Shocking and Most Determined Suicide of a California Man.

BAPTIST MINISTER'S SUNCO GAME.

Killed by a Switch Engine.—Gathering Wolf and Coyote Scalps in Wyoming.—A Daring Burglar.

One of the most interesting measures introduced during the present session of the Idaho legislature is the supplemental bill presented in the senate by Hon. B. F. Morris, of Idaho county.

As Pat Canell was crossing the tracks in the railroad yard at Rawlins, Wyoming, a day or two ago, he was run over and cut in two by a switch engine. There were two engines coming towards him, one from either direction. While he was watching one of them the other ran over him. He leaves a wife and four children in destitute circumstances.

Colonel Mike Gray headed an expedition in 1872 to hunt for the San Juan gold diggings. He left Pueblo with a party well equipped for the journey. They traveled to within 50 miles of the placers, when they were obliged to turn back, owing to a scarcity of provisions and the hostility of Indians. He spent $10,000 in trying to find the diggings, some where the guide was taking him to, but which have remained undiscovered until the present winter.—Tombstone (Arizona) Prospector.

Otto Sahm, one of the best known railroad men in the northern part of the state, and a conductor on the Greeley, Salt Lake and Pacific, has met with an accident at Windsor, a few miles above Greeley, Colo., which resulted in the loss of an arm. While doing yard work he fell from a car in such a position that his left arm was horribly mangled, necessitating amputation. He will probably recover, though the shock was a terrible one.

A private letter from Prof. Charles of New York, who has been spending several weeks at the Volcano house in Hawaii, give some interesting details about the activity of the great volcano, Mauna Loa. The crater is fast filling with lava and Columbia's year will be marked by one of the greatest eruptions on record. Every night the whole dome of the mountain is illuminated by the fires from the lava, as I say a great electric light. The last great eruption was five years ago.

If there should be any talk in the next legislature of removing the prison from Yuma, save the Yuma Sun, it will be just as well to remember that should the institution be moved all the land and improvements would become the property of the town of Yuma. Such were the conditions upon which the land was originally given to the Territory. To erect new buildings would cost at least $50,000, and perhaps more. No legislature would probably have the hardihood to saddle such a debt on the people.

Fifteen cases of mountain trout fry were received in Santa Fe, New Mexico, by the gun club of that town last week from the United States fish commissioner. These young trout will be distributed in Santa Fe county, and are the first consignment of 100,000 ordered. Another carge will be received in February, which will be used to stock the Rio Nambe. There are three branches of the splendid trout stream in northern Santa Fe county and they represent over 100 miles of water flowing through the most picturesque region imaginable. There are now no fish at all in the Nambe stream, they having been killed years ago by the dangling sawdust into the stream and by forest fires.

The employes of the rolling mill at Laramie, Wyoming, have all been served with notices informing them that they were discharged and that they would be paid in full on Wednesday of this week. The mill is now shut down, but when it resumes operations a few weeks hence a new scale of wages will take effect for all human men. The reduction, it is stated, will affect only twelve men, but it will be a heavy reduction on some of them. It is rumored that some of the men will not be taken back, but so far is known all of the old men who apply for work when the mill starts up will be employed. The new scale will be the Amalgamated association scale.—Boomerang.

Eastern and California fruit growers are awakening to the fact that Colorado is becoming a power in the fruit raising line, says Field and Farm, and that her possibilities in this respect may be considered unlimited. Even her northern counties adjoining bleak Wyoming produce magnificent fruit. The portion of the state best suited probably to the raising of fruit is that lying along the Arkansas river, especially that portion of the plains region which is watered by that stream. The length of the valley is 300 miles. It contains a greater acreage in arable lands than any other valley of the state. The valley, as now developed and in process of development, warrants the horticulturist in planting any kinds of small fruits and [illegible] tree fruits that are grown in a temperate climate.

J. Ira Chapman Leader: The Rev. John Marshall, a colored Baptist minister, is in town praying a dance house. He has a long list of signatures to a fund he is collecting, ostensibly for the building of a baptist church in Denver for the colored people. He obtained $1 from Chief Farley, and was about to work Captain Phillips for a similar contribution when Bruce, the colored bailiff of the police court, interposed and caused Marshall. The remnant beat the colored preacher to Boulder out of a church and then removed to Cheyenne, where he worked the same game. Marshall is a sanctimonious looking old gentleman, wearing spectacles, silk hat and carries an umbrella. He is smart at raking and easily wheedles dollars out of his victims. He was fired out.

A large number of wolf and coyote scalps are being brought in to County Clerk Maynard says the Laramie Boomerang, for the purpose of getting the bounty on them. The clerk punches a hole in the ear of the pelts and the owner receives an order on the treasury for his bounty. On grey Sundays in county is $3 and on coyotes seven-fifty cents. Mr. Van Orlwick, from near Lincoln peak, was in yesterday with the pelts of nineteen coyotes and a gray wolf. He received the bounty of $17.25 and then disposed of the pelts. Low Van Houten was in a few days ago with about fifty pelts of gray wolves and coyotes for which he received a bounty of about $60. George Newell was in today with the pelts of five coyotes and one gray wolf. These animals are smart principally in price, although it is difficult to entice a gray wolf into such a listening.

