WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—Senator Sherman says he has no intention to offer an amendment to the repeal bill for the issue of $100,000,000 bonds to strengthen the gold reserve, at this session. At the regular session, however, he will introduce a bill for that purpose. It is the general opinion that a bond amendment to the present bill would not pass and it might endanger the passage of the bill itself.

Peffer denies that the Populists intend to filibuster against repeal.

Some cable cars are running with the aid of the men who refused to strike and new men received. Sixty men have been discharged in Minneapolis, but no strike has yet resulted.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. Bodlette Makes an Argument Before a Committee.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Bodlette of Washington, who was before the committee on interstate and foreign commerce yesterday advocating his bill for a joint resolution for a committee of six members of the House and the same number of the Senate to go to Nicaragua to investigate everything connected with the canal, made an argument in behalf of the great interests of both sea coasts. He says if the United States does not take speedy action it will soon be found that the agents of British capital in Nicaragua will have made great inroads upon American interests and secured control of all the stock possible for the British holders. He represented that it would be a good thing for both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts if the canal were constructed, as it would bring New York nearer eleven thousand miles nearer San Francisco and avoid the dangers of Cape Horn. Congress, he said, needed personal information which personal investigation only could give.

The expense of sending such a commission to make an investigation need prevent favorable action by the House or committee.

BUSINESS AND MINES.

Intermountain Salt Company Makes Its First Shipment.

NO NEED OF IMPORTING SALT.

Colorado Miners' Strike.—Notes of Business and Mining Topics.

The Intermountain Salt company of this city has just shipped its first carload of salt, the destination being Denver. The company was organized Oct. 1, 1892, with James Jack president, N. W. Clayton vice president and general manager, and I. A. Clayton secretary and treasurer. Work on the plant was begun and a substantial building erected on the east bank of the Jordan River, between South Temple and Fourth South streets. Machinery was placed in, and the largest refined salt factory in the West was completed.

No work was done during the summer, as it was necessary to wait for salt to be gathered in the ponds at the lake. When the rakers started for this, the necessary steps were taken and the mill started on its initial run, which the town has completed.

The process of refining the crude salts is quite simple, yet it is thought it represents profits from the lake is just into a center, from which it emerges as it takes the form in large revolving dryers. There the moisture is removed so that salt will not "cake" when put into the sacks. After passing through the dryers it goes into the mill and is there ground to the requisite fineness.

From the mill it goes on shakes, to be separated into the various grades of marketable salt. Powerful fans are applied during the sieving process, which drive off all the dust of salts, which is caught in a receptacle and converted into extra, to be utilized in making "lick salt" for animals.

The grades of salt made are: dairy, which is most finely ground; next is table salt, then No. 1, medium, and coarse salt. Each of these is sorted out, the proportion of the various grades being regulated according to the demand of the market. About four-fifths of all the manufacture is that called table salt.

There is but little waste in working up the crude salts, rather that is gathered at the ponds. That which the company claims is remarkably clear and free from impurities.

The company's mill has a capacity of turning out thirty tons of marketable salt each day in ten hours. The mill is closed down now, to make some necessary changes in the arrangement of the machinery. While the superintendent of the trial run suggested would be an improvement, Mr. Robert Johnson, the foreman, states that these changes will be completed this week. "Then," said he, "the mill will be started up the beginning of next week, and we hope to keep running regularly thereafter.

Already the company is receiving liberal patronage, and orders are coming in both from local and outside dealers. It is anticipated that it will be necessary to run overtime until the orders are caught up with.

With the salt works now in operation in this city—and there are several—there is no necessity for shipping any salt in from the outside, and Utah people should look on purchasing only the home product. Some shipping is being done of various grades, notably what is known as Liverpool dairy salt, and the claim of superiority has been set up for the latter. It does not deserve it, however, for the Utah salt is the strongest, and a less quantity is needed to fulfill than of the imported article. All through, the Utah salt is the best and cheapest.

STRIKE.

A Lafayette, Colo., dispatch of the 24th says: Excitement over the Lafayette-Louisville strike is running high. A monster mass meeting of the miners of the two towns was held, speeches were made by the men of both towns. The sentiment was unanimous in favor of no work until all back pay is received and a guarantee given that in the future their pay shall be in cash at the mine offices. The meeting then resolved to form a union of all the miners of the northern coal districts. Committees are now at work on the plan. The miners employed by the Citizens' Coal and Coke company sent representatives to the meeting with pledges of their support. They will also demand of the company cash instead of checks. Senator Pearl Lesh would was present and in a heat speech pledged his support to the miners. From general appearances the strike will be a protracted one. Every mine owned by the United Coal company in northern Colorado is closed down. A meeting of miners will be held here Thursday.

