon his return home at night, as to the truth of the report, he said he thought "it was all a mistake."

Afterwards witness corrected herself by saying the first time she heard of this scandal was about Tuesday to last week, when her husband was summoned before the grand jury in regard to the question of supplies at the penitentiary.

Mr. Varian—Wasn't it a startling piece of information to you, the arrest of the marshal?

Witness—No, sir, not at all.

Q—Didn't you expect it?

A—No, sir.

Q—Didn't it surprise you?

A—No, because I didn't believe it.

The witness was passed by Mr. Varian to try and remember who brought to her the information of the marshal's arrest, but she positively said she could not. It was not, however, conveyed by letter.

Q—Can you recollect whether it was a prisoner or an outsider who told you?

Witness repeated, with impatience, that she could not.

Q—Had you heard of any trouble with the marshal before the grand jury, aside from that time?

Witness said she had no reason to think so at all. When she heard the scandal had been arrested she could only suppose that, if there were any truth in it, it was with reference to the investigation of the penitentiary accounts. In conversation with her husband previously in regard to that matter he told her that he believed it would "be all right."

Witness voluntarily added that she knew of an attempt to induce the marshal once before, about the time of his appointment to office, and she thought that the same thing might have been attempted again. She was warned two days after she came to this city never to ask any questions of the prisoners, not to meddle with penitentiary affairs, or she might get some disagreeable answers.

Q—From whom?

A—From the prisoners, I suppose.

Witness was next interrogated as to the time of the marshal's arrival at and departure from her house on the day before referred to, when Mrs. Parsons, her daughter, and other members of the family were there. They had been on the lookout for Mr. Parsons, she said, up to the time he came. The others arrived earlier in the day.

Mr. Varian put a string of questions to the witness relative to general matters of conversation, when Mr. Rawlins protested, characterizing it as an effort on the part of the prosecuting attorney to entrap the witness into a statement. In order to confuse her. A passage of arms ensued which was cut short by the commissioner remarking, "Come, gentlemen, we are losing a good deal of time."

The witness, replying to other interrogatories by Mr. Varian, said she had not been instructed what to say in this affair. She was quite willing to tell all she knew.

When Mr. Gissy left the stand at the close of her cross-examination, the defendant's attorneys adjourned to a private room and held a consultation which lasted about twenty minutes. Upon their return

Mrs. Rosaytha A. Gissy, wife of Mr. S. H. Gissy, of Ogden, said she was one of the party at Mr. William Gissy's house on the occasion mentioned by the last witness. She saw a female there.

Mr. Rawlins—Who was she?

Witness—When we went out to lunch I was (this was spoken sarcastically) "introduced to her introduction" to her. She was called "Prindle."

Witness, continuing, said the door between the sitting room and kitchen was kept open all the time except when the meal was being prepared. She remembered Marshal Parsons coming to the house on the afternoon of that day. It was before dinner, he should "Hallooed" He passed out of witness' sight for an instant, after turning the horse over to the ostler, and came through to the dollar—where witness and Mrs. E. H. Parsons were in company with Mrs. W. H. Gissy, who called to him to come to them—by way of the kitchen. The door between the two rooms was open and the marshal did not remain in the kitchen a moment. It would have been utterly impossible for him to have acted improperly towards Miss Prindle without witness knowing it.

Mr. Rawlins—Of that you are sure?

Witness (with pronounced emphasis)—I am willing to swear that it was utterly impossible for Marshal Parsons to have spoken to anyone in that kitchen without my hearing him. I know he came directly through.

Mr. Varian—What makes you so ready and willing to swear that?

Witness—Because I know Mr. Parsons.

Q—Then it is because you know the man?

A—Because I know his character.

Q—How long have you known his character?

A—I have known Mr. Parsons since, I think, 1878, both in Ogden and here.

Q—And you are prepared to state what you have?

A—Yes, because I honor him and trust him.

Q—And that is the reason?

A—That is the reason.

Mr. Varian—Well, we appreciate it.

Q—I suppose you have read the report of this affair in the newspapers?

A—Yes, I have read some of it in the Salt Lake Tribune; and I am ashamed to say that I did. (Laughter.)

