STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

Lecture on Shelley Delivered by Ezra Robinson.

The program of the regular session of the Students' society held last evening, Jan. 10th, opened with an essay by Miss Rose Jenkins. This was followed by a lecture on B. B. Shelley by Ezra Robinson, a former student of the College.

He introduced his remarks by comparing poets from Tennyson, entitled "The Poet," also with a production of one of our home poets, Bishop O. F. Whitney. Those who have not had their souls stirred to its innermost depth when they have listened to the harmonious and beautiful strains of the harp or from that of the pipe organ, or if they have stood near Niagara Falls and heard the thunder of its waters, nature's wonderful organ, as the waters roar over the cataract, and have not been filled with awe and wonder, then the beauty of poetry is not well developed in them. Shelley says of poetry: "Poetry is a source of the best and purest pleasures of the happiest and best minds." Poetry redeems from decay the visitations of the Divinity in man. The reason many do not like poetry is because they do not understand it. No inferior mind can produce immortal verse. The mind must be illuminated by inspiration.

The shorter works of Shelley are almost perfect. He is pre-eminently the poet's poet. It is only those who have the poetic faculty fully developed who are able to appreciate him. Shelley is an example of his own theory, that a person cannot sit down and say he is going to write poetry, but that his nature must tell him what to write, as it were. Shelley, Byron, Burns and Tennyson were women they would not indite it. The symphony of poets will go on in spite of our introspection.

Then Miss Rade Morris gave a reading and Miss Gwendolin Lewis rendered a song, which closed the exercises for the evening, and meeting adjourned for one week.

WM. ANDERSON,
Corresponding Secretary.

Come, Mr. Lehmann!

If Henry Dancler Lehmann, last heard of in Park City, will please call on Peter Hansen, Danish Consul, 69 East First South, he will learn something to his advantage.

MRS. EMERY WINS IT.

Chief Justice Merritt Decides an Important Legal Contest.

THE QUESTION OF A TRUST.

The Court Finds Against Robert C. Chambers, the Plaintiff in the Action.

An important and anxiously awaited opinion was rendered by Chief Justice Merritt this morning. It was in the case of Robert C. Chambers, the well known mining man, vs. Clara B. Emery, executrix of the estate of A. B. Emery, deceased, that being the latest some weeks ago. The decision was a lengthy review of the case in which Mr. Chambers sought to secure certain property in which he alleged money was advanced to purchase an interest therein. The finding of the court, stated as the conclusion of the opinion, was as follows:

To reach the conclusion from the evidence in this case that the $4,000 advanced by the plaintiff to Emery in July, 1895, was advanced, not as a loan, but as a portion of the consideration of purchase money of the interest in the Mayflower mine then purchased by Emery, I would have to disregard every well established superstition of the courts in similar cases. To so hold would be to establish a precedent which would endanger the estates of all men.

It the plaintiff had the interest in the property which he asserts, his loss of it is attributable to never can only be attributed to his own carelessness and negligence. It is much better that he should sustain this loss, sorely as it may be, than that the court should lend an aye precedent so dangerous as would result from decreeing a trust herein.

I must hold, therefore, that the $4,000 advanced by the plaintiff to Emery was advanced as a loan and that he has no interest in any of the property in question. The defendant's attorney will prepare findings in accordance with this opinion and submit them to counsel on the other side before presenting them to the court for settlement.

Mrs. Emery was in court while the opinion was being delivered, and occupied a seat within the bar, beside her counsel, Attorney W. H. Dickson. She appeared highly delighted at the result, and when the Chief Justice had finished speaking a number of her personal friends and sympathizers advanced, heartily shook hands with her and expressed their congratulations.

THE LATEST ON LANNAN.

How That Respected Gentleman Once Overruled a Constitutional Amendment.

Captain Glen tells a very good story of the days when he was "back on the Comstock," a story that is too good to lay longer embalmed in silence, says the El Paso Daily Herald of the 5th inst.

The story is in the nature of a rich joke on Pat Lannan, the present traction manager of the city. John Trefren, who, "back in the old days," was a prominent citizen in Virginia City. It was "10 or '20, immediately after the adoption of the California constitution in the United States Constitution, when large testimony was more valid in all courts of justice. Pat Lannan at that time was not only a member but a constable, and in Nevada there was such a thing as constable's posse, in which rights of property were adjudicated. A case of this kind came up before Pat, and the testimony of a negro was introduced. "Thereupon" roared in minute indignity, whose upon "marked respect" was the fifteenth amendment to the constitution and prominent in the courtroom. Constable Lannan promptly ordered the negro to leave the courtroom, but in an moment he reversed himself. He was deeply involved in thought, and that great mind was in full action, screening with the mighty problem. Presently all counts cleared in their way, a look of satisfaction fairly bathed in self over that expansive countenance. Yes, he had solved the difficulty, the Colonel took was in fact not nearly in two, as "the court" calmly and serenely announced with a depth of gravity called for by so momentous an occasion, "I decide that the fourteenth amendment is unconstitutional."

