THE MANY IMPROVEMENTS MADE.

Banquet to Newspapermen by Superintendent Washburne. — General Railway and Beach Observations.

The formal opening of Garfield Beach for the season of 1892 took place yesterday under the most auspicious circumstances. Notwithstanding that spring seems loth to relax its grasp in favor of summer, the indications are that the management will do a most satisfactory business. On arriving at Garfield the transformation that has been wrought in the shape of additions and improvements is at once noticeable. The buildings have been thoroughly renovated and repainted with colors that have produced the most satisfactory results. An electric light plant has been put in, the super pavilion extended and a large number of new and commodious bath rooms erected.

The electric light plant is located some distance to the southeast of the general platform and consists of two 25 horse-power boilers which were made at the Union Pacific shops in this city, a 45 horse-power standard Washburne engine, two electric dynamos, one an arc with a capacity of twenty lights, and the other an incandescent with a capacity of 250 lights. Both machines are of the Thompson-Houston manufacture. There are also two Blake-Knowles pumps, of seventy five gallons per minute capacity each. The machinery was all placed in position and the wire connections made under the supervision of Arthur A. Moulton, a young but very accomplished electrician who came from a month in Omaha Temple street, where the work and have the plant in good operating order on Decoration day. He succeeded admirably. The test was made in the presence of General Superintendent Bancroft, General Passenger Agent Bailey, Chief Clerk Spencer, Superintendent Joseph Young, Superintendent Washburne, of the Union Pacific hotel department, and representatives of the local press. Twenty arc and one hundred and twenty incandescent lights now illumine the buildings and surroundings at the points most necessary, and the effect is very fine. Four large arc lamps set on iron arm extend from either corner of the pavilion and with several similar ones and the hundred or more incandescent lights set on the stone in the latticed sub of the bathrooms illuminate the water until it is almost as light as at noonday. All of the six hundred and thirty-four bathrooms are so lighted that the occupant can undress and dress without the slightest difficulty.

Yesterday two trains were run to and from the beach and the most of them were well filled. The water was 69 degrees Fahrenheit and many persons indulged in the pleasure of a bath. At 2 p. m. Superintendent Washburne gave his annual dinner at the beach to Salt Lake newspaper men. It was a repetition of his former successes in that direction, which means that it was an elegant affair, splendidly planned and artistically carried out. The dining room at Garfield has, under the efficient supervision of Mr. Washburne, been made first-class in every respect. Besides being a successful hotel man Mr. Washburne is a pleasant gentleman and an entertaining story-teller. He leaves for Omaha tonight.

BEACH AND RAILWAY NOTES.

It is rumored that Superintendent Bancroft, who moved his office to Ogden a little more than a year ago, has total control of the Junction city, and will return to Salt Lake shortly.

D. S. Taggart, traveling passenger agent of the Union Pacific, with characteristic enthusiasm, sought to make everything as pleasant as possible for the beach visitors yesterday.

The Salt Lake Boating Club are renovating and repainting the steamer "Garfield" and will make it their headquarters the coming summer. Captain Harratt is supervising the work and will soon have everything in shipshape.

Captain Morris says it will be twenty-two years next month since he first landed on the shores of the Salt Lake. Annually since that time he has had charge of some bathing resort or other and he has almost become a landmark at Garfield.

Captain D. L. Davis of this city, who takes to water almost as naturally as a duck, was out on Garfield yesterday getting his boat in order for a contemplated cruise.

General Passenger Agent Bailey was in a particularly merry mood yesterday morning, and as the temperature rose with the sun and clouds of Decoration Day and accordionists floated on the lake, his natural flow of good nature was made manifest in so many ways that it produced a genuine sensation to associate with him.

A temporary sensation was caused at the Beach on Sunday night by a substance and self-important cowboy dashing into the barroom on horseback and in shouting tones demanding a glass of beer, which the startled bartender quickly handed him. Drinking it to the health of his pony, he turned and with a Tuscarora whoop, dashed through a side door near the opening where he entered and was off.

EASTERN EDITORS

Spend Yesterday in Salt Lake En Route Home From the Coast.

Yesterday morning four outlands of editorial conscientiousness arrived in this city over the Rio Grande Western en route to their homes in the Eastern States from the recent session of the National Editorial Association held at San Francisco.

During the day they visited Fort Douglas, the Tabernacle, Temple lawn, Garfield Beach, the Warm and Hot Springs and other points of interest in Utah. All were greatly pleased with our fair city and as expressed themselves frequently and voluntarily they left for their homes at 9 o'clock last night.

DECORATION DAY.

It Was Observed in Salt Lake With Appropriate Ceremonies. — The Sunday School Parade.