Cross-examination continued—The screen door between the two rooms (the kitchen and sitting room) was closed. Asked whether she saw a conversation between the marshal and anyone else, the witness replied with considerable warmth, "No, I did not; I am not in the habit of listening; I am not an eavesdropper." (Laughter.)

Mr. Varian—I did not intend to make any such insinuation.

Q—Who introduced you to Annie Prindle?

A—Mrs. Gissy.

Q—She introduced you as Mrs. Gissy?

A—Why, yes, to "Miss Prindle," and I was very much astonished.

Q—Because she was a stranger?

A—Yes, because I am not accustomed to be introduced to servants. (Laughter.)

Q—There was nothing out of the way in Mrs. Gissy introducing you to Miss Prindle?

A—No, she is very kind, too kind, in fact.

Q—That introduction was in the kitchen?

A—Yes, in the kitchen, as we were going to lunch.

Q—Is that the only situation you had with Miss Prindle?

A—(Indignantly and with a dash of sarcasm)—Yes, and I resented that introduction in my own mind very much indeed.

Mrs. Mary A. Parsons, wife of the defendant, examined by Mr. Rawlins, said that when the marshal drove up to the house on the day in question she was in the dollar with Mrs. Gissy; looking at the bottled and other fruit. Mrs. Gissy called to witness' husband to come down to them and he did so. The witness then testified in corroboration, in the main, of the statements of the previous witnesses. She swore emphatically that her husband could not have acted in any way improperly while passing through the kitchen without some of the company knowing it.

Mr. Sam Gissy, bookseller and stationer of Ogden, and brother-in-law of the defendant, was next examined by Judge Henderson. He told of his visit with his wife and two children, Mrs. E. H. Parsons and other members of the family to the Gissy house on the day in question, and of the arrival of the marshal, after lunch, in his buggy. Witness was in the front of the house when he drove up. He was immediately afterwards called into the cellar, and he saw him come up with Mrs. W. H. Gissy and Mrs. Parsons. It was a warm day and all the doors were open. He neither saw nor heard anything wrong.

To Mr. Varian—He had read the newspaper reports of this case. He was telephoned for by counsel to Salt Lake to-day, but did not know the purpose for which he was wanted until his arrival here about 1:30. He had not been asked to say anything in particular about this case by anyone.

Court then adjourned until this morning.

Amusements.

The performance last night at the Salt Lake Theatre of Gus Thomas' well known comedy drama "The Burglar" was to every respect a grand success. It had drawn a large audience and they were not disappointed in their anticipations of a pleasant evening. The play itself is entirely free from any coarseness or vulgarity, which is almost regrettable this night, suppose, it is a clever drawn picture in which the noblest and brightest features of human life are combined and contrasted with some of its darker shades, thereby producing a most pleasing effect. The leading parts, Wm. Lewis, the burglar, and Alice, his wife, were excellently interpreted by Mr. Joseph Greener and the charming actress Miss Phoebe Davies, respectively, who were repeatedly applauded. Mr. Scott Cooper was true to life in his character of John Hamilton, a retired merchant, and Mr. Livingston as a law student displayed decided humoristic ability. Little Laura Cowen was charming as Edith, and Mr. Joseph Middlemiss, Miss Della Maegnard and Mrs. Sara Stevens made the most of their minor parts, each giving evidence of careful study and correct conception of their respective characters.

"The Burglar" will be given again at the matinee tomorrow.

"PEEK CITY."

This comedy-drama is advertised for tonight by the Grimes-Davies company. The play is founded on an incident of the war, and is described as very interesting and exciting. It is sure to draw a full house.

"DRAGON LEAGUE"

will be given tomorrow night by the same company.

"THE DEVIL'S AUCTION"

comes to the Theatre for three nights and a Wednesday matinee, commencing Monday, December 14. This play has not been seen for some time and now comes out in a new dress, designed by Chas. H. Yale. Clever players are specially performers have been secured for the various parts, among whom are George H. Adams, the popular clown; W. H. Bartholomew, James Dempsey, Victoria Walters, William Rogers, head of the "Kojakiki" company, and many others. Each of the three acts into which the operetta is divided breaths with incidents that alone would make up an entertainment equal to many an entire vaudeville show.

