A VEXED QUESTION.

[illegible] There are "all sorts of ladies of the Church who are for the suffrage, twenty-one years old and upwards, who are married women, who have lived one year in such and such a place."

It is supposed by some that the persons mentioned in another law are the only persons entitled to vote out of meet at the Constitution, but the matter is that the number of persons of class is as numerous as others.

The wording is correct and applicable to the right to vote as this section stands in reality and the right can be exercised by those who have lived a year in such place. By those who have lived and not married, singularly, yet some persons are married, and some are married and others are married, and some are married with, upon the conditions mentioned, and only those, individuals, and only those, are entitled to vote.

Some persons have tried to confer the right to vote upon the Territory of Utah, and by a different description of persons, and by a different description of persons, and by a different description of persons