Young Frank Roberts, is on trial for his life at Santa Fe, N. M. On the night of November 6, 1891, Miss Lucile, a daughter of the late Lieutenant Governor Ellis, and a beautiful girl, accompanied by her young cousin, Miss Nellie Ellis, left their home on the slope of the Lorenzo awaiting the arrival of the northbound Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe train, which was to convey the young ladies to Denver to finish their education at one of the female colleges there. A Winchester rifle crashed through a window of the waiting room and Miss Jaramillo fell dead. Among her effects were found letters from young Frank Roberts. It was commonly understood that he was desperately in love with her and had repeatedly sought her hand in marriage, but that she had given him no encouragement, in fact, had formally declined to accept large presents from him. He was arrested and has since been in jail. He claims to be able to prove an alibi. Many new letters written by the deceased to the deceased will be introduced during the trial.

At noon the other day a daring assassin entered the home of Guy P. Taylor, a lawyer of San Bernardino, California, and secreted himself in a bedroom. Mrs. Taylor, who was in the back yard at the time, hearing the noise, came in, and approaching the bedroom saw the man trying to hide under the bed. When discovered the man said: "I want to see you." Mrs. Taylor replied by ordering him out of the room, and when he did so she ran into another room and seized a shotgun and returned again. The man started toward her, when Mrs. Taylor fired, wounding him in the neck. Mrs. Taylor then closed the door of the bedroom and locked it, when the man called loudly to be released. Failing in this he raised the window and jumped out into the yard. Mrs. Taylor then followed him to the house on the back porch and shot him again, and she says that she thinks she hit him a second time, as he immediately threw his hand up to his back. The man was not a tramp, as he was well dressed. Mr. Taylor was away from home, but upon his return the matter was reported to the police.

Albert Sherwood, a man 50 years old, has committed suicide in a terrible manner at the home of a friend in Oakland, California. He has been employed as a waiter in a Broadway saloon and was a well-known character about town (says the San Francisco Chronicle). Vivian J. Lesser failed for $50,000 the other day Sherwood was thrown out of employment. He was then living with his wife and child in a Ninth street lodging house. The young man became very despondent and commenced to drink heavily. In a few days he was all shaken up from intense trouble and was in a bad condition. His young wife cared him and brought him out all right. Then he became possessed of the idea that some of his enemies were trying to poisoned him. This was the constant fear, and so earnest was he in his remarks on the subject that his wife became convinced that perhaps there was something in his statements. The suicide then secured rooms at the home of Robert Fleming, 472 Twentieth street, and has been staying at that place since last Wednesday. Sherwood showed a disposition to cut his throat, so his wife hid all the knives in the house and he was watched day and night. On Saturday he left the room and went into the kitchen. He was followed by his wife and Mrs. Fleming. Before they could reach him he grabbed a huge carving knife and was just in the act of drawing the keen blade across his throat when his wife rushed forward and stayed his hand. Sherwood struck fight. He made another effort to cut his throat, but his wife was too quick for him. She grabbed the keen blade with both her hands and in an instant the blood was gushing from several deep cuts. Sherwood gave the knife a wrench and then ran out through the woman's hands, cutting them in a fearful manner. By this time Mrs. Fleming had taken part in the deadly struggle for life. The two women after a desperate effort secured possession of the knife and threw it over the fence into the next yard. Sherwood seemed to have lost his mind entirely by this time, and suddenly he picked up a huge fork and jabbed the prongs three inches into his throat. The two women struggled with him again and gained possession of the fork. Sherwood rushed out of the room and into the basement. With one blow of his fist he shattered a window pane and secured a piece of glass. His terrified wife was just entering the basement when she saw her husband draw the glass across his throat. The blood spurted out, and as she rushed forward he fell dead at her feet. He had severed the jugular vein and also the windpipe. Mrs. Sherwood stood like a statue for a moment gazing at the horrible sight before her. It dawned upon her that her husband was dead, and then she broke down. The coroner was notified and removed the body to the morgue.

Lieutenant Charles A. L. Totten, U. S. A., maintains that his calculations are being minutely fulfilled, and states that during the years 1895-6, reckoning from the September equinox, the comet now gathering speed at sides will culminate. "This year is the central one of the period during which the Deluge times close," he says. With respect to the Deluge, he says: "Reading Genesis, Lenormant and Totten comprise the data that go to state so rightness. He warning, 'Enter into the ports and close thy gates about thee until the indignation is past.'"

Tomatoes and Canners.

Tomatoes are in season and therewith has come again the cry that it was a hot summer, that the eating of tomatoes causes cancer. Canner was at sunrise in Britain long before tomatoes became cheap and popular as it is now, but such a fact will make no impression on those who choose to use some connection between the two, and who will perhaps kill no end year that indulges Indian consumption and green peas had no religion.—London Hospital.
