FRAGMENTS.

The London Tabernacle Company's establishment on West Second South street has been closed under a chattel mortgage.

The reception at the residence of Prof. and Mrs. Kenner, on Sixth East street, last evening, was a most enjoyable affair.

Last evening the first telephone message came into use from Salt Lake to Ogden and Kaysville, via the Ontario drain tunnel, was received in this city.

The little girl Smith, who was so badly burned a day or two ago, while playing with a fire with coal oil in the store of the shoe shop on West Third South street, died last evening at 7 o'clock.

The regular monthly meeting of the Twenty-third Quorum of Seventies will be held in the Seventh Ward assembly hall at 7:30 this evening. A full and punctual attendance is desired.

The death of Dr. Eugene S. Gullmette occurred yesterday, the same being due to the shock occasioned by a cutting operation performed on Monday morning. The deceased came to Salt Lake City in December, 1890, and had a small practice here. He was of French descent, age, and was born in New York in the year 1860.

WILLIAM ASSMUSSEN, the father of the lad who was drowned in the Provo River on May 29th, has sued the Salt Lake Railroad Company to recover $10,000 damages. The ground of action is that the company was constructing a bridge across the river, and that the new bridge erected by defendant was without a fender, and that on account of this neglect the son was drowned.

Articles of incorporation of the Herkimer Mining Company have been filed with the county clerk. The life of the company is fifty years unless sooner dissolved. The capital stock is $1,000,000 in 1,000,000 shares of $1 each. The incorporators are J. C. Taylor, 1,200 shares; Henry Churchill, Salt Lake, New York, 81,200 shares, Charles F. Sutton, 12,000 shares; T. R. Beatty, 400 shares; L. H. Farnsworth, 400 shares; W. P. Noble, 400 shares; J. C. King, 400 shares, all of Salt Lake City. Henry Churchill is president; W. P. Noble, vice president; L. H. Farnsworth, treasurer, and J. C. Taylor, secretary, who together with Chas. Sutton, T. R. Beatty and J. C. King form the board of directors.

Temple Notice.

The Manti Temple will close on Friday evening, July 22d, and open again on Monday August 29th, 1892.

ANTHON H. LUND.

AVENGING AN INSULT.

Attorney General Brewster's Effective Rebuke of an Impudent Lawyer.

"Ten or twelve years ago I witnessed the most dramatic situation of my life in a Philadelphia court room," said Henry J. Erdkin, of the Quaker City. "It occurred during the trial of an important suit involving certain franchise rights of the Pennsylvania railroad in Philadelphia. Benjamin Brewster, afterward attorney general of the United States, was then the chief counsel of the Pennsylvania company. Brewster, you know, was a frightfully ugly man on account of a terrible disfigurement of his face from burns, but intellectually he was a giant and in deportment a Chesterfield.

"So great was the admiration for the man's powerful mental parts that one soon forgot his ugliness. He was extremely sensitive of his facial misfortune, but never referred to it himself, nor did any of the hundreds of friends ever ask him the cause.

"The trial to which I refer was a bitterly contested affair, and Brewster at every point got so much the best of the opposing counsel that by the time argument commenced he leading adversary was in a white heat. In discussing the railroad company this lawyer, with his voice trembling with anger, exclaimed: 'This gangling corporation is no dark, deform and crippled in its methods as is the face of its chief attorney and handsome, Benjamin Brewster!'

"The violent sallow of rage and cruel invective was followed by a breathless stillness in the crowded courtroom that was painful. Hundreds of prying eyes were riveted on the poor, scarred face of Brewster, expecting to see him spring from his chair and crush the lower and adversary by the throat. Never before had any one referred to Mr. Brewster's misfortune in such a way, or even in any terms to his presence. Instead of springing at the man and killing him like a dog, as the angry spectator thought was his desert, Mr. Brewster slowly arose and spoke something like this to the court:

"'Your honor, in all my career as a lawyer I have never doubt in personalities, nor did I ever before feel called upon to explain the cause of any physical misfortune. I will do so now. When a boy—and my mother, God bless her, said I was a pretty boy—when a little boy, while playing around an open fire one day with a little sister just beginning to toddle, she fell into the burning flames. I rushed to her rescue, pulled her out before she was seriously hurt and fell into the fire myself. When they took me out of the coals my face was as black as this man's heart.'

"The last sentence was spoken in a voice whose rage was that of a lion. It had an electrical effect, and the applause that greeted it was superb, but in an instant turned to the most contemptuous hisses directed at the lawyer that had so cruelly wronged the great and lovable Brewster. 'That lawyer's practice in Philadelphia ceased from that day, such indignation was felt by half the bar of the city for a new foe.'—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Cardine It is from now that "Sitting upon the spine is one of the most common causes of the lady and gentleman of most discomfort and disease than any other one cause."

THE SUPREME COURT.