Victoria, B. C., dispatch: Warburton Pike has returned to Nanaimo from a trip to the interior of Alaska. He left Victoria a year ago last June in a canoe weighing 700 pounds. He did considerable hunting and visited mining camps now abandoned except by men who go to the love. He followed the Dease river to the junction of the Willard, a tributary of the MacKenzie. He there camped for the first part of the winter. He then followed the Pelly river to its source, traversing a country never before explored, which is worthless except for hunting. He went into the Pelly river country, explored by Dawson, and paddled down the Lewis river struck the Yukon, and going down Kwichim river struck the coast near Fort Alexander, North of the country, he says, is of little value. Very little gold was cleaned this season and few miners average fair wages.

Up to this time the unexpectant were not aware that any other persons were near, but upon observing three dark hunters leaks the motorman, who is possessed of a double barrelled gun, they tailed off as fast as their legs could carry them. Before the dark hunters could catch up they had vanished.

Fish Planting.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 26, 1893.

Editor Deseret News:

It may interest many of your readers to learn that we yesterday planted two thousand catfish in Utah Lake, at the mouth of American Fork creek. These were Bull-heads and it is expected that one-half of them will spawn next season. They were from nine to eight inches long. The Bull-head is a hook and line fish, and attains an average weight of two pounds, is very good eating and quite sanny. It is believed that this plant will within the next eight months produce many thousands of fry as they multiply very rapidly. I obtained these "cats" from Mr. John A. Hill, Mill Creek, in exchange for other kinds of fish I have agreed to obtain for him.

Of the catfish fair is there are a great many species which grow to be from one to five feet long, and attain a weight of from two to one hundred and fifty pounds.

The witnesses to this planting were Mayor James Chipman, John A. Hill, M. D. Ilgas and your correspondent.

I learn from a number of sources that the black bass planted in Utah Lake in November, 1891, are doing quite well. Yours truly,

Respectfully,
A. MILTON MUSSER.

DISTRICT COURT.

A HUSBAND'S DIVORCE SUIT.

Foreclosure Matter and a Decree Granted.—Short Orders by Both Judges.

It was a very uninteresting morning in both divisions of the Third district court, Chief Justice Zane in an almost empty room court with one of two equity matters, only parties actually engaged being present. Judge Hartch got through all he had to do in less than twenty-five minutes and then adjourned court till 2 p. m., at which hour his honor undertook to hear a court motion arising out of a case tried on the previous day. The jurors in waiting were excused till 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

In Judge Zane's court Michael Malone, a native of Ireland, now a resident of this city, was admitted to citizenship.

In the case of the White River Valley Land and Live Stock Co. vs. E. J. Bartsche, the stay was relaxed to twenty days.

Quinn Savings bank vs Albertine Hill et al. Order made appointing L. E. Hall receiver on giving a $500 bond.

SHE LEFT HIM.

Christopher Birkner vs Olga Birkner. This was the husband's suit for divorce on the ground of his wife's desertion. The parties to the suit are Germans and quite young people, the gentlemen being a tinner by trade. The marriage took place at Beatrice, Nebraska, on September 20th, 1889, and in the month of October, 1891, Mrs. Birkner suddenly disappeared, since which time her husband has been hunting of her, to answer to the court Mr. Birkner said he could give no reason whatever for his wife leaving him. They got along "very nice" together, she made no complaint to him, and he always supplied her with a good home and the necessaries of life.

The decree of divorce was granted. A. T. Schroeder was the plaintiff's attorney.

Judge Zane adjourned at 11:15 till tomorrow morning.

Justice Lochrie has fined Mrs. Woodmansee $1 and costs ($12 altogether) for malicious mischief. As stated in these columns a day or two ago, the defendant was charged with cutting loose a horse belonging to E. D. Wells.

It took about five minutes only to dispose of the case of J. W. Farrell vs E. E. Palmer et al., called up in Judge Zane's court late yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff prayed for judgment against the defendants for $[illegible] with eighteen months interest, alleged to be due on an order executed to him by Palmer and accepted by the other defendants. After Farrell had put in his proof, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $[illegible], and this without retiring from the box. The defendant's attorneys did not put in an appearance.

BUREAU FOR UTAH SILK!

It Has Taken Three and Probably Four Prizes at the World's Fair.

"Shuttle for Utah silk" enthusiastically writes Mrs. Hulme-Dallsbury to Mrs. E. B. Wells of this city from Chicago. The writer has good cause to be gratified, as Utah has taken three medals for the best exhibit of silk.

Mrs. Dallsbury speaks in the highest terms of praise of Mrs. Margaret A. Caine and her untiring efforts in giving information to visitors on the silk industry in Utah. Mrs. Caine will speak on sericulture in Utah before a large audience in the Woman's building on Exhibitors' day at the Columbian Exposition.

The beautiful little work entitled Charities and Philanthropies in Utah is highly spoken of by World's Fair visitors and is being widely circulated.