Yesterday, being Decoration day, was observed as a general holiday throughout the city, and the weather was all that could be desired by those on pleasure bent. At 9 o'clock a. m. the members of the James B. McKean and George Maxwell Post, G. A. R., met at headquarters, and an hour later the veterans, numbering 250 strong, and marshaled by H. Hayes of Murray, marched in procession up Main street, and along other prominent thoroughfares. Upon the return to headquarters pleasing exercises were held, Judge J. M. Bowman and Miss Minnie were the chief speakers. Mrs. Kinney recited an original poem. The singing was funeral and appropriate, "Cover Them Over" was rendered by the quartette, Mesdames Kenworthy and W. L. Pickard, Jr., and Messrs. R. J. Thomas and C. S. Duell. The audience then sang "America," and the proceedings closed with the benediction, pronounced by Chaplain Sells.

At the city cemetery there were no public exercises, as was the case last year, but there and also at Mount Olivet crowds of people and old ladies during the day to lay wreaths and bouquets of flowers on the graves of their loved ones. The graves of the soldiers at Fort Douglas were decorated with quiet ceremony, and a large number of persons were present.

The parade of the union Sunday school was a prominent feature of the day, fully 1400 children mustering in line. The starting point was from the First Presbyterian church, the children of that flourishing school taking the lead, followed by the scholars of the Central Christian church. These together marched north to First South street, where they were joined by the children of the Congregational school. Thence the parade was to State street, where the column was joined by the Methodist Sunday school, marched west to Main street and then north on Main street to Ninth Temple street, where the schools of the Baptist and all other schools on the west side of the city joined. The column then counter-marched on Main street and marched as far south as Second South, where it halted and separated, making a row on each side of the street and along the Z. C. M. I. column to march between them. As the column marched through, the children presented the flags which they carried, and this was an exceedingly pretty sight.

The youngsters afterwards marched down Main street to Fourth South, where cars were taken by most of the boys and girls for Liberty Park, the remainder footing it by way of Fourth South and Fifth East.

From 8000 to 4000 persons had congregated in the park, where the children arrived about 11.30. After an overture by the Deseret band, and singing by a chorus of upwards of 200 voices, the Rev. Dana Bartlett delivered an appropriate opening address, in the course of which he warmly welcomed the assemblage to the first annual May Festival of the Sunday Schools.

The Rev. J. B. Thrall offered prayer and after further singing Mr. Ward gave a brief address. More singing by the chorus and music by the band followed, and then the lunch took place. The afternoon was devoted to amusements of various kinds, the maypole dance being quite a feature. It was late in the evening before all had dispersed, having spent a jolly day.

Returned From Mexico.

(Correspondence of the DESERET NEWS.)

Before leaving the borders of Old Mexico I have a little more to say regarding my remarks in this wonderful country, which has sorely troubled those historians who have devoted much time, talent and money to develop it.

Cleopatra's Needle has run the thread of Egypt's story, and her hieroglyphics have painted the picture thereof on papyrus parchment and graven image back to the time of the Pharaohs, and from underneath her pyramids some older tale is unfolded with the mumbly clothes of resurrected kings and queens, who lived before Moses was "rocked in the cradle of the deep" waters of the Nile. Deeds of valor and war's alarms, songs of peace and plenty are written on them, but the name of the heroes and heroines have been long ago forgotten in the ages before Pharaoh's and Cleopatra's were sung in Egyptian phrase; the record reaches to the Tolteca and is lost. The confusion of tongues, the disintegration of empires may have said the footsteps of the Toltecs and the Aztecs in Mexico, and this is just what it did do. (Read their history in the Book of Mormon.) Or they may have lived there before. We may call Montezuma Egypt's younger sister or say she's the older, or that they are twin-life, for if there is a Cheops Cave, there's a Chalula here, with many a hieroglyphic graven scene and mostly to prove it.

While conversing with some of the most brilliant men on the subject of the many ancient relics, ruins cities, interesting ruins, and, found in south Central Mexico, and also here in Old Mexico or America, invariably I found in such, although many speculations are offered, it is said, most relics in the Montezuma Cave, Cholula, Mexico, are pleasant, entertaining gentlemen, and are lacking superior duties of what they are and how.

Mrs. Whitlaker and a party of young ladies from Massachusetts visited the Navajo country yesterday. They are members of the National Editorial Association. Mrs. Whitlaker is prominent in woman's movements in the East, and her opinions in reunion to the countries of Mexico and Utah shows that she is making good use of her time here.

The following were the members of the editorial excursion party which spent yesterday in our city: Geo. C. Barnes and J. A. Ewing, Monmouth, Ills.; H. Hemphill and wife and Miss Murdock, of Charleston, Ill.; John F. Farrell, Albany, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Ryan, Brooklyn, N. Y.; John W. Jones, Henry Livingston, Babylon, Long Island, N. Y.; W.