WONDERLAND.

At Wonderland people were well entertained last night by Bill Kennedy's musical eccentricities, as well as by the other features of the performance.

For the Stockyards.

The first car load of lumber for the Union Stock yards arrived from Ogden, yesterday afternoon. It contained nearly 20,000 feet. An average of two cars daily will continue to arrive until there is sufficient on the ground to complete the buildings. Several car loads of cedar posts will arrive in a few days.

Kansas City Excursion.

The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company has issued the following excursion circular:

DENVER, COLO., Dec. 10, 1891.

To All Agents:

Beginning at Missouri River Jurisdiction, at Kansas City, Mo., December 15th and 16th, 1891, and above dates, we will sell tickets at one fare and a third, on the continuous plan, to Denver, inclusive. Conditions signed by A. A. Talmadge, Jurisdiction Commissioner, Transcontinental Association, Kansas City, Mo., on or before December 15th, will be good for return passage.

Yours truly, S. K. HOOPER,
Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Probate Court.

The following business was transacted before Judge Hatch yesterday afternoon:

Estate of Isabella Mayhew; claim of J. S. Rizko for $50. Final account approved and distribution ordered.

Estate and guardianship of Oscar Forcher, a minor; guardian directed to close estate and guardianship.

Estate and guardianship of Peter Poloski, insane; guardianship and administration of estate closed.

Estate of Frank Crocker, deceased; continued to Dec. 18.

Estate of Henry Sutgnelson; bond of Barlow Ferguson as administrator. For the sale of real estate in the sum of $500 approved.

Estate of Hannah L. Warding; appraisers appointed and notice to creditors ordered published.

Estate of William J. Stewart; Dec. 15 set to hear petition for sale of personal property.

Estate of Euclid Lee; hearing of final account of administratrix set for Dec. 24.

Estate of Martin Roesch; hearing of petition for probate of will set for Dec. 22.

To Prospect for Natural Gas.

A New organization to be known as the Salt Lake Improvement & Natural Gas Co., is being formed, it is said with a capital stock of $1,000,000. Shafts are to be sunk in and about the city wherever the indications are favorable. The first well is to be located near the Rio Grande railroad depot where a flow of natural gas was encountered some time ago in sinking an artesian well.

Prospecting has already begun on the West side and at North Salt Lake.

Street Car Collision.

Shortly before 11 o'clock last night, there was a collision at the intersection of State and third South streets, between Rapid Transit car No. 2, going south, and City railway car No. 20, going west. Both the cars tried to pass the crossing simultaneously. Naturally there was a crash. The Rapid Transit car was thrown from the track and travel was suspended for some time. Several panes of glass were broken in each car. Fortunately no one was injured. The motormen escaped by jumping.

A Christmas Gift.

Evan Stephens and his Juvenile Tabernacle choir, have placed themselves formed once more among those who remember the aged, the widows and orphans. A grand Christmas gift of from three to five hundred dollars in free tickets to the Christmas night concert in the large Tabernacle is to be placed in the hands of the Old Folks' committee, to be distributed to those over 77 years of age and to widows and orphans residing in Salt Lake county. All the seats in front of the center aisle will be reserved for them.

The promoters of a kind heart will thus complete the pleasure of the evening in bringing age and youth together, and in the satisfaction of realizing that some are remembered by poverty from sitting at the feast of music prepared to crown the day's enjoyments. Twenty dollars' worth of elegant prizes will be given to the six children who se t the most tickets for the Christmas night concert in the Tabernacle. Each of the last three contestants is working to win. Nearly five thousand people have already promised to purchase, and that number of tickets has been distributed.

Baptized his own child.

The vicar of a parish church which stands in one of the South Midland counties recently performed the interesting, though rather unusual, ceremony of baptizing his own child.