The Attorney General and the Escheated Church Property.

ROST CAPTURED AT HELENA, MONT.

Paragraphs of General Interest Picked Up in and Around the Halls of Justice.

Chief Justice Zane and Associate Justices Blackburn and Anderson occupied seats on the bench in the Territorial Supreme Court this morning. Judge Miner is absent in the East, and consequently several opinions already prepared will not be handed down until the court meets again in August.

THE ESCHEATED CHURCH PROPERTY.

In the matter of the United States of America vs. the late corporation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Dueing Attorney Varian presented the following type-written document:

Now comes the U. S. of America and, by its Attorney General and District Attorney for the district of Utah, gives the court here to understand that all of the real estate heretofore surrendered to the Receiver appointed by this court, and particularly described in the certificates of the clerk of the Third Judicial District court for the Territory of Utah, herewith annexed and made a part hereof, was, on or about the 5th day of December, A. D. 1889, by the final judgment of said district court, adjudged to be escheated to the said United States of America, that said judgments are now in full force and unreversed, suspended by the certificates of the clerk of said court herewith annexed.

Now, therefore, the said United States moves the court for an order directing the receiver herein to deliver the possession of said real estate and the whole thereof into the custody of the marshal of the United States, to be disposed of as by law provided.

W. H. MILLER,
Attorney-General.
CHAS. S. VARIAN,
District Attorney for Utah.

Clerk McMillan's certificates embraced the following:

Part of lots 3, 4, 5 and 6, block 86, plat A. (Tithing yard.)

Church farm east of city.

Lots 3 and 4 in section 29; lots 1 and 4 in section 20; also part of S. E. quarter of section 29, and lot 6, block 75, plat A (Temple block).

The court made an order in compliance with the request contained in the letter of the attorney-general.

ADMITTED TO PRACTICE.

On motion of Judge Judd, Mr. Hiram A. Smith, of the Supreme court of Michigan, was admitted to practice at the bar of this court.

ADJOURNED.

This morning's business occupied but than half an hour, and the court adjourned until August 3d, at ten a. m.

GENERAL COURT NOTES.

When will that elevator in the new court premises in complete running order? Sometimes it goes, sometimes it doesn't, and sometimes when the passengers get about half way up there they have to wait, because of a hitch in the machinery, until the man in charge can adjust things properly. It will be a convenience, too, when the electric call bell is fixed. A shrill whistle is the only means at present of alerting the elevator from up to bottom, or vice versa.

Clerk McMillan is busily employed entering up his books preparatory to the next term of the Third District Court.

There will be some more releases from the "pen" shortly.

The deputy marshals are having quite a holiday. Arrests just now are few and far between.

The "artist" who painted the words "Judge's Chambers" in such conspicuous letters on their Honors' private room in the Dooly building should be reminded that he has dipped in employing the possessive singular. The apartment is for the use of all the judges, not one of their number.

Clerk Roahn, having temporarily finished his duties in the Supreme court, devoted a portion of today to the rearrangement of the books on the shelves of the Territorial library. It is sent at a glance that Mr. Roahn is a lover of order.

The grand jury room in the new court quarters is located at the end of the passage leading directly from the Third District court room.

Today Deputy-marshal Dyer returned to the east of duty, having been compelled to lay off since Thursday last by a mild spell of scarlatina.

This time they've got the right man. H. H. Bost (for whom another individual was arrested by mistake in Colorado about three days ago) was arrested in Helena, Mont., and Deputy Sheriff J. Ian Bartlett started after him this morning. Bost is the person who sold a mule for Mr. Stewart and appropriated his horse to his own use. He was arrested by City Marshal Gavin, at Helena, last Sunday, and it said that he accused his sister, who is another in the case, in front of the house. We were that was and how bright a picture is still retained upon the memory of the frightful experience they presented as they surrounded that parent with fifteen gun pointed within a few feet of his head while the chief stood over him with fierce gesticulations and sword drawn. On the agony of my poor blind mother I expected every moment to behold him prostrated a lifeless corpse upon the ground!"

CARELESS USE OF PAPER.

Some Remarks on a Public Evil That Are Applicable to Most Places.

Paper is an article of so small size, of a lightness and almost to the point of volatility, and so cheap that some need it is generally thrown away. In the careless hands of a slovenly people it can become the most disfigured and offensive feature of a city's streets and walks.

In every street of New York there live or pass hundreds or thousands who daily make paper accumulations to the city's unsightliness and filth. Paper falls upon the streets from all quarters, from the doors of homes, private and commercial, and from the hands of thousands of employees who have finished reading their letters, newspapers or handbills, or have taken the wrapping off their parcels. Look up any street in the city, and if it doesn't carry paper marks that should disgraceful people and self respecting community, it is probably because of the necessary tidy machinery following the sweepers.

