FROM FRIENDS IN NEW ZEALAND.

CLEVEDON HILL, Southland,
New Zealand, July 3, 1895.

EDITOR DESERET NEWS:

Please permit me to use a little of the space in your valuable paper. I am not of a literary turn of mind but I feel that a little good might come from drawing the attention of the Latter-day Saints to a few facts in regard to their duty to their friends and relations in the world. It seems to be a part of human nature to forget all friends and faces and to replace them by new ones; especially is this the case when people go to foreign countries to make their homes. People leave the old European countries and go to new places, such as the western part of the states, Canada and the colonies and in a few years they forget to write to the old friends left behind. As time rolls on changes are made, such as moving to other settlements, etc., addresses are lost and no effort made to recover them, and communication ceases altogether. The people of Utah are no exception to the rule, neither do I think they are given to this sort of thing more than people of other places. Still this evil—if I may term it such—is a stumbling block in the path of the Elders in preaching the Gospel. It is commonly reported that when people accept the Gospel and go to Utah they are not allowed to openly correspond with their old friends and that all letters must pass an inspection by the authorities of the Church before they are permitted to leave the country, and the negligence of the people in writing to friends and relatives gives color to these reports. The Latter-day Saints have sent hosts of missionaries to the world endeavoring to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The general way of bringing the Gospel before the people is by distributing tracts and in many instances the Elders can ill afford to purchase the necessary tracts; will they bear no humanity, facing many hardships and trials, doing without many of the necessaries of life that they may spin out their little mite and make it go all the way they can to enable them to reach the people; and when the Elder departs, how often he is met with this reproach and is informed that the people to whom the tract just offered a tract, want none of such doctrine as his, and all because some friend or relation had gone to Utah and then neglected to write.

With these facts before the people I will ask them to consider the amount of aid they could give to the work of spreading the Gospel, if they would correspondingly with their friends and would send them a good book or a few tracts now and again, or both; and send regularly the DESERET NEWS, and other Church publications. The cost of so doing would be trivial; these are papers that every Latter-day Saint should read regularly, and in order to do so they must of course be subscribers. After they have read them, send them out into the world to friends, and if you haven't any friends out in the world send them to some one that is not your friend. They will be read with interest by scores of people. This would cost about 6 cents a month for each paper and it would be infinitely better see of them than to read them and then use them to light the fires with; and the good that could thus be accomplished cannot be estimated, for there is no limit to it.

I trust that these few hints may induce someone that has more ability in this line than I to take up the cause and arouse our people to consider it for the good that could be done in this way can not be over estimated.

There is a growing interest in the Gospel in this part of the world, and I am compelled to say this our Captain of oil, "the harvest is ripe but the laborers are few."

If Brother William Searle or some of his family will send me their address I will forward it to his niece, Mrs. Young, of this city, who is very anxious to hear from her uncle or some of his family if he is not living. Brother Searle went to Utah many years ago from Gilfordsmy, England, and when last heard from was residing in the Eleventh ward, Salt Lake City. Mrs. Young, Fetiterer of Invercargill, New Zealand, is very desirous of hearing from him.

Trusting I have not trespassed too far on your space, I remain yours, etc.

JOHN G. YOUNG.

EDITOR DESERET NEWS:

The report of our last annual conference has undoubtedly been read with much interest by many readers of the NEWS. From that spirited gathering much good has resulted, and its influence has been felt throughout the entire mission. Those who through unavoidable circumstances were prohibited from attending have expressed much regret, and feel that they missed much. The instructions given at the conference have been wholly the missionaries sought the native saints. They were filled with that desire so characteristic of the spirit of God, to impart unto their brethren and sisters the good things they had received themselves. This fact was forcibly manifested in all the branches of the Church visited by President Gardner and Elder Johnson after the "Hui." They remained at Tamaki until April 15th, holding a number of meetings with the Maoris. All the Elders and visiting saints had gone to their respective fields of labor and homes, leaving the "Kainga" (village) in a serene but heavy condition.

On the morning of the above mentioned date the president and the writer boarded the train for Wellington. The rain had been pouring down for more than three days, and much that the country all around was flooded and traveling by any conveyance was rendered impracticable if not impossible. The guard told us he thought we would be unable to get through to Foxton as much of the track was under water, and perhaps some bridges badly damaged. However, we purchased our tickets and continued to try it. We had gone but a few miles when the truthfulness of the conductor's statement was verified. Floods raged in every direction, and ships along the line were imperil. One of these came thundering down just as we were driving around a curve. It gave such a terrific crash that it seemed like the train would be crushed to atoms. Tons upon tons of mud and rock came down, almost completely covering two cars and the engine. In a few more the debris was all removed and we were able to go on a few miles further to Wellington. Here we were informed that we could go no further, as the road through the Manawatu gorge was rendered utterly impassable by floods and landslides.

We were friendless and had no more money than "Mormon" Elders usually have. Our valises were no longer carry. Therefore we decided to send to Wellington via Wairoa, and we would wear out our feet for Auckland, a distance of eight miles. The wind was roaring and blowing a New Zealand "Tempest" (with mind) was blowing with more fierceness, bearing in our faces as we trudged towards the city, which we reached about noon. We met with none but discouraging reports. All advised us to turn back, declaring that we would never get through. Undaunted even in the face of the most discouraging reports, President Gardner passed on and your humble servant followed along behind to hold up his coat. You young missionaries who boast of your athletic qualities, who think you can outstrip Lee Roberts of the foot, and leather the miles, I invite you to follow Brother Gardner for one day in a heavy rainstorm, and I dare say, it will rob you of much of your conceit, as it did me when I was compelled to ask him to take it easy. He was born on "The Paths," and he can travel as though he has passed over them ever since.

