Details of the Armenian Massacre, Horrible Beyond Expression.

TURKS, NOT KURDS, RESPONSIBLE.

The Women and Children Cruelly Robbed in Every Respect—Not the Soldiers and Not the Brigands.

LONDON, March 29.—The Times publishes a long report on the Armenian massacre written by a resident and trustworthy man who spent the winter in investigation on the spot. The report was written in January. The writer says he is convinced that Zeki in 1893 and 1894 the Turkish government gave Sasun and Moush Gilieu permission to set Kurds and Circassians to attack the Armenians, plundering them the body, and rendering them of responsibility for the consequences.

In the time minute made upon Sasun the Armenians defended the Kurds, considerably but for Turkish help the Kurds would have been unable to have gained a permanent victory. The Kurds in the earlier attributions did not take women and children. Even then bullied by the Turks they did this in secret and with very little bitter.

The account proceeds to describe the attacks, and the report of the government sending the Kurds to occupy some deserted villages, sparing neither age nor sex, women and children. The Circassians massacred hundreds of Armenians, and the Gendarmes participated. The Circassians massacred the inhabitants of Ahlatsi, and subjected to Turkish ways and insult, which will necessarily lead to the conclusion that the Armenians were the aggressors. Nothing was further from the truth.

A commission who has recently made a special investigation of the Armenian matter, and of importance in the execution of a firman, "Sasun Killed many women and children in Sasun." The correspondent took the back opposition before respectable Armenian witnesses, and then the question he telegraphed the following interesting extract:

"The Turkish soldiers took the little children of the best and slashed them open alive. I saw an Armenian pregnant woman by squeezing her neck, gouging out the eyes and tearing off to the skin pieces. We take that as my fish or fragment or cut off neck. We dislike another point. I saw a Turkish soldier that an old Armenian had dismembered in two at the thighs and nearly cut him through with an axe. Armenians were against protection, and surrendered with increased as night. The Armenians were massacred in their hands and they were then bayonetted and flung into the pit. None of those who died were those who were in the pit. I saw an officer take a woman, cut off her head and stamping into it with his foot as her infant child. Saw one car upon and the money pulls the wounded who has gunned upon."

The correspondent telegraphed the number two revolting work, on the participants from as being his fellow countrymen.

Gladstone, the Kurd said: "The Armenians people with rifles and reports but the Turks conquered in little. They gave me to fight with women, saying there are slaughtering men in the work. Others were saved, others had their tongues cut out, others had their noses and ears cut off. I saw men cut in two. I saw men cut in two. I saw men cut in two
