Sunday-school Meeting in the Assembly Hall at 10 a.m.

House administration in the city wards tomorrow evening.

The News is requested to publish the following:

The Twentieth quorum of Elders will meet in the Council House Monday, third June 26, it is a long distance to travel and some allowance must be made; but will it cause us a "collect" letter and the postal clerk could not find it till he had gone over the passages three times. The receiver of the letter received a notice, which he believes related to this letter, over a month ago and the state clerk then forwarded it and took it off us, so we all probably thought the letter had flying in the snowflies here all the time. Those who have relatives or friends in the army and are anxious to know from them, and such business as the foregoing discovers, is so far prevented by our fault or the fault of it.

Delighted with Salt Lake.

Mrs. C. S. Leslie of Quincy, Ill., made a pleasant call at this office last evening. The lady has been on a visit to the coast and is on her way East. This is her third visit to this city and she stated that she had taken a special delay to Salt Lake, and always made it a point to spend some time in this city. Mrs. Leslie expressed her gratitude to the Denver & Rio Grande, over which she travelled, for the courteous treatment she received. The lady left last evening for her home in the East.

ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Life in the Far-famed Hop Fields of Pleasanton, 37 Miles South of San Francisco.

POLITICS ARE LIVELY IN CALIFORNIA.

The Worship of the Almighty Dollar—A Few Climbs—The Conquerors of Another Dry Winter Dreaded.

Mission, San Jose, Cal., Sept. 21, 1898.
To the Editor:

The writer left Salt Lake City July 8th, arrived in San Francisco July 10th, and left August 1st for the far-famed hop fields of Pleasanton which lies some thirty-seven miles south of San Francisco. We crossed the Oakland ferry and then took the road south over hill and dale for fifteen miles to Haywards. It was a great relief to get out of San Francisco, with its countless dust, cinder and fog, the streams of people wending their way, some to pleasure, others to business, and the ever-recurring sound of rattling, crashing, a haven in one's mind, that San Francisco is a very large city, and in fact I can state that it is the "metropolis" of the whole Pacific coast. Like a crust of bread with a flock of sparrows around it. Like a street, under strain of angle, viewing their a grand orchestra, as San Francisco presents to the mind, the thought, and in fact, the idea of commercial, political and civil life.

On the Pacific coast the political field is very quiescent at present, James H. McNamee of San Francisco is running on the Democratic and Populist tickets for governor, with fair chances of success. Henry T. Gage of Los Angeles is opposed to him for the Republican side. The country is safe with the means, activity and enthusiasm manifest in the coming campaign, and it is remarkable that in this land of fruit, grapes and grapes and grapes, there is not more drunkenness. I have only seen one drunken man since I've been in California. Now is the time to harvest our hops, and it is the time that there is most work in Alameda, Santa Clara and Sonoma counties, where the prunes and grapes ripening in December are harvested now. The country is literally alive with tramps. Country pots must have empirical benefit of them. There are all shades, conditions and manners of men. There are 30,000 of them in California. There are very few Portuguese among them, however, and they make up a large element in the population of California. They are very clannish. Their liberality is not as great as that of Utah farmers, where we have even though he be a tramp, can go in and sit down to a "feast". In writing this from Mission, San Jose, Santa Clara county, I was coming into town with a spade on my shoulder, when I heard some one say, "He's not a professional tramp, he's carrying a spade." It was often observed to me, that humility was the greatest word in the English language. Through the Apostle Paul says, faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

"Hark, the voice of Jesus crying,
"Who will go and work today.
"Fields are ripe, the harvest waiting,
"Who will go and reap today.
"Long and loud the Master calleth,
"Who will answer gladly saying,
"Here am I, send me."

But to resume our narrative. I arrived in Pleasanton and there found the "City" in mourning, for the recent death of the Pleasanton Hop Co., of which Gen. Davis is superintendent. There was plenty of sorrow, and some of the Brewood, water, etc., as the rumour, we had now had sold, and the butchers and bakers wagon came through the camp every day. So I purchased a tent, and proceeded to make myself comfortable. I erected a tent in the midst of the campers and settled back to thoroughly enjoy the situation. The first evening a dancing platform was erected, and "Mike Smith, the blackbird, we're the daylight Index away." There were stringed instruments and a fife, and I repeat the sight (I am this word advisedly) very well. The soft dulcet tones of the flute followed me for days the night.

The next night I went to Livermore to hear the Mendelssohn, Lillian Beale, and little she was all my fancy had imagination could conjure up. She dressed very simply. A white silk dress handling from the waist down, in organ-like folds, white taffeta, and the simplicity of dress, completing her "look ensemble."

The Chinaman's art is a man for that most domestic, yet most talked about, filthy lucre, the "almighty dollar." They adore it, they worship it, they part its hair in the middle and venerate it. They can detect, at a glance, whether a man has money or not, if not, they "sit down another." The religion of our fathers is not implanted in their hearts. They are selfish to a degree, and all for themselves. It seems that makes the more go, but it is better to "go along" rather than drive at a fifteen pull, you will wear the wagon if you persist in doing the latter. However, a shed is as large as a cathedral, and the larger the denomination in the proportion. In regard to the climate, the temperature is equitable, though they say that it may have another frost, where, as the law, one, it will send everything into a state of "business depression."