Pandemonium reigned in the court room. Yet the opinion was in consternation. However, the court was not dismissed, no knew who he was about, you bet your life. He had to be the people believed, and if the new amendment to the United States constitution happened to get in his way, why, so much the worse for the amendment. The constitution of California, in Virginia City, Nevada, was not to be thus lightly trifled with.

Captain Glen tell this interesting and truthful narrative yesterday at the Parson hotel, in Hot. J. E. Walker, of Salt Lake City, who knows Pat very well and when Mr. Walker received the news about a prominent Mr. of Knight, he remarked, "Pat has told a good many stories, but 1'll warrant he never told one that one." Then Mr. Walker went into the dining room with Mr. Glen to shuffle that leg of the constitution of three pounds of toothpick and a great, big piece of potatoes.

The Dyer Estate.

Probate Judge Blair has directed that the executor's third accounting in the estate of Frank H. Dyer, deceased, be heard on January 21st. The report sets up the income receipts in the sum of $76,145.42, disbursements amounting to $57,202.47 and a balance in hand in the sum of $18,942.95.

DISHEARTENERT PLOT.

What the Denver "Sun" Says of the Receivership For the Utah Southern and Oregon Short Line.

The story comes from Salt Lake, says the Denver Sun of yesterday, that the attempt to secure a separate receivership for the Oregon Short Line and Utah Southern is really a Vanderbilt scheme to get a through line to the coast. It is well known that the Vanderbilt lines are the New York Central, the Lake Shore and the Chicago and Northwestern. This carries them from New York to Chicago, Wyo., the Wyoming extension of the Northwestern being known as the Chicago and Northwestern Wyoming.

The first step was to secure a separate receiver for the Oregon Railway and Navigation company to the person of Walter H. Hoffman, who was built in the Union Pacific. The next move was to the Oregon Short Line and Utah Southern, with the ownership of which Hoffman W. Hoffman is identified. As soon as expedient, Judge Dillard grants the application, the Vanderbilt interests will have two separate lines to the Pacific coast, as we see. The result is a gap of some 400 miles between Casper, Wyo., and Ogden, Utah, over which, if it seems to be necessary, the Vanderbilt lines will be able to run their cars through from coast to coast.

How much truth there may be in this story the Sun does not pretend to say, but it is an evident fact that all these movements to dismember the Union Pacific are backed by powerful financial influences inimical to the interests of the system. Be that as it may, it is a matter of conference whether the Union Pacific or Northwestern controls the line from Ogden to Portland, Ore., and if it is not to be made an independent one. The interest of this city in a separate receivership for the Oregon Short line has to do with the proposition to secure that it will receive business from the Rio Grande, Santa Fe-Midland and Rio Grande Western on the same terms as from the Union Pacific and Chicago and Northwestern, and without discrimination against lines running into and through Colorado.

DECEMBER'S WEATHER.

Monthly Report of the Utah Weather Service for December, 1902.

The mean temperature for the Territory was 18.8 degrees, which is about seven degrees below the normal for December. The highest monthly mean, 41.5 degrees, was recorded at Hollister, and the lowest, 9.9 degrees, was recorded at Soldier Summit. The highest temperature during the month was 64 degrees at St. George on the 22nd, and the lowest 17 degrees below zero at Kanosh on the 30th, making the monthly range of temperature for the Territory 81 degrees. The greatest local monthly range of temperature so far reported from stations having self-registering instruments was 73 degrees at Fort Duchesne, and the least, 32 degrees, at Green River. The warmest days were the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 9th, 10th, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, and the coldest the 8th, 9th, 11th, 14th, 29th, 30th and 31st.

The average precipitation for the Territory for the entire month was 1.04 inches, which is 0.47 of an inch less than the average for December, 1902. The average depth of snowfall for the month was 13.0 inches. Average number of days on which 0.01 of an inch or more of precipitation fell, 7. The greatest monthly amount of precipitation was 4.4 inches at Soldier Summit, and the least monthly amount was .3 inches, at Green River.

The average number of clear days was 13, fair, 9, and cloudy, 11. There was 87 per cent of sunshine at Salt Lake City and 69 per cent between Mercur and Grayey (formerly Bingham.) The prevailing wind was north. Total movement at Salt Lake City was 4,102 miles, and the highest velocity 41 miles per hour from the south on the 20th. Average hourly velocity 5.8 miles per hour.