From the beginning of the service, which took place in the presence of the immediate friends of the family only, it was evident that very little was necessary to spoil the gravity of the participants; in fact, there was a smile lurking on every face. However, all passed off decently until the time came for the vicar to take his own child in his arms, and ask the godfathers and godmothers what name he should christen it. As he did so the comic aspect of the situation was forced upon every one present, when their good sense triumphed and a loud ripple of laughter, in which even the clergyman himself could not resist joining.—London Tit-Bits.

Speaking Scotch.

The race of Scotch speaking people is passing away, and not many are left to tell the story in the rich brogue of the national tongue. "And there was always a story to tell, or that one on this very subject comes to yet here. A youth, who had been educated in England, returned to his family in Scotland, and was shown off by admiring friends. "Is he not charming?" remarked one to the proud father.

"Oh, yes; but he speaks English now," she answered, in real distress.

An old lady being asked if a parson she had lately met was "Scotch" answered with much bitterness:

"I wunna say. Yeu speek sae gude yeu maun be a Scotchman yeursel."—Detroit Free Press.

Disturbing the Machines.

The making of horseshoes by machinery at first caused a strike among the blacksmiths, who refused to put on the machine made shoes; but the work was done so much more cheaply that the strikers had to give in, and the result was that manufacturers, as they got the shoes for less, had the horses shod oftener than before, and the blacksmiths did not lose much, if any, work after all.—New York Sun.

NOT ALL A DREAM

And the Unexpected Fact Was the Prompter of the Dream.

"I had the most singular dream of my life the other day," the young man said with the air of a narrator, "and it was so vivid that I felt sure it was true. It wasn't quite time to go to work again, so I sat down, knowing the other boys the cool of his signature, "and while I was sitting in the office I fell asleep at my desk. I went to sleep. I dreamed my father came in with the bill for Bob's overcoat. I've got it.

It was a fine garment. He passed his hand mechanically down its smooth surface, shook his head slowly and sadly, and went on:

"He had been in about five days at every with that same bill. The last time I paid it the dream, you know, I'm telling you straight facts now. Every Monday afternoon he used to come in regularly with that bill, and I always stood him off somehow.

"What was the amount of the bill?" inquired the pimply young man with his feet on the radiator.

"Sixty-five dollars. It's a good lot of money. There's no use in paying out sixty-five dollars to your father when you can get him to stand off. It isn't business anyhow. Well, I dreamed he had come in again with that bill. He stepped it down on the table and he says:

"'I want the money on that coat this time, young man.'

"'Can's you drop in next week?' I says. 'I'll make it all right then.'

"'No, sir,' he says. 'I want it right now.'

"Well, I had the money in my pocket and I dreamed I pounded it right out—the whole blessed sixty-five dollars—and he took it and receipted the bill and went away.

"Well, sir, the shock of the thing so unexpected, you know, woke me up. And right there on my desk, by George, was that thundering old bill, and the ink on the name signed to the 'received payment' part of it wasn't dry! I jerked out my pocketbook and opened it. There was just sixty-five dollars missing. I ran to the door and looked down the hall. There was that heavily tailor just shuffling out the sidewalk at the end of it. He's got his money all right enough, and I didn't had the coat six weeks."

"How do you account for it?" asked the young man with the waxed mustache. "Did he take it out of your pocket?"

"Now!" exclaimed the party with the creased trousers. "Take it out of my pocket! Not any! He hasn't got enough enough about him for that."

"Then how did he get it?" inquired the youth with the plug hat on the side of his head.

"How did he get it? he echoed the narrator. "I put it in my sleep, sir, he got! Paid it in my sleep! Do you think," he groaned, "I'd have done it if I had known what I was doing?"

"No," answered the boys unanimously and a deep sympathetic silence settled down on the group.

A PURE BAKING POWDER.

A baking powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by itself, processes which totally remove the carbonate of lime and other impurities. The cost of the chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is made.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all these sold in this market enables him to speak authoritatively, says of the purity, wholesomeness, and superior quality of the "Royal":

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances."

Prof. Love's tests, and the most official tests by both the United States and Canadian Governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical to use, but makes the purest, finest flavored and most wholesome food.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hord, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "I was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could not live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took its all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and I thank God I am now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at A. G. Smith & Co's Drug Store, regular size 50c. and $1.00.