"No district anywhere, no block even, is free from this form of rubbish. In the cities it is fearful. Men phlegm the streets with as heavy a heap as the spittle, and in back ends and expensively kept, and, in boundless indifference to the public's enjoyment of the park's perfection, toss their paper aside to be scattered by the wind in all directions. Nursery maids sit with children in whole days in the parks, the maids with paper bags or torn book leaves or orange skins. Persons of all sorts of condition, sex and age, scatter their lunch there, and leave their temporary surroundings more like a pauper's than part of the finest and most charming retreat which the skill of man and the generosity of a public spirited city can make.

Children are brought to play in the Central park in organized swarms led by women specially charged with their comfort, and perhaps also at other times with their education, yet under their directed supervision the young fresh lives are permitted to assume an aspect of disorder and untidiness such as would be tolerated in no decent nursery. The quality of our pavements is rapidly rising to the standard indispensable for a really beautiful and tidy finished city, but all in vain if they are to be constantly strewn with paper.

There is no labor required to free New York from this offensive and long standing habit of slovenliness. Only a little care is needed, but it must be general and unflagging.—New York Sun.

The Dove in Mythology.

The Greeks placed in the sun the god of their wisdom and intelligence, and gave him a chariot and four fiery horses—the chariot to symbolize doctrine and the horses intelligences to with their good of the sun. Sometimes the chariot was drawn by horses—the sun to symbolize all scientific knowledge in general, the chariot to symbolize doctrine or science and the horses intelligences. They mythologically described the birth of the sciences by the flying horse Pegasus, which with his hoofs burst open a fountain out of the hard rock, at the moment of his flying from earth to heaven, at which fountain were seven virgins who were the seven sciences.

The flying horse symbolizes an intelligence directed heavenward; the hard rock represents hard matter of fact or sensual knowledge; the fountain springing therefrom represents pure truth where the virgin sciences delight to dwell.—Our Animal Friends.

His Choice of Roses.

It was in a first class carriage on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The talk all the way had been about foot racing. One young fellow had proved so lastily as to what he could do on the cinder track that an old fellow sitting in one corner of the compartment thought he would take it out of the youngster.

"So the can run a bit, can that" he said.

"Aw reckon aw can," was the reply.

"Aw'll tell thi what aw'll do wi' thi. Aw'll race thi for five peawnds if tha'll gi' me a yard start."

"Done; when will tha run?"

"Up a ladder," came the answer, amid roars of laughter.—London Tit-Bits.

Putting Him to Work.

A Scotchman one evening set look lay at some mice. An idea struck him. He decided to set the little mouse at work for him. He was probably a very astonished pair of mice that found themselves a few days later working a small treadmill in a cage like those in which rats and other small animals are kept, but without the slightest idea that they were paying their board in this way. An ordinary mouse would relet over a hundred threads an meter every day, although to do this he has to run 10 miles.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Jay Gould Describes a Bald.

Here is a specimen of style taken from Jay Gould's "History of Delaware County." In speaking of the earliest troubles in Delaware county Mr. Gould often and which twenty years of age describes an attack upon his father's house by a lot of white men disguised as Indians in the following language: "The savage hordes sprang from their lurking places and with demoniac yells fired upon and surrounded the dwelling, who was standing with his little son in the open air in front of the house. We were that was and how bright a picture is still retained upon the memory of the frightful experience they presented as they surrounded that parent with fifteen gun pointed within a few feet of his head while the chief stood over him with fierce gesticulations and sword drawn. On the agony of my poor blind mother I expected every moment to behold him prostrated a lifeless corpse upon the ground!"

Disgusted in Their Consciences.

A good story was told the other day at luncheon by the Bishop of Marlborough. He was he said, about to administer the rite of confirmation to a rural parish, at which many boys and girls presented themselves, not only very sweet adults, smiles. As they were advancing up the aisle, the bishop found himself being nudged in the side by one of the boys. "Tell 'im nothin' at first so he mightn't know because then he mightn't be able to answer. 'What is my name?' 'Surely, my lord,' he said, 'you are not going to confirm these men, why one's the Pooch and shy man and the other is his pal.'"—Kensington Society.

Being the Mark.

First Yankee—You say you saw everything in Rome in three days? That's impossible.

Second Yankee—But you must remember that there was three of us. My wife took all the churches, I visited all the picture galleries and my partner ate up the restaurants and cafes. Then we met in the evening and exchanged experiences.—Exchange.

Street Sentiment in London.

It is puzzling to be told in London that you can get what you are looking for in a store "just down the road," and then to find that the numbers go up on one side of the street and down on the other, as in Tottenham Court road, for instance.—New York Sun.

The practice sometimes indulged in by smokers of washing a meerschaum in hot water, soak or steam it is altogether wrong. It spoils the meerschaum and ruins the color.

To teach a class is as much more inspiring than to teach a single pupil as to play first violin in an orchestra is more inspiring than to perform on the jewsharp.