When we reached the large bridge in the gorge we took the cart road instead of the railroad. After having walked two or three miles down the gorge, we were informed that the bridge near Ashurst had been carried away and that we could not possibly reach home that way. Then we were compelled to retrace our steps and start down the track. We were very cautious, for we could go through that way, but concluded to risk it. There were huge "slips" to climb, treacherous bridges to cross, and long dark tunnels to grope through. Finally we reached Ashurst, where we found Brother Ann Foster Wilson, who made us very comfortable. After getting a change of clothing and walking some less wipes we spent a pleasant evening with the good Saints. We thanked God for His mercies and retired to rest.

On the 10th we walked to Palmerston, a distance of nine miles from Ashurst, where we met Elders Nielson, Jos. Abbott, Zera and Dimond, who also had come outside of Salem. Two European meetings had been announced and we were invited to address them. Elder Johnson addressed the Saints were now running again as usual, and on Friday, the 12th, we went by rail to Wellington. Those who had neglected to write were informed on business and it was decided that Elder Johnson should proceed across the strait to the South Island, it was accompanied by Elder Bell, and a number of Maori Saints who were returning from conference. A few days later our worthy President joined us, and we commenced to make our round through the Wairoa district. We found the Saints feeling well, and all the branches except one in a spiritual condition. We met Elder Linford the President of the district at Wairoa, and Brothers Hunter and Cook at Te Hora. At the latter place we had some very spirited meetings with both native and whites, and before leaving reorganized the Maori branch. All the Saints left with the sincerest affection our esteemed President. He is indeed a father, and his timely counsel eliminates many to doubt and despondency and cause of doubt.

Our next visit was to Whangarae. That whole village belongs to the Church, and in their religious and moral conduct they are an example to their race. Thirty miles from town they are out of reach of intoxicants and their attendant evils. Beside Te Morehu, a respected old chief and church Latter-day Saint, is the President of the branch, and treated us with royal hospitality. From there we proceeded to Rangitoto Island where sixteen years ago a small native branch of the Church. We asked twelve miles in a small native boat, and it is needless to say that we were seasick, as we bounded over the ocean billows. Besides visiting with the Saints we also enjoyed sacred boating and hunting. It was grand sport to draw the huge "Hapuka" weight of from 40 to 80 pounds each, and we had land from one to three miles from shore in from 200 feet. On each expedition President Gardner was more than ordinarily successful.

Thus we spent a month on the South Island, and in every respect had an enjoyable and successful trip. We left Saints and Elders feeling well, and they have much reason to feel encouraged for the bright prospects before them.

At Pomia Elders Gardner and Johnson separated, and the latter boarded the S. S. Mazaroa and sailed for Auckland, his permanent field of labor, where he arrived on May 30, after an absence of three months. The president starts out on an extensive trip through the mission, and intends working as many branches as possible before the December conference. Elder Browning has labored alone during the absence of Elder Johnson.

The mission generally is in a prosperous condition, and good reports are received from the various districts. Our Elders are all enjoying the usual health. Of late we have been pleasing to take homes in the city of Auckland, and have been permitted to visit our loved ones, and to hear of her influential citizens. Though there are some who would seek to do us harm, "every kick has kicked us upward."

Concert by Beaver's Choir.

Secretary John Jones of the Catholic association, has received a letter from Judge Jones of Denver, asking him to try and secure the First Congregational church or some other suitable building in this city, in which the Beaver choir, 125 strong, may give a concert on the evening of October 2. He states that the expense of bringing his choir to the Kaiserdom will be so great that they have concluded to give concerts en route to help liquidate the expenses of the trip.

Secretary Jones says that their expenses will be about $5,000, and even if they should win the first prize they would only be getting $600. An effort will be made to secure a suitable building for their concert which will occur on the day preceding the great Eisteddfod.

EDITOR DESERET NEWS:

Articles like the one enclosed from the American Nation will explain why it is so difficult for the Elders to penetrate the hearts of the people; for when the press will circulate inferences all through the country and the humble Elders are to meet the slander, we find it distributing tracts and preaching to the people that they say our preaching sounds all right, but what about those terrible things we read about them in the papers?" Just it seems that now the sting of all our opposition and falsehoods we are making many converts and a good many friends in this state. In my field of labor myself and my companion has many of these things to contend with, but we have always much prejudice and warmer friends than foemen and warmest friends. Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice," and so I suppose some others will listen to us but them. Your brother,

PROVO, UTAH, - SEPT. 18, 1895.

INSANE PATIENTS.

The Question of the Manner of Their Commitment Before Judge King.

This morning County Attorney Whitlemore, of Salt Lake, appeared before the court in the mandamus proceeding against Medical Superintendent Piper, of the Territorial insane asylum, to compel him to receive Jacob Moroshy, an insane patient from Salt Lake City, which he refused to do because the commitment did not bear the seal of the probate court.

After listening to the arguments, Judge King said he would examine into the case during the noon hour. It seemed to him that it would be absurd for the Legislature to permit a person to be committed to the asylum without a record being kept of the proceedings; the Legislature doubtless had the power to do, however. He desired to read the entire act before he determined what construction should be placed upon it.

The lands are low in price, and produce profitable crops. I thank you for directing me here, and solicit those seeking pleasant and profitable homes to locate in this country."
