Gray's Laxative Pillets cure Constipation.

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, Avon Under 10, is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the theory use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and their trade is a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He tell all those to whom them, and called attention ready to compare to his cost, but none of the remedy for use in his own family at a time when his trade thinks he was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and because the theory was for the cause of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best and the cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by Druggists.

"Prepare for the worst, but hope for the best," says the old proverb. Hope for health, but be prepared for colds, coughs, croup, bronchitis, pneumonia, or any other threat or lung difficulty by having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always on hand. It is prompt to act, sure to cure.

VIEWS ON THE ARCTIC.

Testimony of a Correspondent Who Has Been There.

Where Nansen Was Wrong—No Hope for Anyone Except the Man Who'll Find the Pole.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 31, 1897.

To the Editor:

In Frank G. Carpenter's chat with General A. W. Greely, as published in you, he never speaks about any good weather. I know that general must have had a hard time of it, for when I saw him and six of his party after they had been picked up from the Arctic shores, I did not think they would live one day, they looked like they were too far gone.

I was out in that country eight and a half years and just as General Greely says, woolen clothing is the best and with a good fur coat and plenty to eat you can get along. You can shoot all the summer and get a good supply in for the winter. We shot 364 ducks and gathered 1,400 eggs on an island near Cape York, and for deer you can take your gun any time in the summer and shoot five or six. As for salmon, we put our net in the water and in 15 minutes we could not pull it in, but had to send to our ship for help. We got 1,200 salmon. And there were as many more that passed out. There are all kinds of game in that country. I sailed with one of the best whaling captains that ever had command of a ship, the polar regions, Captain William Adams, of the steamer Arctic, with over thirty-four years of experience. I have been just as far north as Nansen took. In fact we got just about to the top of Smith sound. That was the time when the North Pole could have been found—we could have gone right up the sound, but our coal was getting short and we were loaded too heavy. We had fifteen whales on board, twenty-seven bears, 400 narwhales, sixty-five seals, 500 white whales. I have had just as bad weather out in Davis straits as I ever had in Utah—you will find good and bad everywhere.

I have been seventeen and a half years in Utah, and never a better time in my life than when out in the Arctic regions. My first voyage was in 1873, then I stayed at home four years and went back again with a Captain Walker of the steamer Erik of London. He had over forty years' experience in the Arctic regions.

You were speaking about Nansen—he is a good man. I was in company with him out in Greenland in 1881. He was in the Norwegian whaling and fishing but he did not go in the right way. After you get half way up Smith sound, always set that you get on the land flow, and if you can't get that, take the land for it, just as General Greely says, you may think you are going north and all the time you are going south.

As for Andree, the next time you hear from him will be when our noble Lieutenant Peary finds his remains. That is the man who is going to the Pole. He is taking the right road and the right way. Four years more and four Eskimos—that is plenty. I will give him two and a half years when he will be lucky to his native land and be able to tell you all about it. I think if Lieutenant Peary were going to start about the 15th of June he would get right up to Smith sound and make better time.

I have found some very fine gold on that country—it will be just as good a camp as Klondike. I know where we found coal and there is a gold field about two and a half miles from there. I did not know much about the country when I was out in that country, but by the time next year I will know what it is like for I am going out with Lieutenant Peary.

I remain yours truly,

JOHN B. WRIGHTSON.

TO SLAUGHTER GAME.

A Gang of Poachers Who Intend Running Rampant the Coming Winter.

Col. Young, superintendent of the Yellowstone National Park, has come into possession of information that will probably be the means of preventing a wholesale slaughter of our noble game.

The plot was entered into by a number of poachers who live along the borders of the park in Montana and Wyoming. The elk and deer of the park generally journey south during the winter into the timber-covered strip south of the park known as the Teton timber reserve. It was the plan of the poachers to make a raid on the game while in the reserve and slaughter it by the wholesale. In Recorder, Col. Young employed a detective who worked among the settlers and learned enough of the details of the plan to convince the authorities that poaching on a large scale was contemplated. To frustrate their plans, Col. Young will employ a number of scouts, who will register any suspicious characters who may be found within the boundaries of the park. It is believed by park authorities and the secretary of the interior will make an effort to have the next Congress extend the boundaries of the park so as to include the Teton reserve in order that the park game may be protected and preserved.—Evanston, Wyo., News-Register.

AMUSEMENTS.

All roads led to the New Grand last night, where the New Dazzler commenced a week's run. Which way you turn the same shock of a plot, the diversions are all entirely new and were received with unstinted bursts of approval from the large audience in attendance. A particularly pleasant feature of the entertainment is the good acting and the pretty chorus girls, who are beautifully dressed and captivating. As to the incidents given in the funny items, the good natured Dutchman, the mobile and pretty saint dances, and in fact everything that made it attractive before, and it is all there, now up to date. Ida Rogers—The Dazzler—has a decidedly winning way and her cuteness or "mamma's little girl" caught on immensely with the crowd. Will West, as the tramp, is the show and the little fellow makes the season. Homer the German is a good comedian and particularly a favorite with the Swan. Willie The Dazzler kids fair to play to the majority of the house during the balance of the week, in fact the advance sale already assures it. The regular Saturday matinee will be given.

The box office opened this morning for the sale of seats for the In Old New York engagement at the Theater, which begins Thursday evening Nov. 11th. This combination of farce and burlesque has met the approval of theatergoers wherever presented, delighting the New York Casino stockholders last season. A matinee will be given Saturday afternoon.
